STORM'S AFTERMATH — Two members of a family in Burnet, Tex., a small community in the central section of the state, survey damage caused shortly before dawn today when a tornado hit. More than 200 homes in the community of 3,200 were damaged. A funnel also dropped down on the community of Hubbard, also in the central part of the state, killing at least four persons.

Tornadoes Rip Into Texas, Killing Four

Town Of 1,500 Is The Hardest Hit

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Tornadoes and heavy rain swept across the heart of Texas early today tearing through half a dozen towns, killing at least four persons, injuring nearly 100 and causing more than $3 million in damages.

Hardest hit was Hubbard, a town of 1,500 in the black farmland 25 miles northeast of Waco. A 6-year-old boy and three farm laborers were killed when the tornado hit the area befre dawn. Eighty persons were injured, many of them hospitalized in Waco.

A second tornado slashed through Burnet in the Texas hill country, swirling out of a predawn downpour and roaring down State Highway 29. At least 10 persons were injred there but no deaths were reported. The winds caused an estimated $2.5 million damages to the town of 3,200 persons.

National Guard units were dispatched to both towns along with Army personnel from Fort Hood almost midway between.

Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex., asked that President Nixon send a federal survey team to see if federal assistance was required.

Another twister hit Trading House Creek, a small community near Waco. Two persons were injured and hospitalized. Several homes were damaged. Seven persons were injured in a tornado north of San Angelo in west Texas.

Tornadoes also hit Willow Springs on the Oklahoma border, near Cleburne south of Dallas, and at Paris in northeast Texas. No injuries were reported in those towns though a number of buildings were destroyed.

Shortly after daybreak, the National Weather Service reported snow falling near Kermit in far west Texas near the New Mexico corner. The flakes melted immediately, but high winds and deep snow in the nearby Guadalupe pass made travel there impossible.

The Department of Public Safety in Austin said the small towns in the Waco area had been sealed off to visitors and emergency aid was on the way.

Charles Pdelka of Mart, near Waco, said it was raining when he awoke about 6 a.m.

"I had just got up and all of a sudden a big hole appeared in the side of my house. The whole side of my house blew out," he said.

The DPS first reported 65 injured at Hubbard with only one dead but that report quickly increased.

At Burnet, the damage was high but human injury was slight.

"The good Lord was good to us fatality-wise," said John Hoover, owner of a lumberyard in Burnet. He estimated damage there at $2.5 million.

The Burnet tornado hit on the southwestern outskirts of the town on State 29 and moved 1.5 miles through the city crossing the intersection of U.S. 281 and catching the corner of the square knocking out all the windows in the Burnet County courthouse.

The twister then turned left toward the northeast and headed into a residential area.

Seleta Barton, an elderly lady dressed in a red robe, stood in the rubble of her home a block off State 29. A small American flag protruded from the debris in her front yard.

"I was sleeping in the front bedroom," she saaid. "The wooden headboard fell across my face and saved my life. It hit suddenly. It was just a few seconds of complete demolition.

"After about 30 minutes of struggling I got out. I knew the bedroom was demolished and walked into the hallway. I could see everything was gone.

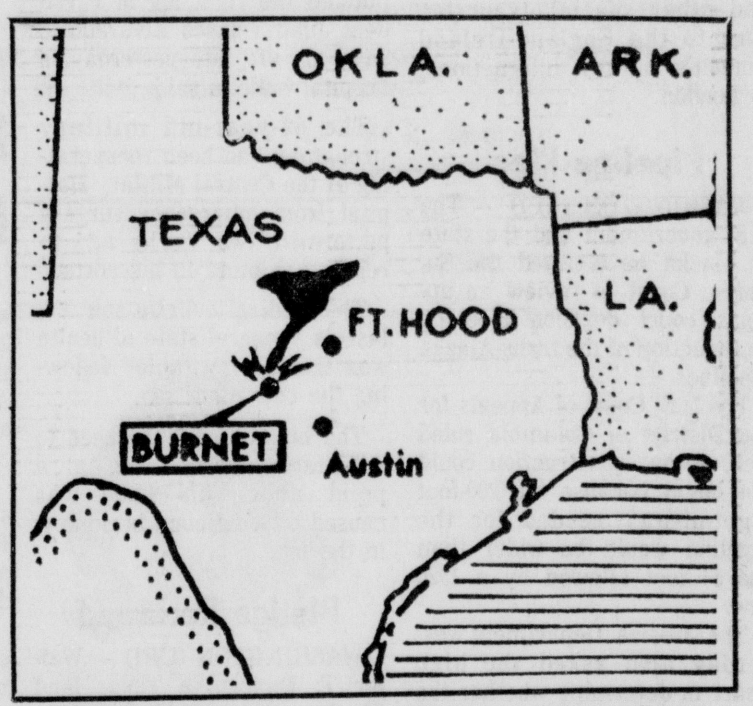
"I consider myself lucky."

Only the interior walls of her home were left standing. Mrs. Barton looked across State 29 to where her small yellow and white cat hid under a trailer.

"Oh, he's alive," she said.

Nearly every building on the square was damaged along with about 15 businesses along State 29.

An estimated 300 homes were damaged in the residential area and the roof was taken off a brick schoolhouse.



STORM LOCATION — The blacked in area shows where a tornado hit before dawn this morning in Texas. It was one in a series of twisters which left four persons dead and damage in the millions.

FOR FEDERAL CRIMES

Nixon Asks Death Penalty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said today he will ask Congress to restore the death penalty for federal crimes, including murder and treason and to impose tougher punishment for drug traffickers.

Attacking "soft-headed judges and probation officers," Nixon told a nationwide radio audience he also will propose next week legislation revising the entire Federal Criminal Code.

The new code "will give us tougher penalties and stronger weapons in the war against dangerous drugs and organized crime," he said.

Taking a stringent law and order stance, Nixon said he would require life imprisonment without parole for offenders with a previous conviction for a drug felony. He also would increase minimum sentences, substantially raise fines and "restrict the absurd use of the insanity defense."

"At my direction, the Attorney General has drafted a statute consistent with the Supreme Court's recnt decision on the death penalty," Nixon said. "This statute will provide capital punishment for cases of murder over which the Federal government has jurisdiction, and for treason and other war-related crimes."

The high court ruled that the death penalty is unconstitutional as it is being applied in most cases under federal and state jurisdiction.

"Contrary to the views of some social theorists," he said, "I am convinced that the death penalty can be an effective deterrent against specific crimes. The death penalty is not a deterrent so long as there is a doubt whether it can be applied. The law I will propose will remove this doubt."

Calling for rapid action by Congress, Nixon added "the potential criminal will know that if his intended victim dies, he may also die. The hijacker, the kidnaper, the man who throws a fire bomb, the convict who attacks a prison guard, the person who assaults an officer of the law, all will know that they may pay with their own lives for any lives that they take."

He also repeated his strong opposition to the legalization of marijuana. "There must continue to be criminal sanctions against the possession, sale or use of marijuana," he said.

But it was against the heroin pushers that Nixon sought tough penalties. "We have already made encouraging progress in the war against drug abuse. Now we must consolidate that progress and strike even harder."

He said his proposals will require federal judges "to consider the danger to the community before freeing on bail a suspect for heroin trafficking."

The overhauled criminal code also will require a minimum sentence of five years in prison for anyone convicted of selling heroin, and a minimum sentence of 10 years to life imprisonment for major traffickers in drugs.

"This is tough legislation," he admitted, "but we must sette for nothing less. The time has come for soft-headed judges and probation officers to show as much concern for the rights of innocent victims of crime as they do for the rights of convicted criminals."

He said aw enforcement alone will not cure the problem of drug abuse, explaining two-thirds of his anti-narcotics budget is alloted to treatment, rehabilitation and research.

"By providing drug offenders with every possible opportunity to get out of the drug culture," he maintained, "we feel no compunction about applying the most stringent sanctions against those who commit crimes in order to feed their habits."

Nixon said the "senseless shooting" of Mississippi Senator John Stennis "gave tragic emphasis to the fact that there is still a high risk of crime on our nation's streets.

"These acts of violence are a

Release Seen Wednesday For More U.S. Prisoners

SAIGON (UPI) — The next group of American prisoners is tentatively scheduled to be released next Wednesday, sources said today, even though the Viet Cong canceled the release of 250 South Vietnamese soldiers because of government military action.

Capt. Phuong Nam, a Viet Cong press officer, said earlier the prisoner subcommission of the four-party Joint Military Commission (JMC) agreed to release an expected 137 Americans next Wednesday, but the move still needed to be approved by the delegation chiefs.

Nam said later that the Viet Cong canceled the release of 200 South Vietnamese prisoners at Duc Pho, 307 miles northeast of Saigon, and 50 soldiers at Tam Ky, 33 miles farther north.

He said the decision was made because of South Vietnamese military action in the area between Duc Pho and Mo Duc, three miles farther north.

Nam said the South Vietnamese carried out an artillery attack in the Mo Duc-Duc Pho area last Sunday and were preparing for a large operation on Friday.

Asked if the decision would affect the scheduled release of the Americans, Nam said : "Lt. Gen. (Trang Van) Tra (chief of the Provisional Revolutionary Government delegation to the JMC) did not make anything clear on that point."

Vietnamese sources said the Communists turned over 170 of a scheduled 200 prisoners at Bong Son, about 315 miles northeast of Saigon. The sources said the other 30 prisoners were not turned over because they are civilians.

The sources said the South Vietnamese returned 400 of a scheduled 500 prisoners at Bong Son. No reason was given for the oter 100 not being returned.

A U.S. spokesman reported after the JMC subcommission meeting that the delegates agreed to follow the Paris agreement schedule for the next release of American prisoners, but did not set a specific date.

"At the subcommission meeting today the American delegation was not given this information (a specific date) but the Provisional Revolutionary Gov-

IRA Says 'Hotheads' Planted The Bombs

LONDON (UPI) — A band of young Irish Republican Army (IRA) "hotheads" planted the bombs that blew up in downtown London without the permission or knowledge of the IRA leadership, a senior member of the IRA said today.

One person was killed and 259 others were injured in the blasts. Ten persons were being questioned by police.

The IRA source, a staff officer in the IRA Belfast brigade, said Joe Cahill and Seamus Twomey, two of the top men in the IRA, were conducting an investigation into the incident.

"It (the bombings) was obviously done by young hotheads in our organization, but they did not tell us about it," he said.

Police Commissioner James Page said today the evacuation of the Old Bailey Criminal Court, where the most serious blast occurred, was delayed almost a quarter of an hour by a police error. The other bomb exploded about 200 yards off Trafalgar Square after most buildings in the area had been cleared.

Page told a news conference the policeman taking down the license numbers of the cars by telephone was distracted by outside noise and wrote the car was "in the city," a name applied to the London financial district, rather than specifically in front of the Old Bailey.

"Immediate action was taken and police started searching throughout the city for the

ANNUAL SPRING GARDEN SPECIAL

It is that time of the year when Marinites begin to feel the urge to get out into their gardens. And the experience of an unusually wet and confining winter is certain to make them all the more eager this spring to try their hands at growing green and flowering things.

To help them get started in 1973, today's issue of the Independent-Journal's Marin Magazine is its annual special spring gardening edition. Its pages are packed with stories, photographs and advertisements of keen interest to any and all gardeners.

Aid Likely For Three Programs

Local law enforcement, drug abuse and alcoholism treatment programs will receive a federal blessing this year, but money will be scarce for park lands, employment, environmental protection and antipoverty programs.

This was the prediction yesterday of Marin County Administrator John F. Barrows, after an analysis of the multibillion dollar federal budget.

He said he did not think cutbacks in the federal budget will affect Marin as adversely as earlier feared by local officials.

While not citing specific figures, Barrows said a sharp reduction in grants for county park lands is expected, as well as cutbacks in employment, environmental protection and antipoverty programs.

Federal funds available to the county will increase generally in the areas of law enforcement, drug abuse and alcoholism treatment programs, he added.

Welfare allocations, which have been up in the air for eight months, were not included in his review. County officials have estimated a federal welfare deficit to the county of between $66,000 and $850,000.

Barrows said federal planning grants, such as those used for developing master plans, will continue but will be placed under state control. There probably will be no loss to the county, he said.

New mental health staffing grants will be eliminated and emergency employment act funds (created in 1971 to provide jobs) will be phased out next year. The Neighborhood Youth Corps' summer jobs program will not be funded this year, he predicted.

Transportation funding will be changed but appropriations to Marin will be about the same as this year.

"A substantial reduction in solid waste (recycling) grants will adversely affect the proposal for a solid waste planning study for Marin County," he said.

The county had hoped for federal assistance in a $25,000 recycling study but was told last month not even to bother forwarding paperwork since funds were frozen.

Barrows said that sewers and sewage treatment construction grants, while not a direct concern to county government, "will be held at a level below that appropriated by congress last year."

This, he continued, would have some effect on sanitary districts which are planning new sewer lines and treatment plants.

The Head Start preschool program will continue to receive its previous level of funding, he said, even though its parent agency, Community Action Marin, will be cut off from federal funds.

The county's senior citizens program, promised $14,000 by federal officials, will be unaffected, he said.

Barrows differed with some Legal Aid Society officials, who fear no federal money and said his reading of the budget indicated continued funding.

Barrows added that many programs slated for reduction or elimination will be replaced by "block grants" to the states, which in turn will decide how best to use the funds.

Drake, College Of Marin Basketball Teams Defeated

Drake High School and College of Marin were defeated in semifinal games last night, and will play for third place this evening in their respective basketball tournaments.

Drake fell to defending champion San Joaquin Memorial of Fresno, 61-56, in the Tournament of Champions at the Oakland Coliseum Arena, and will play Salesian of Richmond at 6:30 p.m.

College of Marin lost to tournament favorite Compton Junior College, 90-65, in the California Junior College Championships in Ventura, and will meet City College of San Francisco at 5 p.m. today.

ELEVATOR AT TOLL BUILDING THROWS A FIT

The normally snailish elevator in the Golden Gate Bridge District's administration building had a lunchtime fit yesterday.

Two passengers summoned it from the basement to the second floor, but when it got to them it did an about face and crashed to the basement. Luckily, it did not open its doors first to admit the two visitors to the Toll Plaza building.

District officials reported sadly that the elevator was "bleeding hydraulic fluid all over the basement floor."

Damage was confined to the elevator.

Nine Children Perish In Blaze

AUTMONT, France (UPI) — Fire raced through a two-story brick home near the Franco-Belgian border today, killing nine children, firemen said.

Authorities said the 15-member of the Gilbert Gauchet family were asleep at their home in the village of Neufmesnil when the pre-dawn blaze began.

"The children started to cry and the mother woke up," Neufmesnil Mayor Carlos Jeuffroy said.

He said the parents and two young children sleeping on the ground floor were able to escape the flames. An 18-year-old and a 19-year-old on the second floor also got out, he said.

STORM'S AFTERMATH — Two members of a family in Burnet, Tex., a small community in the central section of the state, survey damage caused shortly before dawn today when a tornado hit. More than 200 homes in the community of 3,200 were damaged. A funnel also dropped down on the community of Hubbard, also in the central part of the state, killing at least four persons.

Tornadoes Rip Into Texas, Killing Four

Town Of 1,500 Is The Hardest Hit

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Tornadoes and heavy rain swept across the heart of Texas early today tearing through half a dozen towns, killing at least four persons, injuring nearly 100 and causing more than $3 million in damages.

Hardest hit was Hubbard, a town of 1,500 in the black farmland 25 miles northeast of Waco. A 6-year-old boy and three farm laborers were killed when the tornado hit the area befre dawn. Eighty persons were injured, many of them hospitalized in Waco.

A second tornado slashed through Burnet in the Texas hill country, swirling out of a predawn downpour and roaring down State Highway 29. At least 10 persons were injred there but no deaths were reported. The winds caused an estimated $2.5 million damages to the town of 3,200 persons.

National Guard units were dispatched to both towns along with Army personnel from Fort Hood almost midway between.

Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex., asked that President Nixon send a federal survey team to see if federal assistance was required.

Another twister hit Trading House Creek, a small community near Waco. Two persons were injured and hospitalized. Several homes were damaged. Seven persons were injured in a tornado north of San Angelo in west Texas.

Tornadoes also hit Willow Springs on the Oklahoma border, near Cleburne south of Dallas, and at Paris in northeast Texas. No injuries were reported in those towns though a number of buildings were destroyed.

Shortly after daybreak, the National Weather Service reported snow falling near Kermit in far west Texas near the New Mexico corner. The flakes melted immediately, but high winds and deep snow in the nearby Guadalupe pass made travel there impossible.

The Department of Public Safety in Austin said the small towns in the Waco area had been sealed off to visitors and emergency aid was on the way.

Charles Pdelka of Mart, near Waco, said it was raining when he awoke about 6 a.m.

"I had just got up and all of a sudden a big hole appeared in the side of my house. The whole side of my house blew out," he said.

The DPS first reported 65 injured at Hubbard with only one dead but that report quickly increased.

At Burnet, the damage was high but human injury was slight.

"The good Lord was good to us fatality-wise," said John Hoover, owner of a lumberyard in Burnet. He estimated damage there at $2.5 million.

The Burnet tornado hit on the southwestern outskirts of the town on State 29 and moved 1.5 miles through the city crossing the intersection of U.S. 281 and catching the corner of the square knocking out all the windows in the Burnet County courthouse.

The twister then turned left toward the northeast and headed into a residential area.

Seleta Barton, an elderly lady dressed in a red robe, stood in the rubble of her home a block off State 29. A small American flag protruded from the debris in her front yard.

"I was sleeping in the front bedroom," she saaid. "The wooden headboard fell across my face and saved my life. It hit suddenly. It was just a few seconds of complete demolition.

"After about 30 minutes of struggling I got out. I knew the bedroom was demolished and walked into the hallway. I could see everything was gone.

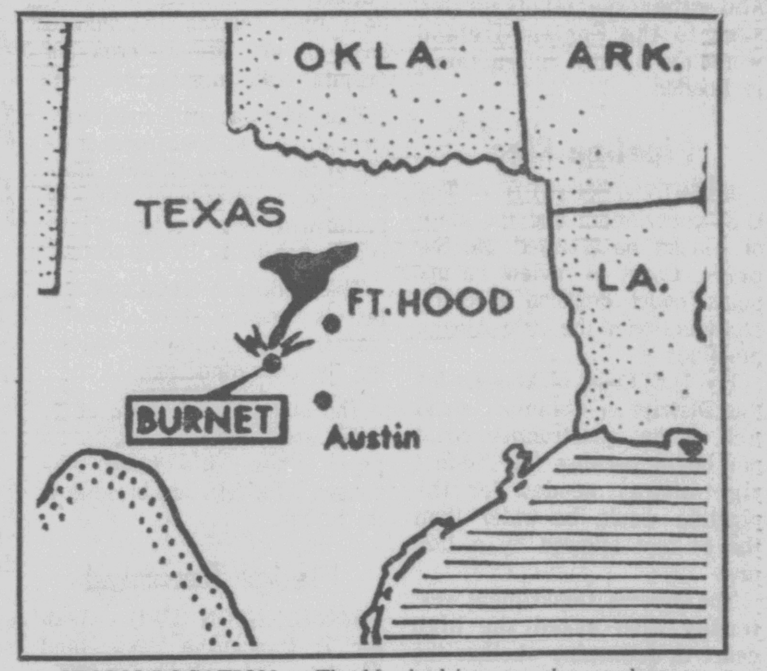
"I consider myself lucky."

Only the interior walls of her home were left standing. Mrs. Barton looked across State 29 to where her small yellow and white cat hid under a trailer.

"Oh, he's alive," she said.

Nearly every building on the square was damaged along with about 15 businesses along State 29.

An estimated 300 homes were damaged in the residential area and the roof was taken off a brick schoolhouse.



STORM LOCATION — The blacked in area shows where a tornado hit before dawn this morning in Texas. It was one in a series of twisters which left four persons dead and damage in the millions.

FOR FEDERAL CRIMES

Nixon Asks Death Penalty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said today he will ask Congress to restore the death penalty for federal crimes, including murder and treason and to impose tougher punishment for drug traffickers.

Attacking "soft-headed judges and probation officers," Nixon told a nationwide radio audience he also will propose next week legislation revising the entire Federal Criminal Code.

The new code "will give us tougher penalties and stronger weapons in the war against dangerous drugs and organized crime," he said.

Taking a stringent law and order stance, Nixon said he would require life imprisonment without parole for offenders with a previous conviction for a drug felony. He also would increase minimum sentences, substantially raise fines and "restrict the absurd use of the insanity defense."

"At my direction, the Attorney General has drafted a statute consistent with the Supreme Court's recnt decision on the death penalty," Nixon said. "This statute will provide capital punishment for cases of murder over which the Federal government has jurisdiction, and for treason and other war-related crimes."

The high court ruled that the death penalty is unconstitutional as it is being applied in most cases under federal and state jurisdiction.

"Contrary to the views of some social theorists," he said, "I am convinced that the death penalty can be an effective deterrent against specific crimes. The death penalty is not a deterrent so long as there is a doubt whether it can be applied. The law I will propose will remove this doubt."

Calling for rapid action by Congress, Nixon added "the potential criminal will know that if his intended victim dies, he may also die. The hijacker, the kidnaper, the man who throws a fire bomb, the convict who attacks a prison guard, the person who assaults an officer of the law, all will know that they may pay with their own lives for any lives that they take."

He also repeated his strong opposition to the legalization of marijuana. "There must continue to be criminal sanctions against the possession, sale or use of marijuana," he said.

But it was against the heroin pushers that Nixon sought tough penalties. "We have already made encouraging progress in the war against drug abuse. Now we must consolidate that progress and strike even harder."

He said his proposals will require federal judges "to consider the danger to the community before freeing on bail a suspect for heroin trafficking."

The overhauled criminal code also will require a minimum sentence of five years in prison for anyone convicted of selling heroin, and a minimum sentence of 10 years to life imprisonment for major traffickers in drugs.

"This is tough legislation," he admitted, "but we must sette for nothing less. The time has come for soft-headed judges and probation officers to show as much concern for the rights of innocent victims of crime as they do for the rights of convicted criminals."

He said aw enforcement alone will not cure the problem of drug abuse, explaining two-thirds of his anti-narcotics budget is alloted to treatment, rehabilitation and research.

"By providing drug offenders with every possible opportunity to get out of the drug culture," he maintained, "we feel no compunction about applying the most stringent sanctions against those who commit crimes in order to feed their habits."

Nixon said the "senseless shooting" of Mississippi Senator John Stennis "gave tragic emphasis to the fact that there is still a high risk of crime on our nation's streets.

"These acts of violence are a

Release Seen Wednesday For More U.S. Prisoners

SAIGON (UPI) — The next group of American prisoners is tentatively scheduled to be released next Wednesday, sources said today, even though the Viet Cong canceled the release of 250 South Vietnamese soldiers because of government military action.

Capt. Phuong Nam, a Viet Cong press officer, said earlier the prisoner subcommission of the four-party Joint Military Commission (JMC) agreed to release an expected 137 Americans next Wednesday, but the move still needed to be approved by the delegation chiefs.

Nam said later that the Viet Cong canceled the release of 200 South Vietnamese prisoners at Duc Pho, 307 miles northeast of Saigon, and 50 soldiers at Tam Ky, 33 miles farther north.

He said the decision was made because of South Vietnamese military action in the area between Duc Pho and Mo Duc, three miles farther north.

Nam said the South Vietnamese carried out an artillery attack in the Mo Duc-Duc Pho area last Sunday and were preparing for a large operation on Friday.

Asked if the decision would affect the scheduled release of the Americans, Nam said : "Lt. Gen. (Trang Van) Tra (chief of the Provisional Revolutionary Government delegation to the JMC) did not make anything clear on that point."

Vietnamese sources said the Communists turned over 170 of a scheduled 200 prisoners at Bong Son, about 315 miles northeast of Saigon. The sources said the other 30 prisoners were not turned over because they are civilians.

The sources said the South Vietnamese returned 400 of a scheduled 500 prisoners at Bong Son. No reason was given for the oter 100 not being returned.

A U.S. spokesman reported after the JMC subcommission meeting that the delegates agreed to follow the Paris agreement schedule for the next release of American prisoners, but did not set a specific date.

"At the subcommission meeting today the American delegation was not given this information (a specific date) but the Provisional Revolutionary Gov-

IRA Says 'Hotheads' Planted The Bombs

LONDON (UPI) — A band of young Irish Republican Army (IRA) "hotheads" planted the bombs that blew up in downtown London without the permission or knowledge of the IRA leadership, a senior member of the IRA said today.

One person was killed and 259 others were injured in the blasts. Ten persons were being questioned by police.

The IRA source, a staff officer in the IRA Belfast brigade, said Joe Cahill and Seamus Twomey, two of the top men in the IRA, were conducting an investigation into the incident.

"It (the bombings) was obviously done by young hotheads in our organization, but they did not tell us about it," he said.

Police Commissioner James Page said today the evacuation of the Old Bailey Criminal Court, where the most serious blast occurred, was delayed almost a quarter of an hour by a police error. The other bomb exploded about 200 yards off Trafalgar Square after most buildings in the area had been cleared.

Page told a news conference the policeman taking down the license numbers of the cars by telephone was distracted by outside noise and wrote the car was "in the city," a name applied to the London financial district, rather than specifically in front of the Old Bailey.

"Immediate action was taken and police started searching throughout the city for the

Drake, College Of Marin Basketball Teams Defeated

Drake High School and College of Marin were defeated in semifinal games last night, and will play for third place this evening in their respective basketball tournaments.

Drake fell to defending champion San Joaquin Memorial of Fresno, 61-56, in the Tournament of Champions at the Oakland Coliseum Arena, and will play Salesian of Richmond at 6:30 p.m.

College of Marin lost to tournament favorite Compton Junior College, 90-65, in the California Junior College Championships in Ventura, and will meet City College of San Francisco at 5 p.m. today.

ELEVATOR AT TOLL BUILDING THROWS A FIT

The normally snailish elevator in the Golden Gate Bridge District's administration building had a lunchtime fit yesterday.

Two passengers summoned it from the basement to the second floor, but when it got to them it did an about face and crashed to the basement. Luckily, it did not open its doors first to admit the two visitors to the Toll Plaza building.

District officials reported sadly that the elevator was "bleeding hydraulic fluid all over the basement floor."

Damage was confined to the elevator.

Nine Children Perish In Blaze

AUTMONT, France (UPI) — Fire raced through a two-story brick home near the Franco-Belgian border today, killing nine children, firemen said.

Authorities said the 15-member of the Gilbert Gauchet family were asleep at their home in the village of Neufmesnil when the pre-dawn blaze began.

"The children started to cry and the mother woke up," Neufmesnil Mayor Carlos Jeuffroy said.

He said the parents and two young children sleeping on the ground floor were able to escape the flames. An 18-year-old and a 19-year-old on the second floor also got out, he said.

Aid Likely For Three Programs

Local law enforcement, drug abuse and alcoholism treatment programs will receive a federal blessing this year, but money will be scarce for park lands, employment, environmental protection and antipoverty-programs.

This was the prediction yesterday of Marin County Administrator John F. Barrows, after an analysis of the multibillion dollar federal budget.

He said he did not think cutbacks in the federal budget will affect Marin as adversely as earlier feared by local officials.

While not citing specific figures, Barrows said a sharp reduction in grants for county park lands is expected, as well as cutbacks in employment, environmental protection and antipoverty programs.

Federal funds available to the county will increase generally in the areas of law enforcement, drug abuse and alcoholism treatment programs, he added.

Welfare allocations, which have been up in the air for eight months, were not included in his review. County officials have estimated a federal welfare deficit to the county of between $66,000 and $850,000.

Barrows said federal planning grants, such as those used for developing master plans, will continue but will be placed under state control. There probably will be no loss to the county, he said.

New mental health staffing grants will be eliminated and emergency employment act funds (created in 1971 to provide jobs) will be phased out next year. The Neighborhood Youth Corps' summer jobs program will not be funded this year, he predicted.

Transportation funding will be changed but appropriations to Marin will be about the same as this year.

"A substantial reduction in solid waste (recycling) grants will adversely affect the proposal for a solid waste planning study for Marin County," he said.

The county had hoped for federal assistance in a $25,000 recycling study but was told last month not even to bother forwarding paperwork since funds were frozen.

Barrows said that sewers and sewage treatment construction grants, while not a direct concern to county government, "will be held at a level below that appropriated by congress last year."

This, he continued, would have some effect on sanitary districts which are planning new sewer lines and treatment plants.

The Head Start preschool program will continue to receive its previous level of funding, he said, even though its parent agency, Community Action Marin, will be cut off from federal funds.

The county's senior citizens program, promised $14,000 by federal officials, will be unaffected, he said.

Barrows differed with some Legal Aid Society officials, who fear no federal money and said his reading of the budget indicated continued funding.

Barrows added that many programs slated for reduction or elimination will be replaced by "block grants" to the states, which in turn will decide how best to use the funds.

Strikes In Britain

LONDON (UPI) — Railway, hospital and gasmen's strikes disrupted Britain again today despite a warning by Prime Minister Edward Heath that strikers will not be "a penny richer."

Walkouts and general noncooperation by locomotive engineers on the eve of another one-day nationwide strike Sunday forced cancellation of hundreds of trains. Sunday's rail stoppage will be the third in three weeks.

One group particularly hard hit was the nation's sports fans. British rail called off dozens of "soccer special" trains taking fans to football matches today and other special excursion runs to the England-Ireland women's hockey international in London.

Pipeline Plea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government and the state of Alaska have asked the Supreme Court to review an appeals court decision blocking construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled Feb. 9 that construction could not begin because the 200-foot right-of-way needed for the pipeline would be wider than the 54 feet allowed by a 1920 law.

The Justice Department yesterday also asked the high court to determine whether the Interior Department had met environmental impact requirements in approving the project.

Strike Averted

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — A major strike in the lucrative gambling resort industry was averted early today when negotiators for 17 gambling spas and the powerful Culinary and Bartenders Union announced agreement on a new three-year contract.

Al Bramlet, secretary-treasurer of Culinary Union Local 226, and Jack Stafford, secretary treasurer of Bartenders Local 165, said after a 12-hour negotiating session they would strongly recommend their 14,000 members ratify their contract.

Terms of the agreement were not announced, pending its presentation to the members sometime next week.

Leg Amputated

LIMA (UPI) — Surgeons amputated the right leg of President Juan Velasco Alvarado to save his life late yesterday, a hospital bulletin said.

The 62-year-old military strongman had been recuperating at the Central Military Hospital from emergency surgery performed two weeks ago to repair a rupture in his aorta.

The medical bulletin said Velasco's "general state of health was frankly favorable" following the operation.

The bulletin said the need to amputate Velasco's leg at a point above his knee was caused by a deficient blood flow in the leg.

Pledge Returned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Walter T. Duncan, a Texas land developer who pledged a $305,000 contribution to President Nixon's reelection effort, has received the money back after he ran into serious financial problems.

DeVan Shumway, an official to the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, released a letter Friday dated Jan. 31 from Duncan which requested the committee to "forego payment of this note and return it to me."

In the letter, Duncan, of Bryan, Tex., said he would be unable to pay the promissory note when it came due Feb. 20 because of "other obligations which are pressing at this time."

Ties To Peking

MADRID (UPI) — Spain and China signed an agreement Friday setting up diplomatic relations and severing Madrid's ties with Taiwan.

The agreement meant that Taiwan has lost one of its last European friends. Relations between Madrid and Taipei had been warm to the end, and the 450 Nationalist Chinese living in Spain have even been running their own college.

Political sources said Generalissimo Francisco Franco was forced to switch diplomatic recognition from the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to Peking because of changing world political realities and pressing trade interests.

Pompidou Addresses France On Election

PARIS (UPI) — President Georges Pompidou told the French people today they will lose their freedom and cut France off from her allies if they vote for a Socialist-Communist government tomorrow.

In an eleventh hour television and radio broadcast address to the nation, Pompidou said the choice is between "a society which suppresses individual liberties ... and a free society with all its imperfections."

"Inevitably," he said, "France would be condemned to cut herself off from her allies and to cease active participation in the true construction of Europe."

Pompidou addressed the nation less than 24 hours before Frenchmen vote Sunday for the second time in two weeks—this time in nationwide runoff ballots that will decide whether Communists return to government in France for the first time in 26 years.

Pompidou spoke for about five minutes, seated at his desk in the Elysee Palace. He looked sternly into the televsion camera without smiling once.

He closed with an earnest warning to France's voters to "think of the consequences."

"The choice," Pompidou said, "is simple."

"On the one side there is Marxist Communism and the allies it has obtained. On the other side there is everyone else."

"On the one hand," he continued, "there is a society which ignores or which suppresses individual liberties, political freedom, the right to hold property and which submits everyone's life to the authority of a totalitarian party and administration."

"On the other hand," Pompidou said, "there is a free society—admittedly with its undeniable imperfections and its injustices but which respects the rights of the individual and which allows everyone ... to remain master of his life and fate as far as possible."

"In the first case," Pompidou warned, "it is obvious France would be condemned to cut herself off from her allies and and to cease active participation in the true construction of Europe which, difficult as it is, remains our best chance of ensuring our independence and preserving our prosperity. As we note at the moment, it is the only means of defending our money and full employment."

Pompidou spoke as the election campaign closed. It had been one of the bitterest in recent French history, though marked by an almost total lack of violence. Pompidou himself is a Gaullist and successor to the late President Charles de Gaulle.

He said recently in the event of a Left-wing victory he would refuse to name a Socialist or Communist prime minister, even if this sparked a major constitutional crisis.

Australia Registers Earthquakes

SYDNEY (UPI) — Damage was being surveyed today following a pair of moderately strong earthquakes that struck Australia's New South Wales area southwest of Sydney in the early morning.

The tremors, the first measuring 5.5 on the open-ended Richter scale, began shortly after 5 a.m. (5 p.m. EST yesterday).

Police said there was widespread damage but there were no reported injuries.

Blackouts occurred in suburban and country areas as power transformers automatically cut off. Windows were shattered and a number of homes were moved off their foundations while some multiunit apartment buildings developed cracks in their walls.

The director of the Riverview College Observatory in Sydney, Dr. Laurence Drake, said Sydney could experience further small tremors over the next few days.

Within minutes of the tremors, telephone switchboards were jammed with calls and thousands of people swarmed into the streets as their homes shook and rumblings were heard.

A seismologist at the Australian National University in Canberra said he believed the tremor originated about 45 miles southwest of Sydney.

TWO FLIERS ALSO

China Will Release CIA Agent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An American CIA agent, held prisoner in China for 20 years, and two U.S. fliers captured by the Chinese during the Vietnam war will be released next week, signaling a favorable turn in U.S.-Chinese relations.

The White House said yesterday that President Nixon had appealed directly to Chinese Prime Minister Chou En-lai to free the agent, John T. Downey, 42. Downey's 75-year-old mother, Mrs. Mary V. Downey, of Hartford, Conn., is critically ill in a hospital.

Downey, whose imprisonment spanned both the Korean and Vietnam wars, will be set free at the China-Hong Kong border Monday.

Air Force Maj. Philip E. Smith, 38, of Roodhouse, Ill., and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Robert J. Flynn, 35, of Houston, Minn., will be released at the same border Thursday. Both went down in Chinese territory while flying Vietnam war missions—Smith on Sept. 20, 1965 and Flynn on Aug. 21, 1967.

China quickly granted Nixon's appeal and it has been interpreted by U.S. diplomats as a gesture of Peking's interest in improving relations with the United States.

One U.S. diplomatic official said: "It demonstrates the sincerity and warmth on the part of the Chinese in making their relations with the United States as good as possible. It is symbolic of a new period in relations."

Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said the President learned Wednesday of Mrs. Downey's critical condition after a stroke. The President sent word to Chou and got the answer yesterday. Mrs. Downey, semiconscious in a hospital in New Britain, Conn., was not told of the release for fear the excitement would worsen her condition.

Downey was captured in 1952 when his plane landed or went down on the Chinese side of the North Korean border. China made no mention of the incident until 1964 when he was sentenced to life in prison for espionage.

The United States claimed he was a civilian employe of the Army and that his plane was forced down on a flight from Korea to Japan. Then on Jan. 31, President Nixon acknowledged for the first time that Downey's case "involves a CIA agent." Downey's government biography still describes him as an Army employe.

Nixon discussed release of the three prisoners—the last American captives in China—with Chou in Peking last year. His sentence was reduced to five years and his family was allowed to visit him in prison.

Richard Fecteau, of Lynn, Mass., captured with Downey, was sentenced to 20 years but was released Dec. 12.

Smith, whose wife divorced him, remarried and now lives in Georgia, was the pilot of an F104 on patrol over the Tonkin Gulf. He reported mechanical trouble and nothing more was heard from him. He apparently crashed on China's Hainan Island.

Flynn was a crewman on an A6A fighter-bomber from the carrier USS Constellation attacking a railroad yard seven miles north of Hanoi. The plane reported antiaircraft and antimissile fire and pursuing MIGs. It apparently strayed across the China border, was shot down and Flynn parachuted. The other crewman was apparently killed.

Flynn's wife lives in Colorado Spring, Colo. They have two children, ages 6 and 8. There are three Smith children, 10, 8 and 7.

On Feb. 22, after his return from China, Kissinger said the two countries would establish "liaison offices" in each other's country and that "as a sign of good will," the Chinese would release Flynn and Smith.

Californian Is Elevated In HUD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Floyd H. Hyde, 51, of Fresno, Calif., has been chosen by President Nixon to be undersecretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Hyde, a former Fresno mayor, has served as assistant HUD secretary for community development since the Nixon administration took office in 1969. He will succeed Richard C. Van Deusen in the undersecretary post.

Entry Reported To Hardware Store

Corbet's Hardware at 1155 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur, was broken into early yesterday reported Larkspur police.

Patroling officers found the glass front door smashed, and chain saws and power tools inside the store moved. It was not known whether anything was actually taken.

The bulletin said the need to amputate Velasco's leg at a point above his knee was caused by a deficient blood flow in the leg.

Pledge Returned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Walter T. Duncan, a Texas land developer who pledged a $305,000 contribution to President Nixon's reelection effort, has received the money back after he ran into serious financial problems.

DeVan Shumway, an official o the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, released a letter Friday dated Jan. 31 from Duncan which requested the committee to "forego payment of this note and return it to me."

In the letter, Duncan, of Bryan, Tex., said he would be unable to pay the promissory note when it came due Feb. 20 because of "other obligations which are pressing at this time."

Ties To Peking

MADRID (UPI) — Spain and China signed an agreement Friday setting up diplomatic relations and severing Madrid's ties with Taiwan.

The agreement meant that Taiwan has lost one of its last European friends. Relations between Madrid and Taipei had been warm to the end, and the 450 Nationalist Chinese living in Spain have even been running their own college.

Political sources said Generalissimo Francisco Franco was forced to switch diplomatic recognition from the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to Peking because of changing world political realities and pressing trade interests.

Pompidou Addresses France On Election

PARIS (UPI) — President Georges Pompidou told the French people today they will lose their freedom and cut France off from her allies if they vote for a Socialist-Communist government tomorrow.

In an eleventh hour television and radio broadcast address to the nation, Pompidou said the choice is between "a society which suppresses individual liberties ... and a free society with all its imperfections."

"Inevitably," he said, "France would be condemned to cut herself off from her allies and to cease active participation in the true construction of Europe."

Pompidou addressed the nation less than 24 hours before Frenchmen vote Sunday for the second time in two weeks—this time in nationwide runoff ballots that will decide whether Communists return to government in France for the first time in 26 years.

Pompidou spoke for about five minutes, seated at his desk in the Elysee Palace. He looked sternly into the televsion camera without smiling once.

He closed with an earnest warning to France's voters to "think of the consequences."

"The choice," Pompidou said, "is simple."

"On the one side there is Marxist Communism and the allies it has obtained. On the other side there is everyone else."

"On the one hand," he continued, "there is a society which ignores or which suppresses individual liberties, political freedom, the right to hold property and which submits everyone's life to the authority of a totalitarian party and administration."

"On the other hand," Pompidou said, "there is a free society—admittedly with its undeniable imperfections and its injustices but which respects the rights of the individual and which allows everyone ... to remain master of his life and fate as far as possible."

"In the first case," Pompidou warned, "it is obvious France would be condemned to cut herself off from her allies and and to cease active participation in the true construction of Europe which, difficult as it is, remains our best chance of ensuring our independence and preserving our prosperity. As we note at the moment, it is the only means of defending our money and full employment."

Pompidou spoke as the election campaign closed. It had been one of the bitterest in recent French history, though marked by an almost total lack of violence. Pompidou himself is a Gaullist and successor to the late President Charles de Gaulle.

He said recently in the event of a Left-wing victory he would refuse to name a Socialist or Communist prime minister, even if this sparked a major constitutional crisis.

Australia Registers Earthquakes

SYDNEY (UPI) — Damage was being surveyed today following a pair of moderately strong earthquakes that struck Australia's New South Wales area southwest of Sydney in the early morning.

The tremors, the first measuring 5.5 on the open-ended Richter scale, began shortly after 5 a.m. (5 p.m. EST yesterday).

Police said there was widespread damage but there were no reported injuries.

Blackouts occurred in suburban and country areas as power transformers automatically cut off. Windows were shattered and a number of homes were moved off their foundations while some multiunit apartment buildings developed cracks in their walls.

The director of the Riverview College Observatory in Sydney, Dr. Laurence Drake, said Sydney could experience further small tremors over the next few days.

Within minutes of the tremors, telephone switchboards were jammed with calls and thousands of people swarmed into the streets as their homes shook and rumblings were heard.

A seismologist at the Australian National University in Canberra said he believed the tremor originated about 45 miles southwest of Sydney.

TWO FLIERS ALSO

China Will Release CIA Agent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An American CIA agent, held prisoner in China for 20 years, and two U.S. fliers captured by the Chinese during the Vietnam war will be released next week, signaling a favorable turn in U.S.-Chinese relations.

The White House said yesterday that President Nixon had appealed directly to Chinese Prime Minister Chou En-lai to free the agent, John T. Downey, 42. Downey's 75-year-old mother, Mrs. Mary V. Downey, of Hartford, Conn., is critically ill in a hospital.

Downey, whose imprisonment spanned both the Korean and Vietnam wars, will be set free at the China-Hong Kong border Monday.

Air Force Maj. Philip E. Smith, 38, of Roodhouse, Ill., and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Robert J. Flynn, 35, of Houston, Minn., will be released at the same border Thursday. Both went down in Chinese territory while flying Vietnam war missions—Smith on Sept. 20, 1965 and Flynn on Aug. 21, 1967.

China quickly granted Nixon's appeal and it has been interpreted by U.S. diplomats as a gesture of Peking's interest in improving relations with the United States.

One U.S. diplomatic official said: "It demonstrates the sincerity and warmth on the part of the Chinese in making their relations with the United States as good as possible. It is symbolic of a new period in relations."

Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said the President learned Wednesday of Mrs. Downey's critical condition after a stroke. The President sent word to Chou and got the answer yesterday. Mrs. Downey, semiconscious in a hospital in New Britain, Conn., was not told of the release for fear the excitement would worsen her condition.

Downey was captured in 1952 when his plane landed or went down on the Chinese side of the North Korean border. China made no mention of the incident until 1964 when he was sentenced to life in prison for espionage.

The United States claimed he was a civilian employe of the Army and that his plane was forced down on a flight from Korea to Japan. Then on Jan. 31, President Nixon acknowledged for the first time that Downey's case "involves a CIA agent." Downey's government biography still describes him as an Army employe.

Nixon discussed release of the three prisoners—the last American captives in China—with Chou in Peking last year. His sentence was reduced to five years and his family was allowed to visit him in prison.

Richard Fecteau, of Lynn, Mass., captured with Downey, was sentenced to 20 years but was released Dec. 12.

Smith, whose wife divorced him, remarried and now lives in Georgia, was the pilot of an F104 on patrol over the Tonkin Gulf. He reported mechanical trouble and nothing more was heard from him. He apparently crashed on China's Hainan Island.

Flynn was a crewman on an A6A fighter-bomber from the carrier USS Constellation attacking a railroad yard seven miles north of Hanoi. The plane reported antiaircraft and antimissile fire and pursuing MIGs. It apparently strayed across the China border, was shot down and Flynn parachuted. The other crewman was apparently killed.

Flynn's wife lives in Colorado Spring, Colo. They have two children, ages 6 and 8. There are three Smith childreh, 10, 8 and 7.

On Feb. 22, after his return from China, Kissinger said the two countries would establish "liaison offices" in each other's country and that "as a sign of good will," the Chinese would release Flynn and Smith.

Californian Is Elevated In HUD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Floyd H. Hyde, 51, of Fresno, Calif., has been chosen by President Nixon to be undersecretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Hyde, a former Fresno mayor, has served as assistant HUD secretary for community development since the Nixon administration took office in 1969. He will succeed Richard C. Van Deusen in the undersecretary post.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Strikes In Britain

LONDON (UPI) — Railway, hospital and gasmen's strikes disrupted Britain again today despite a warning by Prime Minister Edward Heath that strikers will not be "a penny richer."

Walkouts and general noncooperation by locomotive engineers on the eve of another one-day nationwide strike Sunday forced cancellation of hundreds of trains. Sunday's rail stoppage will be the third in three weeks.

One group particularly hard hit was the nation's sports fans. British rail called off dozens of "soccer special" trains taking fans to football matches today and other special excursion runs to the England-Ireland women's hockey international in London.

Pipeline Plea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government and the state of Alaska have asked the Supreme Court to review an appeals court decision blocking construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled Feb. 9 that construction could not begin because the 200-foot right-of-way needed for the pipeline would be wider than the 54 feet allowed by a 1920 law.

The Justice Department yesterday also asked the high court to determine whether the Interior Department had met environmental impact requirements in approving the project.

Strike Averted

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — A major strike in the lucrative gambling resort industry was averted early today when negotiators for 17 gambling spas and the powerful Culinary and Bartenders Union announced agreement on a new three-year contract.

Al Bramlet, secretary-treasurer of Culinary Union Local 226, and Jack Stafford, secretary treasurer of Bartenders Local 165, said after a 12-hour negotiating session they would strongly recommend their 14,000 members ratify their contract.

Terms of the agreement were not announced, pending its presentation to the members sometime next week.

Leg Amputated

LIMA (UPI) — Surgeons amputated the right leg of President Juan Velasco Alvarado to save his life late yesterday, a hospital bulletin said.

The 62-year-old military strongman had been recuperating at the Central Military Hospital from emergency surgery performed two weeks ago to repair a rupture in his aorta.

The medical bulletin said Velasco's "general state of health was frankly favorable" following the operation.

The bulletin said the need to amputate Velasco's leg at a point above his knee was caused by a deficient blood flow in the leg.

Bundy Sees No Damage From Pentagon Papers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Former presidential right-hand man McGeorge Bundy says disclosure of sections of the Pentagon Papers to a foreign power would not have hurt the United States in 1969.

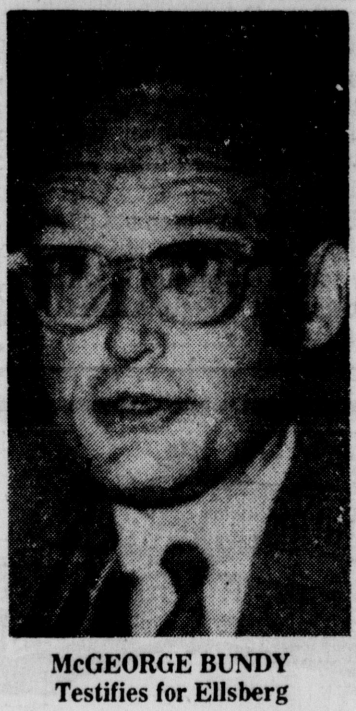
"The North Vietnamese had that kind of information coming out of their ears," Bundy told the jury yesterday at the trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo.

Bundy, who served as special assistant on national security to presidents Kennedy and Johnson, testified for the defense that military information in one top secret document had been made public long before Ellsberg took the papers in 1969.

Two other volumes dealing with U.S.-South Vietnamese relations from 1963 to 1967 were more "a first cut at history" rather than an intelligence report, he said.

Bundy, whose role in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations was similar to the one now played by Henry A. Kissinger, was a principal architect of the U.S. Vietnam war policy as special assistant for national security affairs fro 1961 to 1966. He is now head of the Ford Foundation.

Bundy was asked to give his expert opinion on one volume of the Pentagon Papers involving a report on the 1968 Communist Tet offensive made by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.



McGEORGE BUNDY
Testifies for Ellsberg

He testified that the most important part of the Wheeler report was Gen. William Westmoreland's request for 206,000 additional American troops in Vietnam. Bundy conceded that in February, 1968, the information was highly sensitive.

"Do you have an opinion as to whether release of this document in 1969 (when Ellsberg took the papers) could have been of advantage to a foreign power?" asked defense attorney Charles Nesson.

"Yes. I do not think so," Bundy replied.

"Do you have an opinion as to whether release of this document in 1969 could have injured the United States?"

"Yes. I do not think so."

Bundy told about a White House meeting in March, 1968, in which he and other advisers discussed Vietnam policy and determined that there would not be a large increase in reinforcements-and there was not.

The Wheeler report thus was overtaken by events and would have been little use to a foreign power in 1969, Bundy said.

Moreover, much of the information in the Wheeler report had been declassified by the time Ellsberg took the documents.

He also noted that estimates of enemy strength and casualties, also contained in the Wheeler report, had been made public in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Wheeler himself.

The defense disclosed that its next witness would be Arthur Schlesinger Jr., who was one of the intimates in the top circles of the Kennedy administration.

Status Of Returning POWs Is Taking On Gloomy Aspects

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

One returning prisoner of war is suffering a brain injury. Several more are partially paralyzed or suffering from malnutrition. At least 10 others have wound up in divorce courts instead of the arms of their loving wives.

The status of the POWs, at first flawlessly happy, is taking on some gloomy aspects as medical and marital troubles are revealed. In addition, there were growing indications of poor treatment in captivity as many POWs hinted they would have dismal stories to tell once all the prisoners had been freed.

A spokesman for the Army's Valley Forge General Hospital at Phoenixville, Pa. revealed Friday that seven released POWs are being treated for ailments ranging from partial paralysis in both legs to malnutrition. One soldier, S. Sgt. Gail M. Kerns, of Daniels, W.Va., has an injury to the left side of his brain.

"All returnees stated that they had malaria during captivity," the spokesman said. "None have a fever at the present time and they are presently being studied to determine if they continue to have malaria."

In San Diego, Calif., it was announced that Air Force Maj. Kile Berg, 33, a POW for nearly eight years, is being divorced by his wife, Elizabeth Ann, 30. It was at least the 10th POW divorce to come to light.

Supporters are planning an extravaganza in Dallas to reinforce the nation's welcome home.

James Skinner, half-time director for the Dallas Cowboys pro football team, said the "Dallas Salute," scheduled for June 2 at the Cotton Bowl, will be "pretty large," and added: "I would say it would be of the same stature of those they have in Washington on July 4, in front of the Washington Monument."

Skinner said President Nixon is "aware" of the show and is "highly in favor of it." He said entertainers expected to attend include Bob Hope, Martha Raye and Charley Pride.

In Pensacola, Fla., Army Spec. 5 Frederick W. Crowson returned home to the applause of some 2,000 spectators and a fistful of POW bracelets, and said: "We have a wonderful country and I was proud to serve it."

In Denver, Army CWO Roy E. Ziegler and the boy he'd never seen had a father-son talk Friday. Ziegler asked his son what problems he's had growing up and the boy asked about the prison camp where his dad spent more than five years.

At Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, Maj. William Baugh, of Piqua, Ohio, apparently was taking everything about his homecoming in stride, including the shoulder-length hair worn by his two teen-age sons.

Sixteen-year-old Doug said his father "hasn't changed," and Mrs. Baugh said her husband is "very easy going." "I don't see any problem," she said. "We're going to pick up the pieces and move on. We're

Emergency Study Is Ordered On Dollar

PARIS (UPI) — Finance leaders from major Western nations and Japan today directed their monetary experts to initiate an emergency study of ways to ease the international dollar crisis.

At a day-long conference yesterday, U.S. Treasury Secretary George Shultz and finance ministers of America's chief trading partners, agreed to keep foreign exchange markets closed pending the study of corrective measures.

Seated around a horseshoe-shaped table at the modern International Monetary Fund (IMF) building, the ministers also decided to stay within the present monetary framework involving fixed parities, or values, for the dollar in relation to other currencies.

But they did not hit upon any immediate steps to halt the dollar's continued loss of popularity among foreign holders of the U.S. currency.

They set another conference for March 16 to consider whatever steps the technicians will propose.

In spite of the Feb. 12 dollar devaluation—the second since December, 1971—investors and speculators abroad have gone on trading in the American paper notes for other currencies they deemed more sound.

Until they closed their money markets March 2, European central banks, in particular the West German Bundesbank, had to take in approximately 8 billion unwanted dollars.

"The present monetary crisis," said France's Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing, "has different characteristics from those that preceded it."

The other ministers agreed with Giscard d'Estaing saying, "the crisis was due to speculative movements of funds" and not to any basic imbalance in U.S. or foreign economies.

Participating nations were the United States, Canada, Japan, West Germany, France, Britain, the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy, and Sweden. Switzerland, Indonesia and the remaining Common Market members were observers.

Bundy Sees No Damage From Pentagon Papers

McGEORGE BUNDY
Testifies for Ellsberg

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Former presidential right-hand man McGeorge Bundy says disclosure of sections of the Pentagon Papers to a foreign power would not have hurt the United States in 1969.

"The North Vietnamese had that kind of information coming out of their ears," Bundy told the jury yesterday at the trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo.

Bundy, who served as special assistant on national security to presidents Kennedy and Johnson, testified for the defense that military information in one top secret document had been made public long before Ellsberg took the papers in 1969.

Two other volumes dealing with U.S.-South Vietnamese relations from 1963 to 1967 were more "a first cut at history" rather than an intelligence report, he said.

Bundy, whose role in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations was similar to the one now played by Henry A. Kissinger, was a principal architect of the U.S. Vietnam war policy as special assistant for national security affairs fro 1961 to 1966. He is now head of the Ford Foundation.

Bundy was asked to give his expert opinion on one volume of the Pentagon Papers involving a report on the 1968 Communist Tet offensive made by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

He testified that the most important part of the Wheeler report was Gen. William Westmoreland's request for 206,000 additional American troops in Vietnam. Bundy conceded that in February, 1968, the information was highly sensitive.

"Do you have an opinion as to whether release of this document in 1969 (when Ellsberg took the papers) could have been of advantage to a foreign power?" asked defense attorney Charles Nesson.

"Yes. I do not think so," Bundy replied.

"Do you have an opinion as to whether release of this document in 1969 could have injured the United States?"

"Yes. I do not think so."

Bundy told about a White House meeting in March, 1968, in which he and other advisers discussed Vietnam policy and determined that there would not be a large increase in reinforcements-and there was not.

The Wheeler report thus was overtaken by events and would have been little use to a foreign power in 1969, Bundy said.

Moreover, much of the information in the Wheeler report had been declassified by the time Ellsberg took the documents.

He also noted that estimates of enemy strength and casualties, also contained in the Wheeler report, had been made public in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Wheeler himself.

The defense disclosed that its next witness would be Arthur Schlesinger Jr., who was one of the intimates in the top circles of the Kennedy administration.

Status Of Returning POWs Is Taking On Gloomy Aspects

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

One returning prisoner of war is suffering a brain injury. Several more are partially paralyzed or suffering from malnutrition. At least 10 others have wound up in divorce courts instead of the arms of their loving wives.

The status of the POWs, at first flawlessly happy, is taking on some gloomy aspects as medical and marital troubles are revealed. In addition, there were growing indications of poor treatment in captivity as many POWs hinted they would have dismal stories to tell once all the prisoners had been freed.

A spokesman for the Army's Valley Forge General Hospital at Phoenixville, Pa. revealed Friday that seven released POWs are being treated for ailments ranging from partial paralysis in both legs to malnutrition. One soldier, S. Sgt. Gail M. Kerns, of Daniels, W.Va., has an injury to the left side of his brain.

"All returnees stated that they had malaria during captivity," the spokesman said. "None have a fever at the present time and they are presently being studied to determine if they continue to have malaria."

In San Diego, Calif., it was announced that Air Force Maj. Kile Berg, 33, a POW for nearly eight years, is being divorced by his wife, Elizabeth Ann, 30. It was at least the 10th POW divorce to come to light.

Supporters are planning an extravaganza in Dallas to reinforce the nation's welcome home.

James Skinner, half-time director for the Dallas Cowboys pro football team, said the "Dallas Salute," scheduled for June 2 at the Cotton Bowl, will be "pretty large," and added: "I would say it would be of the same stature of those they have in Washington on July 4, in front of the Washington Monument."

Skinner said President Nixon is "aware" of the show and is "highly in favor of it." He said entertainers expected to attend include Bob Hope, Martha Raye and Charley Pride.

In Pensacola, Fla., Army Spec. 5 Frederick W. Crowson returned home to the applause of some 2,000 spectators and a fistful of POW bracelets, and said: "We have a wonderful country and I was proud to serve it."

In Denver, Army CWO Roy E. Ziegler and the boy he'd never seen had a father-son talk Friday. Ziegler asked his son what problems he's had growing up and the boy asked about the prison camp where his dad spent more than five years.

At Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, Maj. William Baugh, of Piqua, Ohio, apparently was taking everything about his homecoming in stride, including the shoulder-length hair worn by his two teen-age sons.

Sixteen-year-old Doug said his father "hasn't changed," and Mrs. Baugh said her husband is "very easy going." "I don't see any problem," she said. "We're going to pick up the pieces and move on. We're

Larkspur Board Eyes New Budget

The Larkspur School District Thursday took a first look at a preliminary 1973-74 budget which was exactly the same as this year's total of $2,147,387.

Gilbert Slusher, assistant superintendent, said the estimated total is based on a projected drop in enrollment from the current average daily attendance of 1,527 students to 1,494 in the fall.

Provisions of Senate Bill 90 put a ceiling on the amount spent per pupil in 1973-74 at the amount spent this year plus $65.

The Larkspr district's current tax rate is $3.70 per $100 assessed valuation, but Slusher said the tax rate required for 1973-74 hasn't yet been computed.

The board set a special meeting for March 24 at 9 a.m. for a workshop session on the budget.

Supt. Milton S. Cohen said the board was told the district won't need to hold a lottery or lay off any teachers in the fall, because three teachers have resigned.

Kendall Poole, Henry C. Hall seventh grade teacher is retiring in June, William Toel, already on leave of absence, is resigning to go into private business, and Marlene Lutzi, Larkspur-Corte Madera teacher on maternity leave, has resigned.

The Larkspur School District Also:

BOOKS — Heard that the district has received $1,073 in federal Title II funds for its school libraries.

STUDENTS — Approved an agreement with San Francisco State University for student teachers to practice in the district next year, and with University of California for a nursing intern to work with the school nurse.

AUDITOR — Approved employing Leader, Jarvis and Keigwin to conduct the 1972-73 audit.

BID — Authorized going to bid for exterior painting, roofing, locker units, repaving and blacktopping at various schools.

Trial Ordered For Man On Three Charges

Don Edward Fleischer, 27, of San Rafael, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on felony counts of auto theft and concealing stolen property, and a misdemeanor charge of obstructing an officer.

Municipal Court Judge Peter Allen Smith ordered him to appear March 22 after ruling there is enough evidence to try him.

Larkspur police said an officer saw Fleischer working on a reportedly stolen car at Redwood High School and arrested him there Feb. 28.

However, he leaped from the arresting officer's car and fled toward Greenbrae Boardwalk before the policeman and a witness subdued him, police said.

Fleischer had been out of jail only 16 days before his arrest. He served six months in jail for robbing an elderly woman in San Rafael.

Consumer Bureau Head Quits Post

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bess Myerson, Miss America of 1945, resigned Thursday as consumer affairs commissioner for New York City.

The resignation, announced in a letter to Mayor John V. Lindsay and effective March 31, came just four years after she took over the job. When she was named in 1969, there were some complaints that the city was only hiring a personality but during her term she become generally accepted as a hard-hitting consumer advocate.

Drain Said Damaged From Rain

Residents of lower Vista Grande have complained at a meeting of the Greenbrae Property Owners Association that a county storm sewer has eroded a hillside sso much in recent rains that it must be repaired.

Association recording secretary Naida Walter said the residents also complained that a stairway, which leads to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from Vista Grande and Almenar Drive, has been washed away in the rains.

The stairway gets heavy use from school children and bus commuters, said Mrs. Walter, because it's a short cut.

Samuel Serrano, maintenance chairman for the association, reported that the stairway runs down a six-foot easement, and agreed to get estimates on the cost of repairing it.

Residents have agreed to join a Marin County Services Area beginning July 1, said Mrs. Walter, but action on appointing four board members to the services area board was delayed to the next meeting, which will be April 12 at 8 p.m. at Grubb and Ellis, Greenbrae.

President James E. Miller reported he had protested the high density of a proposed condominium development on marshland behind Marin Catholic High School at this week's Marin County Planning Commission.

Miller also reported, said Mrs. Walter, that county supervisor Peter S. Arrigoni has assured him the county intends to install stop signs at the dangerous intersections of Corte Cordova and Los Cerros Drive and Vista Grande and Los Cerros Drive.

Sites For Motorcycling Are Studied

Based on erroneous information supplied by the Marin County Schools office, the Independent-Journal Thursday reported incorrectly that a special program would be held today in connection with safety hazards created by mini-bikes and go-karts.

Actually, the session will deal with a continuing effort to find safe riding sites for motorcylces and dune buggies, according to Dorothy Everett, member of the county's Off-Highway Vehicle Committee.

The committee is cosponsoring the session along with school officials.

In the afternoon participants toured the Gambonini ranch in West Marin, a 1,460-acre ranch, not 4,000 acres, Mrs. Everett said. The ranch is used only by one group, the Marin Motorcycle Association, not several groups as reported in the I-J, she said, and has no connection with Synanon.

The fourth coffee is Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Thomas Walker home, 22 Corte Lodato, Greenbrae.

Coffee Is Set

A coffee for Eileen Bach-y-Rita, candidate for the Mill Valley School District board, will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Robert Baker home, 41 Locust Avenue, Mill Valley.

Evaluation Of Reactors Impossible

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — An Atomic Energy Commission scientist yesterday told an Assembly subcommittee the risk of deadly radiation being accidentally released from nuclear power plants cannot be evaluated.

But Edison Case, AEC deputy director of licensing, told the Assembly subcommittee on state electrical energy policy the "probability of a bad accident occurring is very, very low."

Case added in testimony before the panel that "no member of the AEC staff has made an assertion that nuclear reactors are unsafe."

The subcommittee, chaired by Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles, is conducting a series of hearings prior to developing a state policy on coping with use of electrical energy sources in the face of mounting demands.

Case said an AEC report on the safety of nuclear power plants showed that "the chance of such a catastrophic accident is predicted to be one chance n 100 billion per year by the year 2000."

However, he said there was "no basis" for formulating the potential for a major accident, such as a large leakage of radioactive material, "because we haven't had such an accident."

But Case said the risks of a major accident occurring are so low that the AEC has concluded construction of nuclear power plants "can proceed with reasonable assurance that no undue risk to the health and safety of the public will result."

Warren and another subcommittee member, Assemblyman Leo T. McCarthy, D-San Francisco, questioned Case for almost three hours about AEC testing procedures for nuclear plants.

"I can see that the probability of a major accident can be far larger than you suggest," Warren told Case, noting that the factors of human error and external sabotage may need more review.

At earlier hearings, representatives of the prestigious Union of Concerned Scientists told the subcommittee that current designs for nuclear power plants provide inadequate safeguards against accidental radiation realse.

The organization warned that the accidental release of even a small fraction of radioactive matter into the environemnt "could be the greatest peacetime disaster that this nation has ever experienced."

Trial Ordered For Man On Three Charges

Don Edward Fleischer, 27, of San Rafael, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on felony counts of auto theft and concealing stolen property, and a misdemeanor charge of obstructing an officer.

Municipal Court Judge Peter Allen Smith ordered him to appear March 22 after ruling there is enough evidence to try him.

Larkspur police said an officer saw Fleischer working on a reportedly stolen car at Redwood High School and arrested him there Feb. 28.

However, he leaped from the arresting officer's car and fled toward Greenbrae Boardwalk before the policeman and a witness subdued him, police said.

Fleischer had been out of jail only 16 days before his arrest. He served six months in jail for robbing an elderly woman in San Rafael.

Consumer Bureau Head Quits Post

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bess Myerson, Miss America of 1945, resigned Thursday as consumer affairs commissioner for New York City.

The resignation, announced in a letter to Mayor John V. Lindsay and effective March 31, came just four years after she took over the job. When she was named in 1969, there were some complaints that the city was only hiring a personality but during her term she become generally accepted as a hard-hitting consumer advocate.

Drain Said Damaged From Rain

Residents of lower Vista Grande have complained at a meeting of the Greenbrae Property Owners Association that a county storm sewer has eroded a hillside sso much in recent rains that it must be repaired.

Association recording secretary Naida Walter said the residents also complained that a stairway, which leads to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from Vista Grande and Almenar Drive, has been washed away in the rains.

The stairway gets heavy use from school children and bus commuters, said Mrs. Walter, because it's a short cut.

Samuel Serrano, maintenance chairman for the association, reported that the stairway runs down a six-foot easement, and agreed to get estimates on the cost of repairing it.

Residents have agreed to join a Marin County Services Area beginning July 1, said Mrs. Walter, but action on appointing four board members to the services area board was delayed to the next meeting, which will be April 12 at 8 p.m. at Grubb and Ellis, Greenbrae.

President James E. Miller reported he had protested the high density of a proposed condominium development on marshland behind Marin Catholic High School at this week's Marin County Planning Commission.

Miller also reported, said Mrs. Walter, that county supervisor Peter S. Arrigoni has assured him the county intends to install stop signs at the dangerous intersections of Corte Cordova and Los Cerros Drive and Vista Grande and Los Cerros Drive.

Sites For Motorcycling Are Studied

Based on erroneous information supplied by the Marin County Schools office, the Independent-Journal Thursday reported incorrectly that a special program would be held today in connection with safety hazards created by mini-bikes and go-karts.

Actually, the session will deal with a continuing effort to find safe riding sites for motorcylces and dune buggies, according to Dorothy Everett, member of the county's Off-Highway Vehicle Committee.

The committee is cosponsoring the session along with school officials.

In the afternoon participants toured the Gambonini ranch in West Marin, a 1,460-acre ranch, not 4,000 acres, Mrs. Everett said. The ranch is used only by one group, the Marin Motorcycle Association, not several groups as reported in the I-J, she said, and has no connection with Synanon.

Coffees Slated For Candidate

Four coffees have been arranged for Gloria Riccardi, candidate for reelection to the Kentfield School District board in the April 17 election.

On Tuesday, at 7:30 p.m., along with candidate Bruce Koppe, the coffee will be at the Edward Shelton home, 34 Rock Road, Kentfield.

On Wednesday, a similar event is at 10 a.m. at the Joseph Piccetti home, 167 Altura Way, Greenbrae.

A joint coffee with candidate Joan Brownstein will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the Katherine Jacobs home, 284 North Almenar Drive, Greenbrae.

The fourth coffee is Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Thomas Walker home, 22 Corte Lodato, Greenbrae.

Coffee Is Set

A coffee for Eileen Bach-y-Rita, candidate for the Mill Valley School District board, will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Robert Baker home, 41 Locust Avenue, Mill Valley.

GUEST SPEAKER — San Francisco Sheriff Richard Hongisto will speak at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Temple Rodef Sholom, 170 North San Pedro Road in San Rafael. The program, sponsored by the temple men's club, is free and open to the public.

Evaluation Of Reactors Impossible

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — An Atomic Energy Commission scientist yesterday told an Assembly subcommittee the risk of deadly radiation being accidentally released from nuclear power plants cannot be evaluated.

But Edison Case, AEC deputy director of licensing, told the Assembly subcommittee on state electrical energy policy the "probability of a bad accident occurring is very, very low."

Case added in testimony before the panel that "no member of the AEC staff has made an assertion that nuclear reactors are unsafe."

The subcommittee, chaired by Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles, is conducting a series of hearings prior to developing a state policy on coping with use of electrical energy sources in the face of mounting demands.

Case said an AEC report on the safety of nuclear power plants showed that "the chance of such a catastrophic accident is predicted to be one chance n 100 billion per year by the year 2000."

However, he said there was "no basis" for formulating the potential for a major accident, such as a large leakage of radioactive material, "because we haven't had such an accident."

But Case said the risks of a major accident occurring are so low that the AEC has concluded construction of nuclear power plants "can proceed with reasonable assurance that no undue risk to the health and safety of the public will result."

Warren and another subcommittee member, Assemblyman Leo T. McCarthy, D-San Francisco, questioned Case for almost three hours about AEC testing procedures for nuclear plants.

"I can see that the probability of a major accident can be far larger than you suggest," Warren told Case, noting that the factors of human error and external sabotage may need more review.

At earlier hearings, representatives of the prestigious Union of Concerned Scientists told the subcommittee that current designs for nuclear power plants provide inadequate safeguards against accidental radiation realse.

The organization warned that the accidental release of even a small fraction of radioactive matter into the environemnt "could be the greatest peacetime disaster that this nation has ever experienced."

Co-Chairmen

Lotte Schiller, candidate for the Tamalpais High School District board in the April 17 election, has named Thomas Thorner of Kentfield, and Iniece Bailey of Mill Valley as cochairmen of her campaign.

Soaring Price Of Burial Land

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — With land values skyrocketing, cemeteries full, and about 4,000 persons dying every month, Mexico City is turning to vertical graves.

Bodies are being stacked up sometimes 10 deep in the space taken up by a single oldfashioned grave.

The city's first vertical cemetary opened recently, charging about $600 for a perpetual resting place.

Larkspur Board Eyes New Budget

The Larkspur School District Thursday took a first look at a preliminary 1973-74 budget which was exactly the same as this year's total of $2,147,387.

Gilbert Slusher, assistant superintendent, said the estimated total is based on a projected drop in enrollment from the current average daily attendance of 1,527 students to 1,494 in the fall.

Provisions of Senate Bill 90 put a ceiling on the amount spent per pupil in 1973-74 at the amount spent this year plus $65.

The Larkspr district's current tax rate is $3.70 per $100 assessed valuation, but Slusher said the tax rate required for 1973-74 hasn't yet been computed.

The board set a special meeting for March 24 at 9 a.m. for a workshop session on the budget.

Supt. Milton S. Cohen said the board was told the district won't need to hold a lottery or lay off any teachers in the fall, because three teachers have resigned.

Kendall Poole, Henry C. Hall seventh grade teacher is retiring in June, William Toel, already on leave of absence, is resigning to go into private business, and Marlene Lutzi, Larkspur-Corte Madera teacher on maternity leave, has resigned.

The Larkspur School District Also:

BOOKS — Heard that the district has received $1,073 in federal Title II funds for its school libraries.

STUDENTS — Approved an agreement with San Francisco State University for student teachers to practice in the district next year, and with University of California for a nursing intern to work with the school nurse.

AUDITOR — Approved employing Leader, Jarvis and Keigwin to conduct the 1972-73 audit.

BID — Authorized going to bid for exterior painting, roofing, locker units, repaving and blacktopping at various schools.

Gunfire Exchanged At Wounded Knee

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — Gunfire was exchanged last night between militant Indians occupying the hamlet of Wounded Knee and government forces ringing the Indian encampment.

Earlier Justice Department officials reported that an agreement had been reached with the Indians. Leaders of the American Indian Movement (AIM), organizers of the occupation, said they were "a world away from an agreement with the Interior Department."

Ramon Roubideaux, attorney and chief negotiator for the Indians, told a news conference that he received a report that government forces sprayed the church and trading post area of Wounded Knee with tracer bullets fired from automatic weapons, firing indiscriminately.

However, a spokesman at the government command post in Pine Ridge said government forces did not fire at the Indians. The spokesman said the Indians fired "about 30 rounds" but that "no fire was returned." The government earlier cancelled two scheduled press briefings and refused comment on the alleged firefights between Indians and federals.

UPI photographer Bruno Torres, who has been living inside Wounded Knee for the past three nights, said there were two firefights Friday, one of which lasted about 12 minutes and the other about five minutes. He said the first gunfire he heard came from the Indians.

He said none of the Indians occupying Wounded Knee was wounded, but that two persons requested first aid for ankle or leg injuries suffered while jumping into bunkers in the besieged hamlet.

Torres said the shooting began after an estimated three to four dynamite charges exploded at 8 p.m. MST (10 p.m. EST). He said the Indians were dynamiting a bridge near the trding post.

"Then I heard two shotguns blasts and one rifle fired by the Indians, then the federal agents opened up with automatic fire from the hill, firing bullets and some tracers which whizzed over the trading post," Torres said.

The Indians took over Wounded Knee 11 days ago, ransacking a trading post and museum, seizing a supply of guns, taking over a Catholic mission as a stronghold and holding 11 persons hostage. The hostages later were released.

Indians were wounded in skirmishes with government forces Thursday night, but no other injuries have been reported.

Wounded Knee, the site of the last battle between Indians and the U.S. Cavalry in 1890 in which some 200 to 300 Indians died, was sealed off yesterday and newsmen were barred admission to the Indian encampment.

natural residue of an atmosphere in America that for years encouraged potential lawbreakers," he said.

He took strong issue against those who blame society for the criminal. "I totally disagree with this permissive philosophy," he said. "Society is guilty of crime only when we fail to bring the criminal to justice. When we fail to make the criminal pay for his crime, we encourage him to think the crime will pay."

He also chided "those who say that law and order are just code words for repression and bigotry."

"That is dangerous nonsense," said Nixon. "Law and order are code words for goodness and decency."

In addition, Nixon revealed:

—He plans to increase assistance next year to local law enforcement to over $1.2 billion.

—For the first nine months of 1972 the growth rate of serious crime in America was reduced to one per cent, the lowest rate of increase since 1960, according to FBI figures.

—In 83 major cities serious crime has been reduced and in the District of Columbia it has been cut in half since 1969.

—Convictions of organized crime have more than doubled in the last four years and the rate of new heroin addiction has dramatically decreased.

car," he said. "The error was in fact rectified in 14 minutes and the units sent to the Old Bailey."

The warning of the bombs was originally telephoned to the London Times by a man with a heavy accent. The newspaper then relayed the information to Scotland Yard.

Police have arrested seven men and three women in connection with the explosions and mounted a major manhunt for others involved.

Police sources said detectives swooped down on homes of known (IRA) sympathizers throughout Britain searching for evidence that will lead to the persons who turned a London street into an arena of destruction. The bomb shredded a car into lethal chunks of metal.

Bomb scares, all mistakes or hoaxes, kept police busy Friday and forced many persons temporarily into the street.

Among buildings evacuated briefly during the course of the day were the Post Office tower, the capital's tallest structure; the London Stock Exchange; the News of the World; the Daily Telegraph, and the Evening Standard.

Hospital Expansion Will Be Discussed

Plans to expand Hillcrest Hospital will be studied at a Petaluma Hospital District board meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the Hospital.

Restaurant Manager Is Robbed Of $500

The manager of the Kentucky Fried Chicken in San Rafael last night was robbed of $500 by three Oriental men who forced their way into the establishment just before closing time and threatened him, his wife and daughter with a gun.

Herb R. Edmondson told police his wife had noticed the men in a car about 10 p.m. when she left to make a bank deposit. The vehicle was still there when she returned a few minutes later.

Edmondson opened a rear door in an attempt to get the license number of the car and the trio met him outside the door and forced him back into the building at gunpoint.

The couple, their daughter, Louise, and another man who was in the establishment at 555 Second Street were told to lie down in the walk-in refrigerator.

The robbers then took Edmondson to the office where they coerced him into opening the floor safe. They took money from his wallet and his wife's purse and rummaged around the premises before fleeting.

The men were described as being in their late 20's or early 30's.

Slaying Suspect Is Identified

SAN BERNARDINO, (UPI) — A St. Louis man was charged yesterday with suspicion of murder in a shooting spree along a 15-mile stretch of highway in Cajon Pass that ended in the deaths of a California Highway Patrolman, a sheriff's lieutenant and a gas station attendant.

The suspect, identified as Jerry James Youngberg, 30, of St. Louis, also allegedly pisto whipped a deputy district attorney and was himself wounded by a county supervisor as he tried to escape into the rugged hills along the pass.

Police said no motive had been established.

Two Withdraw As Candidates

A husband-and-wife team of candidates for school boards in Marin County yesterday announced their withdrawal.

Alvin H. Buckelew of 2742 Las Gallinas Avenue, San Rafael, will withdraw as a candidate for the Marin Community College District board. His wife, Nancy, will withdraw from the race for the Dixie School District board.

Mrs. Buckelew said both regretted abandoning the races, but the decision was necessary because her husband's employer, Burns International, is transferring him out of Marin County.

PE Requirements To Be Discussed

The San Rafael Board of Education will discuss high school physical education requirements when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the district office.

At issue are differing requirements for athletes at Terra Linda and San Rafael high schools. Student athletes at San Rafael High School are not required to take physical education classes, while those at Terra Linda High School must enroll in physical education classes as well as appear for sport practice sessions.

The board will also approve a seniority list of classified personnel, review policy on student transportation and consider plans for summer school.

Driver Reported Fair From Crash

A Muir Beach man was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with an injured arm and leg received when his car struck a utility pole.

The California Highway Patrol said Gordon J. Badovich, 30, was westbound on Shoreline Highway near Muir Beach about 2 a.m. today when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel. His auto drifted across the road and struck the pole, according to officers.

Forgery Case Hearing Set

A 43-year-old man, said to have taken another man's identity, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on felony counts of forgery and attempted grand theft.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of municipal court ordered Joseph Kaufman, of no fixed address, to appear in the higher court Wednesday.

San Rafael police said Kaufman found identification belonging to a Dennis Hoffman, opened an account at a Bank of America branch in that name and cashed $750 to $1,000 in checks against the account.

He is also charged with passing forged checks in San Mateo and Los Angeles, where he was arrested, police said.

Audubon Canyon Ranch Is Open

Audubon Canyon Ranch, north of Stinson Beach, has opened for the season.

The ranch, whose grounds include the nesting places of several kinds of birds, currently has 44 pair of great blue heron and two pairs of egrets nesting in trees on its eastern slope.

Audubon Canyon is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekends and on weekdays by appointment only.

It is located three miles north of Stinson Beach on the shores of the Bolinas Lagoon.

Check Charge Plea Entered

A 28-year-old bookkeeper, alleged to have cashed almost $900 in checks on her employer's account, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to felony counts of embezzlement and passing fraudulent checks.

Preliminary hearing for Frances D. Venable of Sausalito is scheduled March 26.

Police aid she cashed three checks, each almost $300, on the account of Del Davis Associates of San Rafael on Dec. 15, Dec. 29, and Jan. 5. Two of the checks were for rent, police said.

Miss Venable was hired by the planning and development consultant Nov. 6, police said.

ernment (Viet Cong) said they would abide by the time frame in the agreement," the spokesman said.

The U.S. spokesman said the subcommission would meet again Monday.

"The delegations of the four sides agreed to attempt to carry out the third phase on the 14th of March. We agreed to attempt to release all military personnel exactly in accordance with the time frame of the Paris agreement," the Communist press official said.

The Commission is composed of North and South Vietnam, the Viet Cong and the United States. Both the Americans and South Vietnamese earlier made no mention of new developments on the prisoner release.

The top U.S. delegate to the JMC, in a letter to the Communists Friday, demanded to know by Sunday when and where the next group of Americans would be freed.

The demand came in a letter from Maj. Gen. Gilbert Woodward, chief of the U.S. delegation to the Joint Military Commission (JMC), to his Communist counterparts.

North and South Vietnam today continued exchanging Vietnamese POWs and under terms of the Jan. 28 cease-fire agreement. At least another 140 Americans should be freed Tuesdy and Wednesday in Hanoi. But the Communists at a JMC meeting today failed to give any word on such a release or provide the names of the POWs to be freed, spokesmen said.

Woodward's letter was given to Lt. Gen. Tran Van Tra, leader of the Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) delegation, and North Vietnamese chief Maj. Gen. Le Quang Hoa.

"It is understood that the list of U.S. POWs to be released in this phase, along with time and place, will be provided to the U.S. delegation 48 hours prior to the date of release," Woodward said. "Request you provide this information as soon as possible but not later than 11 March."

U.S. officials said 274 American military men and 13 civilians remain to be freed by the Communists.

Woodward's letter said the United States had withdrawn 75 per cent of its troops from Vietnam since the cease-fire went into effect.

Another Wet Weekend Likely

Those who expected yesterday's springlike weather to continue through the weekend will be disappointed, the weatherman said today.

He predicted a 60 per cent chance of rain tonight and clouds tomorrow with a chance of showers.

In Tamalpais Valley, rainfall-recorder Flo Glessner said the 56.05 inches of rain so far this season is already a record for the 16 years she has been keeping records.

Dredging Of Lagoon Due Study

Bel Marin Keys Community Services District directors will discuss the depth of dredging of the community's lagoon at an adjourned meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the community center.

After protests by homeowners along Novato Creek last week that creek dredging wasn't close enough to their docks, the board approved a switch in dredging volume from the lagoon to the creek area.

This switch lessened the depth of lagoon dredging and directors agreed Thursday to learn from homeowners "the minimum depth they are willing to live with," reported President Benjamin F. Kump.

"If they feel they want more depth than we have money for . . . does the community want to raise more money?" he said.

Review Of Plan To Continue

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting Monday at 9 a.m. at Civic Center, will continue its review of the proposed countywide general plan.

The commission is nearing the end of its review and expects to send the controversial document along with its recommendation to the board of supervisors before the end of the month.

Monday's agenda also includes a review of the county's multimillion dollar capital improvements program, a six-year forecast of county needs.

A 28-year-old bookkeeper, alleged to have cashed almost $900 in checks on her employer's account, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to felony counts of embezzlement and passing fraudulent checks.

Preliminary hearing for Frances D. Venable of Sausalito is scheduled March 26.

Police aid she cashed three checks, each almost $300, on the account of Del Davis Associates of San Rafael on Dec. 15, Dec. 29, and Jan. 5. Two of the checks were for rent, police said.

Miss Venable was hired by the planning and development consultant Nov. 6, police said.

ernment (Viet Cong) said they would abide by the time frame in the agreement," the spokesman said.

The U.S. spokesman said the subcommission would meet again Monday.

"The delegations of the four sides agreed to attempt to carry out the third phase on the 14th of March. We agreed to attempt to release all military personnel exactly in accordance with the time frame of the Paris agreement," the Communist press official said.

The Commission is composed of North and South Vietnam, the Viet Cong and the United States. Both the Americans and South Vietnamese earlier made no mention of new developments on the prisoner release.

The top U.S. delegate to the JMC, in a letter to the Communists Friday, demanded to know by Sunday when and where the next group of Americans would be freed.

The demand came in a letter from Maj. Gen. Gilbert Woodward, chief of the U.S. delegation to the Joint Military Commission (JMC), to his Communist counterparts.

North and South Vietnam today continued exchanging Vietnamese POWs and under terms of the Jan. 28 cease-fire agreement. At least another 140 Americans should be freed Tuesdy and Wednesday in Hanoi. But the Communists at a JMC meeting today failed to give any word on such a release or provide the names of the POWs to be freed, spokesmen said.

Woodward's letter was given to Lt. Gen. Tran Van Tra, leader of the Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) delegation, and North Vietnamese chief Maj. Gen. Le Quang Hoa.

"It is understood that the list of U.S. POWs to be released in this phase, along with time and place, will be provided to the U.S. delegation 48 hours prior to the date of release," Woodward said. "Request you provide this information as soon as possible but not later than 11 March."

U.S. officials said 274 American military men and 13 civilians remain to be freed by the Communists.

Woodward's letter said the United States had withdrawn 75 per cent of its troops from Vietnam since the cease-fire went into effect.

Another Wet Weekend Likely

Those who expected yesterday's springlike weather to continue through the weekend will be disappointed, the weatherman said today.

He predicted a 60 per cent chance of rain tonight and clouds tomorrow with a chance of showers.

In Tamalpais Valley, rainfall-recorder Flo Glessner said the 56.05 inches of rain so far this season is already a record for the 16 years she has been keeping records.

Dredging Of Lagoon Due Study

Bel Marin Keys Community Services District directors will discuss the depth of dredging of the community's lagoon at an adjourned meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the community center.

After protests by homeowners along Novato Creek last week that creek dredging wasn't close enough to their docks, the board approved a switch in dredging volume from the lagoon to the creek area.

This switch lessened the depth of lagoon dredging and directors agreed Thursday to learn from homeowners "the minimum depth they are willing to live with," reported President Benjamin F. Kump.

"If they feel they want more depth than we have money for . . . does the community want to raise more money?" he said.

Review Of Plan To Continue

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting Monday at 9 a.m. at Civic Center, will continue its review of the proposed countywide general plan.

The commission is nearing the end of its review and expects to send the controversial document along with its recommendation to the board of supervisors before the end of the month.

Monday's agenda also includes a review of the county's multimillion dollar capital improvements program, a six-year forecast of county needs.

Library Board Seats Ramsey

William Ramsey Jr. of Mill Valley has been seated on the city's library board.

Ramsey was appointed to the board at a special meeting of the city council called for that purpose Thursday.

He is an employee of the U.S. Mint in San Francisco and his father, William Ramsey Sr., was a member of the Mill Valley Library Board in past years.

The board also appointed Carol Asch as chairman. She replaces Waldi Hecht who resigned from the board last month.

Pillows Given On Rights Vote

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A group of Nevada Senators filed out of the Senate lounge after a brief meeting Thursday, each clutching a tiny white satin pillow.

The pillows—complete with pink lace—were their reward for voting down the Equal Rights Amendment 16 to 4.

OBITUARIES

MALCOLM CLARK

Private funeral for Malcolm S. Clark, father of Margaret A. Hall of San Anselmo, will be tomorrow.

Clark, founder of the San Francisco confectionary brokerage firm bearing his name, died recently after a brief illness. He was 85.

Born in West Stockholm, N.Y., Clark came to California in 1906 and started his firm, specializing in fine candies from the East Coast. The company had offices throughout the West.

He lived for many years in San Francisco, later moving to San Mateo Park.

In addition to Mrs. Hall, he is survived by his wife of 48 years, Mildred; three other daughters, Gwendolyn D. Moler and Beverly C. Noe of Grass Valley and Mildred I. Wilson of San Carlos; a sister, Mrs. J. C. Martin of Berkeley, 15 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Burial will be at Skylawn Memorial Park in San Mateo The family prefers donations to the Save the Redwoods League.

MILDRED JOHNSON

Mildred H. Johnson, 76, a long-time resident of Mill Valley, died yesterday at a local hospital following a long illness.

Mrs. Johnson had lived for 31 years at 26 Sycamore Street with her husband Walter H. Johnson, a retired businessman formerly in the wholesale electrical field.

A native of Grass Valley, she had lived 52 years in Marin County.

She is survived by two sons, Walter H. Johnson Jr. of Redding and George H. Johnson of Marinwood, and six grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were pending at Russell & Gooch Funeral Chapel of Mill Valley.

RONALD McKERNAN

Funeral for Ronald Charles (Pigpen) McKernan, an original member of the Grateful Dead rock band, will be at 1 p.m. Monday in Daphne's Mortuary in Corte Madera.

McKernan died Thursday in his Corte Madera home after an illness of several months. He was 27.

McKernan suffered from hepatic cirrhosis rather than from hepatitis, as reported by the Independent-Journal yesterday.

Hepatic cirrhosis, an ailment of the liver, is different from the infectious disease of hepatitis, according to Coroner's Deputy Bill J. Thomas.

Born in San Mateo County, the musician lived most of his life in Palo Alto. He moved to Novato with other members of the band four years ago, then to Corte Madera a year ago. He was single.

McKernan is survived by his parents, Phillip and Esther McKernan; a brother, Kevin Michael McKernan, and a sister, Carol Frances McKernan, all of Palo Alto.

Burial will be private.

Friends may call at Daphne's Mortuary after 4 p.m. today.

Drain Said Damaged From Rain

Residents of lower Vista Grande have complained at a meeting of the Greenbrae Property Owners Association that a county storm sewer has eroded a hillside sso much in recent rains that it must be repaired.

Association recording secretary Naida Walter said the residents also complained that a stairway, which leads to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from Vista Grande and Almenar Drive, has been washed away in the rains.

The stairway gets heavy use from school children and bus commuters, said Mrs. Walter, because it's a short cut.

Samuel Serrano, maintenance chairman for the association, reported that the stairway runs down a six-foot easement, and agreed to get estimates on the cost of repairing it.

Residents have agreed to join a Marin County Services Area beginning July 1, said Mrs. Walter, but action on appointing four board members to the services area board was delayed to the next meeting, which will be April 12 at 8 p.m. at Grubb and Ellis, Greenbrae.

President James E. Miller reported he had protested the high density of a proposed condominium development on marshland behind Marin Catholic High School at this week's Marin County Planning Commission.

Miller also reported, said Mrs. Walter, that county supervisor Peter S. Arrigoni has assured him the county intends to install stop signs at the dangerous intersections of Corte Cordova and Los Cerros Drive and Vista Grande and Los Cerros Drive.

Sites For Motorcycling Are Studied

Based on erroneous information supplied by the Marin County Schools office, the Independent-Journal Thursday reported incorrectly that a special program would be held today in connection with safety hazards created by mini-bikes and go-karts.

Actually, the session will deal with a continuing effort to find safe riding sites for motorcylces and dune buggies, according to Dorothy Everett, member of the county's Off-Highway Vehicle Committee.

The committee is cosponsoring the session along with school officials.

In the afternoon participants toured the Gambonini ranch in West Marin, a 1,460-acre ranch, not 4,000 acres, Mrs. Everett said. The ranch is used only by one group, the Marin Motorcycle Association, not several groups as reported in the I-J, she said, and has no connection with Synanon.

The fourth coffee is Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Thomas Walker home, 22 Corte Lodato, Greenorae.

A coffee for Eileen Bach-y-Rita, candidate for the Mill Valley School District board, will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Robert Baker home, 41 Locust Avenue, Mill Valley.

Evaluation Of Reactors Impossible

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — An Atomic Energy Commission scientist yesterday told an Assembly subcommittee the risk of deadly radiation being accidentally released from nuclear power plants cannot be evaluated.

But Edison Case, AEC deputy director of licensing, told the Assembly subcommittee on state electrical energy policy the "probability of a bad accident occurring is very, very low."

Case added in testimony before the panel that "no member of the AEC staff has made an assertion that nuclear reactors are unsafe."

The subcommittee, chaired by Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles, is conducting a series of hearings prior to developing a state policy on coping with use of electrical energy sources in the face of mounting demands.

Case said an AEC report on the safety of nuclear power plants showed that "the chance of such a catastrophic accident is predicted to be one chance n 100 billion per year by the year 2000."

However, he said there was "no basis" for formulating the potential for a major accident, such as a large leakage of radioactive material, "because we haven't had such an accident."

But Case said the risks of a major accident occurring are so low that the AEC has concluded construction of nuclear power plants "can proceed with reasonable assurance that no undue risk to the health and safety of the public will result."

Warren and another subcommittee member, Assemblyman Leo T. McCarthy, D-San Francisco, questioned Case for almost three hours about AEC testing procedures for nuclear plants.

"I can see that the probability of a major accident can be far larger than you suggest," Warren told Case, noting that the factors of human error and external sabotage may need more review.

At earlier hearings, representatives of the prestigious Union of Concerned Scientists told the subcommittee that current designs for nuclear power plants provide inadequate safeguards against accidental radiation realse.

The organization warned that the accidental release of even a small fraction of radioactive matter into the environemnt "could be the greatest peacetime disaster that this nation has ever experienced."

Co-Chairmen

Lotte Schiller, candidate for the Tamalpais High School District board in the April 17 election, has named Thomas Thorner of Kentfield, and Iniece Bailey of Mill Valley as co-chairmen of her campaign.

Gunfire Exchanged At Wounded Knee

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — Gunfire was exchanged last night between militant Indians occupying the hamlet of Wounded Knee and government forces ringing the Indian encampment.

Earlier Justice Department officials reported that an agreement had been reached with the Indians. Leaders of the American Indian Movement (AIM), organizers of the occupation, said they were "a world away from an agreement with the Interior Department."

Ramon Roubideaux, attorney and chief negotiator for the Indians, told a news conference that he received a report that government forces sprayed the church and trading post area of Wounded Knee with tracer bullets fired from automatic weapons, firing indiscriminately.

However, a spokesman at the government command post in Pine Ridge said government forces did not fire at the Indians. The spokesman said the Indians fired "about 30 rounds" but that "no fire was returned." The government earlier cancelled two scheduled press briefings and refused comment on the alleged firefights between Indians and federals.

UPI photographer Bruno Torres, who has been living inside Wounded Knee for the past three nights, said there were two firefights Friday, one of which lasted about 12 minutes and the other about five minutes. He said the first gunfire he heard came from the Indians.

He said none of the Indians occupying Wounded Knee was wounded, but that two persons requested first aid for ankle or leg injuries suffered while jumping into bunkers in the besieged hamlet.

Torres said the shooting began after an estimated three to four dynamite charges exploded at 8 p.m. MST (10 p.m. EST). He said the Indians were dynamiting a bridge near the trding post.

"Then I heard two shotguns blasts and one rifle fired by the Indians, then the federal agents opened up with automatic fire from the hill, firing bullets and some tracers which whizzed over the trading post," Torres said.

The Indians took over Wounded Knee 11 days ago, ransacking a trading post and museum, seizing a supply of guns, taking over a Catholic mission as a stronghold and holding 11 persons hostage. The hostages later were released.

Indians were wounded in skirmishes with government forces Thursday night, but no other injuries have been reported.

Wounded Knee, the site of the last battle between Indians and the U.S. Cavalry in 1890 in which some 200 to 300 Indians died, was sealed off yesterday and newsmen were barred admission to the Indian encampment.

NIXON

natural residue of an atmosphere in America that for years encouraged potential lawbreakers," he said.

He took strong issue against those who blame society for the criminal. "I totally disagree with this permissive philosophy," he said. "Society is guilty of crime only when we fail to bring the criminal to justice. When we fail to make the criminal pay for his crime, we encourage him to think the crime will pay."

He also chided "those who say that law and order are just code words for repression and bigotry."

"That is dangerous nonsense," said Nixon. "Law and order are code words for goodness and decency."

In addition, Nixon revealed:

—He plans to increase assistance next year to local law enforcement to over $1.2 billion.

—For the first nine months of 1972 the growth rate of serious crime in America was reduced to one per cent, the lowest rate of increase since 1960, according to FBI figures.

—In 83 major cities serious crime has been reduced and in the District of Columbia it has been cut in half since 1969.

—Convictions of organized crime have more than doubled in the last four years and the rate of new heroin addiction has dramatically decreased.

Half Staff Flag Over Abortions

KINSPORT, Tenn. (UPI) — The Rev. Luzerne Schunupp says the United States flag at a parochial school will fly at half staff during Lent, which he says should be a time of penance for abortions.

Schnupp, pastor of St. Dominic's Catholic Church elementary school said Thursday. The purpose behind the move was to remind the people of the community that Lent "should be a time of prayer and penance for the unborn children being slain in this country every day."

car," he said. "The error was in fact rectified in 14 minutes and the units sent to the Old Bailey."

The warning of the bombs was originally telephoned to the London Times by a man with a heavy accent. The newspaper then relayed the information to Scotland Yard.

Police have arrested seven men and three women in connection with the explosions and mounted a major manhunt for others involved.

Police sources said detectives swooped down on homes of known (IRA) sympathizers throughout Britain searching for evidence that will lead to the persons who turned a London street into an arena of destruction. The bomb shredded a car into lethal chunks of metal.

Bomb scares, all mistakes or hoaxes, kept police busy Friday and forced many persons temporarily into the street.

Among buildings evacuated briefly during the course of the day were the Post Office tower, the capital's tallest structure; the London Stock Exchange; the News of the World; the Daily Telegraph, and the Evening Standard.

Restaurant Manager Is Robbed Of $500

The manager of the Kentucky Fried Chicken in San Rafael last night was robbed of $500 by three Oriental men who forced their way into the establishment just before closing time and threatened him, his wife and daughter with a gun.

Herb R. Edmondson told police his wife had noticed the men in a car about 10 p.m. when she left to make a bank deposit. The vehicle was still there when she returned a few minutes later.

Edmondson opened a rear door in an attempt to get the license number of the car and the trio met him outside the door and forced him back into the building at gunpoint.

The couple, their daughter, Louise, and another man who was in the establishment at 555 Second Street were told to lie down in the walk-in refrigerator.

The robbers then took Edmondson to the office where they coerced him into opening the floor safe. They took money from his wallet and his wife's purse and rummaged around the premises before fleeting.

The men were described as being in their late 20's or early 30's.

Slaying Suspect Is Identified

SAN BERNARDINO, (UPI) — A St. Louis man was charged yesterday with suspicion of murder in a shooting spree along a 15-mile stretch of highway in Cajon Pass that ended in the deaths of a California Highway Patrolman, a sheriff's lieutenant and a gas station attendant.

The suspect, identified as Jerry James Youngberg, 30, of St. Louis, also allegedly pisto whipped a deputy district attorney and was himself wounded by a county supervisor as he tried to escape into the rugged hills along the pass.

Police said no motive had been established.

Two Withdraw As Candidates

A husband-and-wife team of candidates for school boards in Marin County yesterday announced their withdrawal.

Alvin H. Buckelew of 2742 Las Gallinas Avenue, San Rafael, will withdraw as a candidate for the Marin Community College District board. His wife, Nancy, will withdraw from the race for the Dixie School District board.

Mrs. Buckelew said both regretted abandoning the races, but the decision was necessary because her husband's employer, Burns International, is transferring him out of Marin County.

PE Requirements To Be Discussed

The San Rafael Board of Education will discuss high school physical education requirements when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the district office.

At issue are differing requirements for athletes at Terra Linda and San Rafael high schools. Student athletes at San Rafael High School are not required to take physical education classes, while those at Terra Linda High School must enroll in physical education classes as well as appear for sport practice sessions.

The board will also approve a seniority list of classified personnel, review policy on student transportation and consider plans for summer school.

Driver Reported Fair From Crash

A Muir Beach man was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with an injured arm and leg received when his car struck a utility pole.

The California Highway Patrol said Gordon J. Badovich, 30, was westbound on Shoreline Highway near Muir Beach about 2 a.m. today when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel. His auto drifted across the road and struck the pole, according to officers.

Forgery Case Hearing Set

A 43-year-old man, said to have taken another man's identity, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on felony counts of forgery and attempted grand theft.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of municipal court ordered Joseph Kaufman, of no fixed address, to appear in the higher court Wednesday.

San Rafael police said Kaufman found identification belonging to a Dennis Hoffman, opened an account at a Bank of America branch in that name and cashed $750 to $1,000 in checks against the account.

He is also charged with passing forged checks in San Mateo and Los Angeles, where he was arrested, police said.

Audubon Canyon Ranch Is Open

Audubon Canyon Ranch, north of Stinson Beach, has opened for the season.

The ranch, whose grounds include the nesting places of several kinds of birds, currently has 44 pair of great blue heron and two pairs of egrets nesting in trees on its eastern slope.

Audubon Canyon is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekends and on weekdays by appointment only.

It is located three miles north of Stinson Beach on the shores of the Bolinas Lagoon.

Check Charge Plea Entered

A 28-year-old bookkeeper, alleged to have cashed almost $900 in checks on her employer's account, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to felony counts of embezzlement and passing fraudulent checks.

Preliminary hearing for Frances D. Venable of Sausalito is scheduled March 26.

Police aid she cashed three checks, each almost $300, on the account of Del Davis Associates of San Rafael on Dec. 15, Dec. 29, and Jan. 5. Two of the checks were for rent, police said.

Miss Venable was hired by the planning and development consultant Nov. 6, police said.

ernment (Viet Cong) said they would abide by the time frame in the agreement," the spokesman said.

The U.S. spokesman said the subcommission would meet again Monday.

"The delegations of the four sides agreed to attempt to carry out the third phase on the 14th of March. We agreed to attempt to release all military personnel exactly in accordance with the time frame of the Paris agreement," the Communist press official said.

The Commission is composed of North and South Vietnam, the Viet Cong and the United States. Both the Americans and South Vietnamese earlier made no mention of new developments on the prisoner release.

The top U.S. delegate to the JMC, in a letter to the Communists Friday, demanded to know by Sunday when and where the next group of Americans would be freed.

The demand came in a letter from Maj. Gen. Gilbert Woodward, chief of the U.S. delegation to the Joint Military Commission (JMC), to his Communist counterparts.

North and South Vietnam today continued exchanging Vietnamese POWs and under terms of the Jan. 28 cease-fire agreement. At least another 140 Americans should be freed Tuesdy and Wednesday in Hanoi. But the Communists at a JMC meeting today failed to give any word on such a release or provide the names of the POWs to be freed, spokesmen said.

Woodward's letter was given to Lt. Gen. Tran Van Tra, leader of the Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) delegation, and North Vietnamese chief Maj. Gen. Le Quang Hoa.

"It is understood that the list of U.S. POWs to be released in this phase, along with time and place, will be provided to the U.S. delegation 48 hours prior to the date of release," Woodward said. "Request you provide this information as soon as possible but not later than 11 March."

U.S. officials said 274 American military men and 13 civilians remain to be freed by the Communists.

Woodward's letter said the United States had withdrawn 75 per cent of its troops from Vietnam since the cease-fire went into effect.

Another Wet Weekend Likely

Those who expected yesterday's springlike weather to continue through the weekend will be disappointed, the weatherman said today.

He predicted a 60 per cent chance of rain tonight and clouds tomorrow with a chance of showers.

In Tamalpais Valley, rainfall-recorder Flo Glessner said the 56.05 inches of rain so far this season is already a record for the 16 years she has been keeping records.

Dredging Of Lagoon Due Study

Bel Marin Keys Community Services District directors will discuss the depth of dredging of the community's lagoon at an adjourned meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the community center.

After protests by homeowners along Novato Creek last week that creek dredging wasn't close enough to their docks, the board approved a switch in dredging volume from the lagoon to the creek area.

This switch lessened the depth of lagoon dredging and directors agreed Thursday to learn from homeowners "the minimum depth they are willing to live with," reported President Benjamin F. Kump.

"If they feel they want more depth than we have money for . . . does the community want to raise more money?" he said.

Review Of Plan To Continue

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting Monday at 9 a.m. at Civic Center, will continue its review of the proposed countywide general plan.

The commission is nearing the end of its review and expects to send the controversial document along with its recommendation to the board of supervisors before the end of the month.

Monday's agenda also includes a review of the county's multimillion dollar capital improvements program, a six-year forecast of county needs.

Library Board Seats Ramsey

William Ramsey Jr. of Mill Valley has been seated on the city's library board.

Ramsey was appointed to the board at a special meeting of the city council called for that purpose Thursday.

He is an employee of the U.S. Mint in San Francisco and his father, William Ramsey Sr., was a member of the Mill Valley Library Board in past years.

The board also appointed Carol Asch as chairman. She replaces Waldi Hecht who resigned from the board last month.

Pillows Given On Rights Vote

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A group of Nevada Senators filed out of the Senate lounge after a brief meeting Thursday, each clutching a tiny white satin pillow.

The pillows—complete with pink lace—were their reward for voting down the Equal Rights Amendment 16 to 4.

A native of Grass Valley, she had lived 52 years in Marin County.

McKernan died Thursday in his Corte Madera home after an illness of several months. He was 27.

McKernan suffered from hepatic cirrhosis rather than from hepatitis, as reported by the Independent-Journal yesterday.

Hepatic cirrhosis, an ailment of the liver, is different from the infectious disease of hepatitis, according to Coroner's Deputy Bill J. Thomas.

Born in San Mateo County, the musician lived most of his life in Palo Alto. He moved to Novato with other members of the band four years ago, then to Corte Madera a year ago. He was single.

McKernan is survived by his parents, Phillip and Esther McKernan; a brother, Kevin Michael McKernan, and a sister, Carol Frances McKernan, all of Palo Alto.

CLOSING COSTS EXPLAINED

When you buy a home, the business of closing costs always comes up. What are these closing costs anyway?

Title Insurance for instance, to make certain your property is free of any encumbrances. Loan Fee, Termite Report, as well as pro-rated taxes, for the buyer's share of the 6-month tax period. Tax and insurance Impounds, Notary and Recording Fees.

Bothersome details maybe, but all very important to the protection of your property. And preferably arranged through the expertise of your Realtor. When you buy a home, have a professional handle your affairs. And if you're selling a home, place it on Multiple Listing. Buying or selling, talk it over with a Realtor — your Real Estate professional.

CLOSING COSTS EXPLAINED

When you buy a home, the business of closing costs always comes up. What are these closing costs anyway?

Title Insurance for instance, to make certain your property is free of any encumbrances. Loan Fee, Termite Report, as well as pro-rated taxes, for the buyer's share of the 6-month tax period. Tax and insurance Impounds, Notary and Recording Fees.

Bothersome details maybe, but all very important to the protection of your property. And preferably arranged through the expertise of your Realtor. When you buy a home, have a professional handle your affairs. And if you're selling a home, place it on Multiple Listing. Buying or selling, talk it over with a Realtor — your Real Estate professional.

CLOSING COSTS EXPLAINED

When you buy a home, the business of closing costs always comes up. What are these closing costs anyway?

Title Insurance for instance, to make certain your property is free of any encumbrances. Loan Fee, Termite Report, as well as pro-rated taxes, for the buyer's share of the 6-month tax period. Tax and insurance Impounds, Notary and Recording Fees.

Bothersome details maybe, but all very important to the protection of your property. And preferably arranged through the expertise of your Realtor. When you buy a home, have a professional handle your affairs. And if you're selling a home, place it on Multiple Listing. Buying or selling, talk it over with a Realtor — your Real Estate professional.

London Mugging Rate Increases

LONDON (UPI) — Scotland Yard said Wednesday that the chance of becoming a mugging victim in London increased by almost one-third last year.

It said mugging cases rose by 32 per cent last year and by 129 per cent over figures for 1968.

"Perturbing," said a Scotland Yard spokesman.

Magee Asks But Doesn't Take Stand

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee interrupted his murder trial yesterday and said he wanted to testify but settled for just watching other witnesses.

Magee's attorney, Robert Carrow, said his client could take the stand if he wanted but Magee apparently decided not to.

"I want to testify," Magee exclaimed while Carrow was questioning Marin County Criminologist Fred Winbrandt.

Magee is charged with killing Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley during the Marin County Hall of Justice escape attempt in 1970 that left four dead.

Winbrandt was asked about a tape recording made of the Aug. 7 shooting that was put through a spectograph.

A report by police concluded that at least 14 shots were fired and four weapons were identified precisely. But Winbrandt told Carrow the report was too ambiguous for him to draw conclusions.

Early yesterday, Ramsey Clark, aiding in Magee's defense, questioned the heavy security at the trial. The former U.S. Attorney general said his wife and 20 other spectators had difficulty being admitted to the courtroom.

Review Of Capital Outlay To Continue

The Petaluma City Council will continue review of five-year major capital outlay requests at its meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

The council will consider new equipment requests totaling $809,825 and street construction projects totaling $7,041,200 to be funded by gasoline tax revenue. The major street project is $1,320,000 to widen North McDowell Boulevard from Lauren Drive to Corona Road.

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, light air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Campus Riot Tab: $170,000

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — State officials say disturbances at Southern University campuses in Baton Rouge and New Orleans last November will cost Louisiana taxpayers more than $170,000.

"I think the taxpayers should take note that the direct action of a few people on two college campuses has brought about a situation whereby tax money has to be used to replace these funds," Lt. Gov. James Fitzmorris said Thursday.

Life is perfected by death.

So said Elizabeth Barrett Browning. Death, the fascinating mystery we know so little about is the subject of a six part series by Jeff Greer, ace I-J reporter. The series will run right here in the I-J all next week.

Greer calls his series, "A Primer for Survivors," a comprehensive survey of all the aspects of death, from the changing customs of burial in today's world to funeral costs and organ banks. Look for this fascinating series to run all next week in your I-J.

London Mugging Rate Increases

LONDON (UPI) — Scotland Yard said Wednesday that the chance of becoming a mugging victim in London increased by almost one-third last year.

It said mugging cases rose by 32 per cent last year and by 129 per cent over figures for 1968.

"Perturbing," said a Scotland Yard spokesman.

Magee Asks But Doesn't Take Stand

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Quentin convict Rucheil Magee interrupted his murder trial yesterday and said he wanted to testify but settled for just watching other witnesses.

Magee's attorney, Robert Carrow, said his client could take the stand if he wanted but Magee apparently decided not to.

"I want to testify," Magee exclaimed while Carrow was questioning Marin County Criminologist Fred Winbrandt.

Magee is charged with killing Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley during the Marin County Hall of Justice escape attempt in 1970 that left four dead.

Winbrandt was asked about a tape recording made of the Aug. 7 shooting that was put through a spectograph.

A report by police concluded that at least 14 shots were fired and four weapons were identified precisely. But Winbrandt told Carrow the report was too ambiguous for him to draw conclusions.

Early yesterday, Ramsey Clark, aiding in Magee's defense, questioned the heavy security at the trial. The former U.S. Attorney general said his wife and 20 other spectators had difficulty being admitted to the courtroom.

Review Of Capital Outlay To Continue

The Petaluma City Council will continue review of five-year major capital outlay requests at its meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

The council will consider new equipment requests totaling $809,825 and street construction projects totaling $7,041,200 to be funded by gasoline tax revenue. The major street project is $1,320,000 to widen North McDowell Boulevard from Lauren Drive to Corona Road.

Candidates' Night Is Slated Thursday

The six candidates for the Mill Valley School District board have been invited to attend. Mrs. Herbert Lawson, PTA president, will be moderator.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, March 10, the 69th day of 1973 with 296 to follow.

The moon is approaching its first quarter. The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury and Saturn.

Dudley Buck, American composer and pioneer in the field of organ music, was born March 10, 1839.

On this day in history:

In 1862, the United States Tresury issued the first American paper money, in denominations from $5 to $1,000.

In 1945, B29 bombers of the U.S. Air Force began incendiary raids on Japan in the waning days of World War II.

In 1969, James Earl Ray pleaded guilty to the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King and was sentenced to 99 years in prison.

A thought for the day: President Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander of Allied Forced in World War II, said, "In the final choice, a soldier's pack is not so heavy a burden as a prisoner's chains."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, light air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Campus Riot Tab: $170,000

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — State officials say disturbances at Southern University campuses in Baton Rouge and New Orleans last November will cost Louisiana taxpayers more than $170,000.

"I think the taxpayers should take note that the direct action of a few people on two college campuses has brought about a situation whereby tax money has to be used to replace these funds," Lt. Gov. James Fitzmorris said Thursday.

Life is perfected by death.

So said Elizabeth Barrett Browning. Death, the fascinating mystery we know so little about is the subject of a six part series by Jeff Greer, ace I-J reporter. The series will run right here in the I-J all next week.

Greer calls his series, "A Primer for Survivors," a comprehensive survey of all the aspects of death, from the changing customs of burial in today's world to funeral costs and organ banks. Look for this fascinating series to run all next week in your I-J.

Cardinal Manning Rated Among Most Progressive

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Timothy Manning, the boy from County Cork who heads the fourth largest Roman Catholic Archdiocese in the United States, is something of an ecclesiastical superstar.

Manning, 63, was appointed bishop at 36, one of the youngest prelates in church history.

In his two years as leader of the Los Angeles archdiocese, he has become known as one of the most progressive Catholic churchmen in America.

CARDINAL MANNING
Ecclesiastical superstar

His elevation gives the entire area west of St. Louis its first active Cardinal since Cardinal James Francis McIntyre, 85, chose retirement two years ago.

Since McIntyre still lives at St. Basil's rectory, the Los Angeles area will now have two resident cardinals.

Manning was born Nov. 15, 1909, in Ballingeary, County Cork, and still speaks with a shadow of a brogue.

He studied four years under the Jesuits at Mungret College in Limerick, and entered St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park, Calif., at 18.

Ordained at St. Vibiana's in downtown Los Angeles in 1934, he said his first Mass there and was elevated to bishop there in 1946.

He has spent most of his priestly life in Los Angeles, and still lives in St. Vibiana's rectory, in what now borders skid row, and he says it is there that "God willing, I shall one day lie before the altar in death."

Manning studied at the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome, where he earned a doctorate in canon law, and served as secretary to McIntyre's predecessor, Archbishop John J. Cantwell.

Manning was the first bishop of the Fresno see, serving for two years before returning to the Los Angeles area in 1969.

As Archbishop, Manning allowed priests to provide young men with information on legally avoiding the draft, and sponsored voter registration drives.

He sent priests working in black parishes to school to study black culture, and taxed wealthy parishes to pay for improvements in inner-city churches.

He regularly visits churches of his own and other faiths, and gave his first major address at Wilshire Temple, the largest Reform Jewish Temple in the world.

The tall, slender priest with salt and pepper hair, describes himself as a "moderate."

A gifted orator and writer, he believes that "the church must engage in conversations about the world's problems. We must listen to the social turmoil of our day. We must have dialog with men about it. We must apply the healing message of the gospel to those issues."

Roman Catholic Church Insists That Satan Does, Indeed, Exist

By BARRY JAMES

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The devil's deepest wile, according to French poet Charles Baudelaire, is to persuade humanity he does not exist.

Now the Vatican has a campaign going to give the devil his due before he drops out of public sight altogether.

Pope Paul VI dedicated an entire speech recently, for the first time in his nine-year pontificate, to the subject of Satan.

This was followed by talks on Vatican radio and special articles in the Vatican press.

The Pope said Satan truly exists as an active force in the world, and used these words about him:

"A dark and enemy agent ... a terrible, mysterious and fearsome reality ... a live, spiritual, perverted and perverting being ... the enemy number one, the tempter par excellence ... the hidden enemy who sows errors and misfortunes in human history."

The Pope asked his listeners not to treat his words as "superstitious or unreal."

But that is exactly how part of Italy's secular press treated them, including a Communist newspaper which ran a tongue in-cheek "interview with Satan."

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano snapped back that such articles themselves showed the influence of Satan.

L'Osservatore even prepared a special page on the devil.

The Rev. John Navone of Seattle, Wash., a professor of theology at Rome's Gregorian University, who organized a panel discussion on Satan last year, said the debate about the devil brings up the whole subject of spirits, including demonds and angels — a subject which has largely lapsed into oblivion over the past decade.

Navone said interest in spirits is evidenced by such modern fads as occultism, mindbending drugs, astrology, psychic experiences and oriental religions in western societies. Navone said men today tend to think of the devil — if they think of him at all — as a fun figure, a type of "Satanic Playmate," rather than the cruelly evil figure of the scriptures and literature who uses men for his own purpose.

The Pope's approach to religious faith usually has stressed the positive and pragmatic, both for ecumenical reasons and to keep the church credible to modern man. L'Osservatore Roman once went out of its way to inform its readers that the pontiff does believe in hell, even though he never mentioned the subject.

But faced by what he reportedly sees as a worsening crisis of faith and authority in the church, the Pope has been getting ever more pessimistic.

Last June, he suggested that Satan had entered the church through some "fissure" to stifle the fruits of the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

Apart from that passing reference, however, he had never publicly dealt with the devil until now. Talking about Satan meant delving back into language that has been largely discarded by modern theologians. For even among them, fiery Lucifer with his horns and tail has descended to the level of a vaudeville joke.

The Pope did not say what the devil looks like. He was trying to explain what, in his view, Satan IS like.

According to Paul, Satan is a being of vast malignity, sophistication and treachery who is seducing modern men with drugs, pornography, materialism and experiments in the occult. Whole nations, he said, have fallen under Satan's grip, although he left it to the audience to decide which ones.

Vatican Radio said the Pope did not mention Satan to inculcate fear. But it said he would be ignoring a fundamental reality of faith if he did not put people on their guard against the devil.

"As in every battle, the greatest mistake is to underestimate or even ignore the enemy," the radio said.

In the Pope's view, modern man relies too much on psychology, psychiatry and sociology to explain the phenomenon of evil, while losing his conception of a supernatural power of wickedness.

L'Osservatore Romano said many Catholics had been surprised by the Pope's speech because they had become "accustomed to the idea that Satan was a metaphor, an emblem, a spook for children and primitives."

Yet, the newspaper said, symbols of Satanism are flourishing everywhere. It mentioned fortune tellers, dabblers in the occult, witches and witchdoctors, "madmen and criminals who call themselves Satan and, like Satan, go in for the trade of murder," (an apparent reference to the Charles Manson "family"), demonic rites, sadism and sexual orgies "even in the most civilized cities."

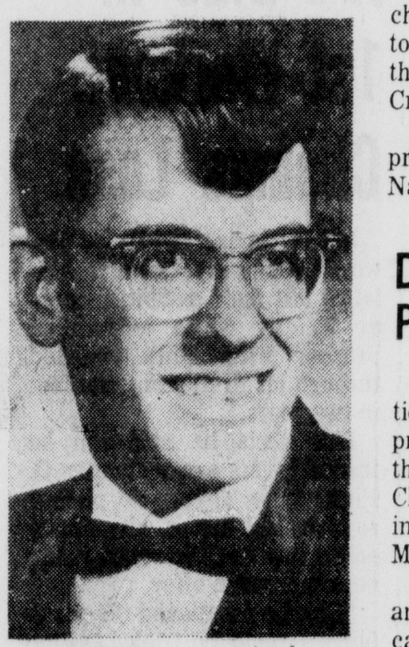
Featured will be a children's parade, arts and crafts activities, costume making and a special dinner with homemade hamentaschen.

Before dinner, Joyce Rose will tell the story of purim and after dinner there will be singing by the Hebrew Academy Children's Choir, led by Ze'ev Ben Shimon.

Registration deadline is Thursday, March 15. More information is available from Yvonne Rich at 479-2000.



ORGANIST — John Stump, organist of the First Presbyterian Church of Alameda, will present a recital at 8 p.m. tomorrow on the Centennial Memorial Organ of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 1123 Court Street, San Rafael. He will play works by Bach, Brahms, Franck, Pinkham, Messiaen and Vivaldi. A reception will follow the public recital.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION — Valley Baptist Church, 3 North San Pedro Road, will be the site tomorrow of a 20th anniversary celebration featuring special praise and thanksgiving. The church dates from its incorporation in 1953.

Anniversary Celebration At Valley Baptist Church

"Twenty Years of Blessing" will be the theme tomorrow when Valley Baptist Church, 3 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael, celebrates its 20th anniversary.

Started as a home Bible study in 1950, in the Bret Harte area, Valley has become a thriving church of about 225 members in attendance. The anniversary date is actually based upon its incorporation in 1953, when Rev. Stanley Tilley was Valley's first pastor.

In 1954, a building was purchased and moved from San Anselmo to Bret Harte. The following year the church affiliated with the Conservative Baptist Association of America to identify itself as a Bible believing and teaching church.

Rev. Stanley Walsh came to Valley as pastor in 1956 and under his leadership the church moved to its present location and built a small chapel. Since then, many improvements have taken place in the facility to accommodate the expanding needs of the membership and friends.

Rev. Warren Conrad came to Valley in 1963 and has led the church for the past ten years, having seen the church triple in size since his coming.

Another addition has been the Valley Christian School, which began in 1969 and has attained capacity attendance while excelling in academic achievement. Under the direction of Warren Leuty, the school expects to carry grades kindergarten through eighth this fall.

To celebrate the past 20 years of growth, Valley is having a special Sunday for praise and thanksgiving tomorrow. Members, friends, and many who have moved from the area have been invited back for the day of special activities.

A program of special interst is planned for the day highlighted by the presence of Valley's first pastor, Rev. Tilley, who will speak in a 4 p.m. service. Refreshments and fellowship will follow.

Bell Tower To Become Memorial

A program to repair the bell tower and, at the same time, honor the memory of a long-time resident and church member has been launched by Calvary Presbyterian Church of Bolinas.

When repaired, the bell tower will be dedicated as a memorial to Harvey Crotts, Bolinas resident for many years and active member of the church until his death in September, 1972.

The bell in the bell tower cannot presently be rung because of extensive work needed to rbuild the mounting, according to C. Jackson Napier, clerk of the session.

Donations are being accepted for the bell tower project and checks should be made payable to the church, with a notation that the donation is for the Crotts Memorial.

A list of all donors will be presented to the Crotts family, Napier said.

Dignity Of Man Program Slated

The Dignity of Man Foundation will present a multi-media program by Richard Smith at the Community Congregational Church at 145 Rock Hill Drive in Tiburon on Tuesday evening, March 20, at 7:30.

Smith has traveled the world and through the lens of his camera and the man himself, attempts the task of communicating the power of the concept of the dignity of man.

An exhibit of these photos is currently on display in the church. Those attending the program Tuesday are invited to bring a picnic supper if the weather permits.

3,000 Attend Witness Meet

A delegation of 250 Jehovah's Witnesses from San Rafael attended a two-day semiannual circuit assembly held at the Oakland Auditorium last weekend. Some 3,000 persons from 24 East Bay and Marin County congregations were at the gathering, according to Wayne Kitchel, presiding overseer of the local congregation.

At their next circuit assembly, Jehovah's Witnesses will be meeting at their new Bay Area Assembly Hall, a 33,000 square foot facility now under construction in Fremont which is scheduled for completion around next May.

Woman Activist Will Preach In San Rafael

Anne Bennett of Berkeley, peace activist, women's leader, and seminary teacher will be the guest preacher at the 10:15 a.m. service of the First Congregational Church of San Rafael tomorrow.

She will speak about the women's movement in relation to the Judeo-Christian heritage of the churches, dealing with such issues as our exclusion of femininity from our conception of God, and the possible future of woen in the churches.

Following the worship service, she will lead a discussion of her sermon and will be available to respond to questions and comments relating to the women's movement.

Choice Of Services Offered

A choice of three departments of Christian education will be available tomorrow at Living Word Lutheran Church, 400 Ignacio Boulevard in Novato, beginning at 6:30 p.m. on the first Sunday in Lent.

Sunday school is avilable for the children and adults may participate in any of three offerings. A new contemporary Bible class on the Patriarchs will be led by elders Irwin C. Swett and Bruce J. Marggraf; a new course in Christian doctrine, "The Wonderful Works of God," will be conducted by Pastors Armin K. E. Keibel and Gerald E. Geiger and Vicar Brian S. Terrell; and "Paradise Regained" will be the topic of the vesper service at 7:30 p.m.

The Living Word Lutheran Church is a branch of the Wisconsin Synod and uses the church at 400 Ignacio Boulevard. All services are open to the public.

St. Patricks' Day Dinner Scheduled

A long-time Sausalito tradition will be continued Saturday, March 17, when the city's Star of the Sea church holds its annual St. Patrick's Day dinner.

The public is invited to the 6 to 8:30 p.m. affair in the church hall, which traditionally draws many Southern Marinites for a celebration of the Irish holiday.

OF GOD AND MAN

Passing Buck Nothing New

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

It started in the Garden of Eden.

When the Lord asked Adam why he ate the forbidden fruit, Adam replied:

"It was the woman you gave me for a companion. She gave me the fruit and I ate it."

Eve was equally quick to shift the blame. "The serpent tricked me," she said.

Refusing to admit responsibility for misdeeds, trying to pass the buck to someone else, have been conspicuous features of human character through all centuries.

When Moses came down from Mount Sinai and found his brother Aaron had yielded to popular clamor and provided the Israelites with a golden calf to worship as an idol, Aaron had a glib explanation for his apostasy:

"Do not be angry, sir," he told Moses. "The people were deeply troubled...and they said to me, 'Make us gods.' So they gave me their gold. I threw it in the fire, and out came this calf."

Pontius Pilate couldn't find a legitimate reason to sentence Jesus to death. But the mob was shouting for an execution. So Pilate, weakly assenting to the demand, "took water and washed his hands in full view of the people, saying 'My hands are clean of this man's blood.'"

It still goes on, in our own time.

At the My Lai trials, each defendant has stoutly insisted it wasn't his idea to murder unarmed women and children: he was just obeying orders from somebody else.

In recent years, the ancient human tendency to shift the blame to someone else has undergone a significant refinement. Now we are reluctant to hold any individual personally responsible for crimes such as murder, rape and drug-pushing. Morally, we say, the guilt really lies with society as a whole. We are collectively to blame for allowing the existence of racism or poverty or other social conditions which breed criminal conduct.

There is some truth in this. We should never forget in our horrified reaction to any crime that something we, the people, helped to do, or left undone, may have been a factor in creating the rage, frustration or despair which issued in violence.

But it is dangerously easy to go too far in this direction, so we wind up making collective guilt a scapegoat for personal guilt.

Many people suffer the indignity and injustice of racial discrimination. Only a few become murderers and muggers because of it. Many young men have been sent to Vietnam to fight a war they found futile. Only a few worked off their frustration by gunning down helpless women and children.

Sure, the serpent tempted Eve. But it was Eve herself who let curiosity take precedence over obeying the Lord. And nobody twisted Adam's arm. He just let a woman talk him into doing a foolish thing — as men have been doing ever since.

No matter what the extenuating circumstances maybe, each of us is morally responsible for his own conduct. To deny that, or even to fuzz it over with glib generalities about parental influence or social environment, is to make ourselves less than human.

Cardinal Manning Rated Among Most Progressive

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Timothy Manning, the boy from County Cork who heads the fourth largest Roman Catholic Archdiocese in the United States, is something of an ecclesiastical superstar.

Manning, 63, was appointed bishop at 36, one of the youngest prelates in church history.

In his two years as leader of the Los Angeles archdiocese, he has become known as one of the most progressive Catholic churchmen in America.

CARDINAL MANNING
Ecclesiastical superstar

His elevation gives the entire area west of St. Louis its first active Cardinal since Cardinal James Francis McIntyre, 85, chose retirement two years ago.

Since McIntyre still lives at St. Basil's rectory, the Los Angeles area will now have two resident cardinals.

Manning was born Nov. 15, 1909, in Ballingeary, County Cork, and still speaks with a shadow of a brogue.

He studied four years under the Jesuits at Mungret College in Limerick, and entered St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park, Calif., at 18.

Ordained at St. Vibiana's in downtown Los Angeles in 1934, he said his first Mass there and was elevated to bishop there in 1946.

He has spent most of his priestly life in Los Angeles, and still lives in St. Vibiana's rectory, in what now borders skid row, and he says it is there that "God willing, I shall one day lie before the altar in death."

Manning studied at the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome, where he earned a doctorate in canon law, and served as secretary to McIntyre's predecessor, Archbishop John J. Cantwell.

Manning was the first bishop of the Fresno see, serving for two years before returning to the Los Angeles area in 1969.

As Archbishop, Manning allowed priests to provide young men with information on legally avoiding the draft, and sponsored voter registration drives.

He sent priests working in black parishes to school to study black culture, and taxed wealthy parishes to pay for improvements in inner-city churches.

He regularly visits churches of his own and other faiths, and gave his first major address at Wilshire Temple, the largest Reform Jewish Temple in the world.

The tall, slender priest with salt and pepper hair, describes himself as a "moderate."

A gifted orator and writer, he believes that "the church must engage in conversations about the world's problems. We must listen to the social turmoil of our day. We must have dialog with men about it. We must apply the healing message of the gospel to those issues."

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION — Valley Baptist Church, 3 North San Pedro Road, will be the site tomorrow of a 20th anniversary celebration featuring special praise and thanksgiving. The church dates from its incorporation in 1953.

Anniversary Celebration At Valley Baptist Church

"Twenty Years of Blessing" will be the theme tomorrow when Valley Baptist Church, 3 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael, celebrates its 20th anniversary.

Started as a home Bible study in 1950, in the Bret Harte area, Valley has become a thriving church of about 225 members in attendance. The anniversary date is actually based upon its incorporation in 1953, when Rev. Stanley Tilley was Valley's first pastor.

In 1954, a building was purchased and moved from San Anselmo to Bret Harte. The following year the church affiliated with the Conservative Baptist Association of America to identify itself as a Bible believing and teaching church.

Rev. Stanley Walsh came to Valley as pastor in 1956 and under his leadership the church moved to its present location and built a small chapel. Since then, many improvements have taken place in the facility to accommodate the expanding needs of the membership and friends.

Rev. Warren Conrad came to Valley in 1963 and has led the church for the past ten years, having seen the church triple in size since his coming.

Another addition has been the Valley Christian School, which began in 1969 and has attained capacity attendance while excelling in academic achievement. Under the direction of Warren Leuty, the school expects to carry grades kindergarten through eighth this fall.

To celebrate the past 20 years of growth, Valley is having a special Sunday for praise and thanksgiving tomorrow. Members, friends, and many who have moved from the area have been invited back for the day of special activities.

A program of special interst is planned for the day highlighted by the presence of Valley's first pastor, Rev. Tilley, who will speak in a 4 p.m. service. Refreshments and fellowship will follow.

Roman Catholic Church Insists That Satan Does, Indeed, Exist

By BARRY JAMES

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The devil's deepest wile, according to French poet Charles Baudelaire, is to persuade humanity he does not exist.

Now the Vatican has a campaign going to give the devil his due before he drops out of public sight altogether.

Pope Paul VI dedicated an entire speech recently, for the first time in his nine-year pontificate, to the subject of Satan.

This was followed by talks on Vatican radio and special articles in the Vatican press.

The Pope said Satan truly exists as an active force in the world, and used these words about him:

"A dark and enemy agent ... a terrible, mysterious and fearsome reality ... a live, spiritual, perverted and perverting being ... the enemy number one, the tempter par excellence ... the hidden enemy who sows errors and misfortunes in human history."

The Pope asked his listeners not to treat his words as "superstitious or unreal."

But that is exactly how part of Italy's secular press treated them, including a Communist newspaper which ran a tongue in-cheek "interview with Satan."

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano snapped back that such articles themselves showed the influence of Satan.

L'Osservatore even prepared a special page on the devil.

The Rev. John Navone of Seattle, Wash., a professor of theology at Rome's Gregorian University, who organized a panel discussion on Satan last year, said the debate about the devil brings up the whole subject of spirits, including demonds and angels — a subject which has largely lapsed into oblivion over the past decade.

Navone said interest in spirits is evidenced by such modern fads as occultism, mindbending drugs, astrology, psychic experiences and oriental religions in western societies. Navone said men today tend to think of the devil — if they think of him at all — as a fun figure, a type of "Satanic Playmate," rather than the cruelly evil figure of the scriptures and literature who uses men for his own purpose.

The Pope's approach to religious faith usually has stressed the positive and pragmatic, both for ecumenical reasons and to keep the church credible to modern man. L'Osservatore Roman once went out of its way to inform its readers that the pontiff does believe in hell, even though he never mentioned the subject.

But faced by what he reportedly sees as a worsening crisis of faith and authority in the church, the Pope has been getting ever more pessimistic.

Last June, he suggested that Satan had entered the church through some "fissure" to stifle the fruits of the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

Apart from that passing reference, however, he had never publicly dealt with the devil until now. Talking about Satan meant delving back into language that has been largely discarded by modern theologians. For even among them, fiery Lucifer with his horns and tail has descended to the level of a vaudeville joke.

The Pope did not say what the devil looks like. He was trying to explain what, in his view, Satan IS like.

According to Paul, Satan is a being of vast malignity, sophistication and treachery who is seducing modern men with drugs, pornography, materialism and experiments in the occult. Whole nations, he said, have fallen under Satan's grip, although he left it to the audience to decide which ones.

Vatican Radio said the Pope did not mention Satan to inculcate fear. But it said he would be ignoring a fundamental reality of faith if he did not put people on their guard against the devil.

"As in every battle, the greatest mistake is to underestimate or even ignore the enemy," the radio said.

In the Pope's view, modern man relies too much on psychology, psychiatry and sociology to explain the phenomenon of evil, while losing his conception of a supernatural power of wickedness.

L'Osservatore Romano said many Catholics had been surprised by the Pope's speech because they had become "accustomed to the idea that Satan was a metaphor, an emblem, a spook for children and primitives."

Yet, the newspaper said, symbols of Satanism are flourishing everywhere. It mentioned fortune tellers, dabblers in the occult, witches and witchdoctors, "madmen and criminals who call themselves Satan and, like Satan, go in for the trade of murder," (an apparent reference to the Charles Manson "family"), demonic rites, sadism and sexual orgies "even in the most civilized cities."

Purim Party Scheduled By Temple

A family purim party will be held Sunday, March 18, at Temple Rodef Sholom, 170 N. San Pedro Road, San Rafael from 4 to 7:30 p.m.

Featured will be a children's parade, arts and crafts activities, costume making and a special dinner with homemade hamentaschen.

Before dinner, Joyce Rose will tell the story of purim and after dinner there will be singing by the Hebrew Academy Children's Choir, led by Ze'ev Ben Shimon.

Registration deadline is Thursday, March 15. More information is available from Yvonne Rich at 479-2000.

ORGANIST — John Stump, organist of the First Presbyterian Church of Alameda, will present a recital at 8 p.m. tomorrow on the Centennial Memorial Organ of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 1123 Court Street, San Rafael. He will play works by Bach, Brahms, Franck, Pinkham, Messiaen and Vivaldi. A reception will follow the public recital.

Bell Tower To Become Memorial

A program to repair the bell tower and, at the same time, honor the memory of a longtime resident and church member has been launched by Calvary Presbyterian Church of Bolinas.

When repaired, the bell tower will be dedicated as a memorial to Harvey Crotts, Bolinas resident for many years and active member of the church until his death in September, 1972.

The bell in the bell tower cannot presently be rung because of extensive work needed to rbuild the mounting, according to C. Jackson Napier, clerk of the session.

Donations are being accepted for the bell tower project and checks should be made payable to the church, with a notation that the donation is for the Crotts Memorial.

A list of all donors will be presented to the Crotts family, Napier said.

Dignity Of Man Program Slated

The Dignity of Man Foundation will present a multi-media program by Richard Smith at the Community Congregational Church at 145 Rock Hill Drive in Tiburon on Tuesday evening, March 20, at 7:30.

Smith has traveled the world and through the lens of his camera and the man himself, attempts the task of communicating the power of the concept of the dignity of man.

An exhibit of these photos is currently on display in the church. Those attending the program Tuesday are invited to bring a picnic supper if the weather permits.

3,000 Attend Witness Meet

A delegation of 250 Jehovah's Witnesses from San Rafael attended a two-day semiannual circuit assembly held at the Oakland Auditorium last weekend. Some 3,000 persons from 24 East Bay and Marin County congregations were at the gathering, according to Wayne Kitchel, presiding overseer of the local congregation.

At their next circuit assembly, Jehovah's Witnesses will be meeting at their new Bay Area Assembly Hall, a 33,000 square foot facility now under construction in Fremont which is scheduled for completion around next May.

Woman Activist Will Preach In San Rafael

Anne Bennett of Berkeley, peace activist, women's leader, and seminary teacher will be the guest preacher at the 10:15 a.m. service of the First Congregational Church of San Rafael tomorrow.

She will speak about the women's movement in relation to the Judeo-Christian heritage of the churches, dealing with such issues as our exclusion of femininity from our conception of God, and the possible future of woen in the churches.

Following the worship service, she will lead a discussion of her sermon and will be available to respond to questions and comments relating to the women's movement.

Choice Of Services Offered

A choice of three departments of Christian education will be available tomorrow at Living Word Lutheran Church, 400 Ignacio Boulevard in Novato, beginning at 6:30 p.m. on the first Sunday in Lent.

Sunday school is avilable for the children and adults may participate in any of three offerings. A new contemporary Bible class on the Patriarchs will be led by elders Irwin C. Swett and Bruce J. Marggraf; a new course in Christian doctrine, "The Wonderful Works of God," will be conducted by Pastors Armin K. E. Keibel and Gerald E. Geiger and Vicar Brian S. Terrell; and "Paradise Regained" will be the topic of the vesper service at 7:30 p.m.

The Living Word Lutheran Church is a branch of the Wisconsin Synod and uses the church at 400 Ignacio Boulevard. All services are open to the public.

St. Patricks' Day Dinner Scheduled

A long-time Sausalito tradition will be continued Saturday, March 17, when the city's Star of the Sea church holds its annual St. Patrick's Day dinner.

The public is invited to the 6 to 8:30 p.m. affair in the church hall, which traditionally draws many Southern Marinites for a celebration of the Irish holiday.

OF GOD AND MAN

Passing Buck Nothing New

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

It started in the Garden of Eden.

When the Lord asked Adam why he ate the forbidden fruit, Adam replied:

"It was the woman you gave me for a companion. She gave me the fruit and I ate it."

Eve was equally quick to shift the blame. "The serpent tricked me," she said.

Refusing to admit responsibility for misdeeds, trying to pass the buck to someone else, have been conspicuous features of human character through all centuries.

When Moses came down from Mount Sinai and found his brother Aaron had yielded to popular clamor and provided the Israelites with a golden calf to worship as an idol, Aaron had a glib explanation for his apostasy:

"Do not be angry, sir," he told Moses. "The people were deeply troubled...and they said to me, 'Make us gods.' So they gave me their gold. I threw it in the fire, and out came this calf."

Pontius Pilate couldn't find a legitimate reason to sentence Jesus to death. But the mob was shouting for an execution. So Pilate, weakly assenting to the demand, "took water and washed his hands in full view of the people, saying 'My hands are clean of this man's blood.'"

It still goes on, in our own time.

At the My Lai trials, each defendant has stoutly insisted it wasn't his idea to murder unarmed women and children: he was just obeying orders from somebody else.

In recent years, the ancient human tendency to shift the blame to someone else has undergone a significant refinement. Now we are reluctant to hold any individual personally responsible for crimes such as murder, rape and drug-pushing. Morally, we say, the guilt really lies with society as a whole. We are collectively to blame for allowing the existence of racism or poverty or other social conditions which breed criminal conduct.

There is some truth in this. We should never forget in our horrified reaction to any crime that something we, the people, helped to do, or left undone, may have been a factor in creating the rage, frustration or despair which issued in violence.

But it is dangerously easy to go too far in this direction, so we wind up making collective guilt a scapegoat for personal guilt.

Many people suffer the indignity and injustice of racial discrimination. Only a few become murderers and muggers because of it. Many young men have been sent to Vietnam to fight a war they found futile. Only a few worked off their frustration by gunning down helpless women and children.

Sure, the serpent tempted Eve. But it was Eve herself who let curiosity take precedence over obeying the Lord. And nobody twisted Adam's arm. He just let a woman talk him into doing a foolish thing — as men have been doing ever since.

No matter what the extenuating circumstances maybe, each of us is morally responsible for his own conduct. To deny that, or even to fuzz it over with glib generalities about parental influence or social environment, is to make ourselves less than human.

London Mugging Rate Increases

LONDON (UPI) — Scotland Yard said Wednesday that the chance of becoming a mugging victim in London increased by almost one-third last year.

It said mugging cases rose by 32 per cent last year and by 129 per cent over figures for 1968.

"Perturbing," said a Scotland Yard spokesman.

Magee Asks But Doesn't Take Stand

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee interrupted his murder trial yesterday and said he wanted to testify but settled for just watching other witnesses.

Magee's attorney, Robert Carrow, said his client could take the stand if he wanted but Magee apparently decided not to.

"I want to testify," Magee exclaimed while Carrow was questioning Marin County Criminologist Fred Winbrandt.

Magee is charged with killing Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley during the Marin County Hall of Justice escape attempt in 1970 that left four dead.

Winbrandt was asked about a tape recording made of the Aug. 7 shooting that was put through a spectograph.

A report by police concluded that at least 14 shots were fired and four weapons were identified precisely. But Winbrandt told Carrow the report was too ambiguous for him to draw conclusions.

Early yesterday, Ramsey Clark, aiding in Magee's defense, questioned the heavy security at the trial. The former U.S. Attorney general said his wife and 20 other spectators had difficulty being admitted to the courtroom.

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, light air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Campus Riot Tab: $170,000

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — State officials say disturbances at Southern University campuses in Baton Rouge and New Orleans last November will cost Louisiana taxpayers more than $170,000.

"I think the taxpayers should take note that the direct action of a few people on two college campuses has brought about a situation whereby tax money has to be used to replace these funds," Lt. Gov. James Fitzmorris said Thursday.

Life is perfected by death.

So said Elizabeth Barrett Browning. Death, the fascinating mystery we know so little about is the subject of a six part series by Jeff Greer, ace I-J reporter. The series will run right here in the I-J all next week.

Greer calls his series, "A Primer for Survivors," a comprehensive survey of all the aspects of death, from the changing customs of burial in today's world to funeral costs and organ banks. Look for this fascinating series to run all next week in your I-J.

Disappointed Drake Plays Salesian '5' Tonight

By LEW CODDINGTON

OAKLAND — In the locker rooms and at the press tables, there was wonder and respect for how far Drake High School had come, but among the Pirates there was only disappointment at how far they could have gone.

After playing defending champion San Joaquin Memorial of Fresno to a standstill for three quarters, Drake yielded to the inevitability of Clifton Pondexter and suffered a 61-56 defeat last night in the semifinals of the basketball Tournament of Champions.

The Prates will play for third place this evening at 6:30 at the Oakland Coliseum Arena against Salesian High of Richmond, 87-58 loser to Berkeley in the other semi-final game.

Memorial will defend its championship at 8 p.m. against Berkeley. In other games yesterday, Wilson of San Francisco rallied from 22 points down to stun Castlemont of Oakland, 70-69, and Arroyo of San Lorenzo edged Dublin, 65-62, setting up a Wilson-Arroyo clash at 5 p.m. for the consolation title.

"When Drake took the floor last (Thursday) night, people laughed at them," said Memorial's expansive, expressive coach Tom Cleary after last night's game. "They laughed. But I'll tell you — that team is no joke. They're a remarkable team. Their coach has class, and the players are the same."

Short to the point of absurdity and carrying the burden of Marin's past failures in the tournament, Drake now 25-6 surprised virtually everybody by stunning once-beaten Castlemont, 67-61, and carrying a 46-45 lead into the fourth quarter against Memorial (now 24-5).

Then Cleary called for a "high-low post," an offensive maneuver in which forward Nelson Beazley took the ball outside and looked for big Pondexter near the bucket. Pondexter's sophomore brother Sam set up inside, then cleared out, leaving room for Cliff.

The maneuver sounds complicated, but its execution was brutally simple. When the fluttering lob passes came in to the 6-foot-7 senior All-American, he went to the hoop with fierce single-mindedness, scoring five cloe-range baskets in the first four minutes and nine seconds of the fourth quarter as Memorial went ahead, 57-46.

During the same stretch, Drake turned the ball over four consecutive times, and failed to get off a shot from the floor in the first 4:22 of the period.

Drake coach Pete Hayward, ever a perfectionist, repeatedly turned aside efforts by San Francisco reporters to get him to praise his team's unending, conspicuous hustle. "They (the players) are going to realize in the next couple of days what they could have done —they could have won the game," he said.

Hayward lauded 6-0 junior forward Eddie Joe Chavez for "keeping us in the game offensively," and praised the defensive play of 5-7 senior guard Dan Howard, who was erroneously introduced to the crowd of 10,500 as "Howard Daniel."

The throng included about 500 vocal Pirate fans wearing paper hats made from the green paper of the sports section of the San Francisco Chronicle.

Chavez made 10 of 14 shots from the floor and scored 21 points, second only to Pondexter's 27. The underpublicized Daniel — er, Howard — led all playmakers with seven assists and was constantly making statistically immeasurable contributions by forcing mistakes and scooping up loose balls.

Drake jumped out to a 6-0 lead on three buckets by Chavez, but Memorial rallied to turn the game into a see-saw struggle, finally going ahead at the half, 31-26.

The Pirates made six of their first seven shots after intermission, with all five players scoring, to take a 38-33 lead. Their quickness and persistence were turning the game around, "but we let 'em (Memorial) off the hook," in Hayward's words. "We made 11 turnovers in the third quarter."

"We had to slow it down," said Pondexter afterward. "If we take our time and go to our basic offense, they can't keep up with it."

Slowing down the pace also kept Memorial, which substituted only rarely, from being worn down late in the game — a fate which befell Castlemont Thursday and countless other teams during the year.

And it enabled Pondexter to leave smiling beneath his knit, tasselled cap, contemplating the joys of playing for the title for the second straight year.

Drake 14 12 20 10 - 56
Memorial 14 17 14 16 - 61

Drake — Howard 3-0-6, Guidi 1-0-2, Asay 2-0-4, Herbert 3-2-8, Chavez 10-1-21, Shaw 1-0-2, Carlisle 1-0-2, Channell 4-1-9, Trimble 1-0-2. Totals: 26-4-56.

Memorial — Caston 7-0-14, Allen 1-2-4, S. Pondexter 4-0-8, C. Pondexter 13-1-27, Beazley 1-6-8. Totats: 26-9-61.

Expanding Relief Role Plans For Giants' Sosa

PHOENIX — Elias Sosa is described in the 1973 Press-Radio-TV Guide of the San Francisco Giants as "a shy 22-year-old right-hander from the Dominican Republic."

Actually, there's nothing shy about Sosa. He isn't timid and he isn't easily frightened. In fact, Sosa thrives on emergency situations. Sosa is a relief pitcher.

Until Jerry Johnson was claimed from the Giants by the Cleveland Indians for a $20,000 waiver fee, Sosa didn't receive much attention from either press or radio representatives covering the spring training camp of the Giants.

HOWEVER, JOHNSON'S departure created a vacancy in the Giant bullpen. And that suddenly put the spotlight on Sosa as the logical candidate to fill it.

"It's a big chance for me," said Sosa. "I know I can do the job. But I don't think I should talk too much before doing the job. Talk should come after a job is done."

LAST SEASON Sosa appeared in 55 games for the Phoenix AAA farm club of the Giants and compiled 120 innings during which he struck out 92 and walked 44. He wound up with a 10-2 record and 2.93 ERA. All but four of his appearances were in relief roles.

To see what Sosa could do in the majors, the Giants called him up for a trial last September after Phoenix completed its Pacific Coast League season. Sosa appeared in eight games, pitched a total of 16 innings during which he struck out 10 and walked 12. He allowed four runs. His ERA was 2.25.

THAT ENTITLED Sosa to a 1973 spring training camp invitation. But until Johnson was waived to Cleveland as the climax of a contract stalemate, Sosa was just another name on the roster of the Giants. He was rated behind Jim Barr and Randy Moffitt in the bullpen department.

Sosa still is considered a No. 3 bullpen candidate behind Barr and Moffitt but now a No. 3 candidate with much brighter prospects.

CHARLIE FOX thinks Ssa has an excellent chance of joining the bullpen crew. "He can throw strikes," said Fox, "and that's what relief work is all about."

Sosa's best pitch is a sinker. He uses it 80 per cent of the time but isn't afraid to throw his slider which he describes as "a hard one."

FACE KINGS TONIGHT

Day Of Reckoning Nearing For Seals

OAKLAND (UPI) — A day of reckoning is fast approaching for the California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League.

While rumors swirl that the last-place team in the NHL West might be moved, disbanded or sold to the NHL, the Seals regrouped tonight for a game against the Kings in Los Angeles. Sunday afternoon the Seals are back home for a matinee with the Chicago Black Hawks.

Sparse attendance, changes of managers and general managers and the trades of topsalaried players were part of a dismal season that so far has produced only 11 victories and 15 ties in 67 games.

The schedule ends mercifully March 30 and this marks the final year of a lease the Seals have on the Oakland Coliseum-Arena.

It has been rumored that the NHL has offered between $4.5 and $5 million for the team. The NHL would purchase the club until a new owner can be found.

An informed league official, who wanted to remain anonymous, said the NHL desires to get control of the California franchise in order to stem a mass exodus of Seals to the rival World Hockey Association.

"The league is tired of having Oakland as the WHA's No. 1 farm team," said the individual.

Last summer, eight players jumped the Seals for the WHA. This season, two players have already indicated they are going to the WHA no matter what owner Charles O. Finley offers and eight others have opened negotiations with the WHA.

"I don't expect to be back here next year," said one player. "I'll be looking for WHA offers and at the same time I don't expect they (the Seals) will protect me. But if Finley sells the club, you'll find more players willing to stay."

The NHL board of governors is meeting in New York next week and they will undoubtedly discuss the Seals situation.

Finley also is in trouble with minority stockholders of the Seals. Much to their consternation, he cut ticket prices in half at midseason to try to pick up sagging attendance.

But the attendance is still drooping.

Track, Baseball Events Postponed

Although the sun was shining, the rain still took its toll yesterday as wet grounds forced postponement of the Ukiah at Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park baseball game and the Petaluma at Analy of Sebastopol track meet.

The Petaluma-Analy meet will be run Monday at 3:30 p.m., weather permitting. The Ukiah-Rancho Cotate baseball game has not yet been rescheduled.

No-Hitter By Marin's Bianchini

CAMPBELL — Don Bianchini wasn't supposed to pitch nine innings yesterday, but he thwarted his coach's plan and hurled himself into the College of Marin record books by no-hitting West Valley College of Campbell, 8-0.

The gem was believed to be the first nine-inning no-hitter in Marin's history, although Dennis Bueler pitched a seven-inning masterpiece against Skyline of San Bruno in a tournament last season.

"In the back of my mind I was thinking of only having Bianchini go five or six innings," said Tar coach Vic Petreshene, "but he said he decided while he was warming up he was going to go nine." So he made it virtually impossible for Petreshene to send in a reliever.

The freshman right-hander struck out 10 batters, walked four, and saw two errors made behind him. His catcher was Tom Olson, who has caught only about 20 games in his life but has handled two no-hitters — Bianchini's and Bueler's.

Four sparkling defensive plays aided the former Marin Catholic High School star, the most glittering being a diving, twisting catch of a pop-up by third baseman Greg Mazeres in the eighth inning.

Marin shortstop Steve Sherry lost sight of the ball along the foul line in short left field, but Mazeres came along. "He was looking over his left shoulder, and the ball was over his right shoulder, but he turned at the last minute and caught it falling, with his glove on the ground," Petreshene said.

Pete Arbios made a running catch deep in center field in the fourth inning, John Billings made a last-second grab in left field in the seventh, and Bianchini himself gloved a sharp line drive in the sixth.

The only run Bianchini needed came in the first inning when Jim Thompson stole home on the front end of a double steal. Sherry's bases-loaded, two-run single keyed a five-run rally in the fifth inning which assured the victory.

The game was the Camino Norte Conference opener for the Tars, 3-2 on the year. Bianchini's record is 2-0.

Warriors Vs. Hawks Tonight

ATLANTA (UPI) — Cazzie Russell was a question mark tonight as the Golden State Warriors opened a three-game road trip against the Atlanta Hawks.

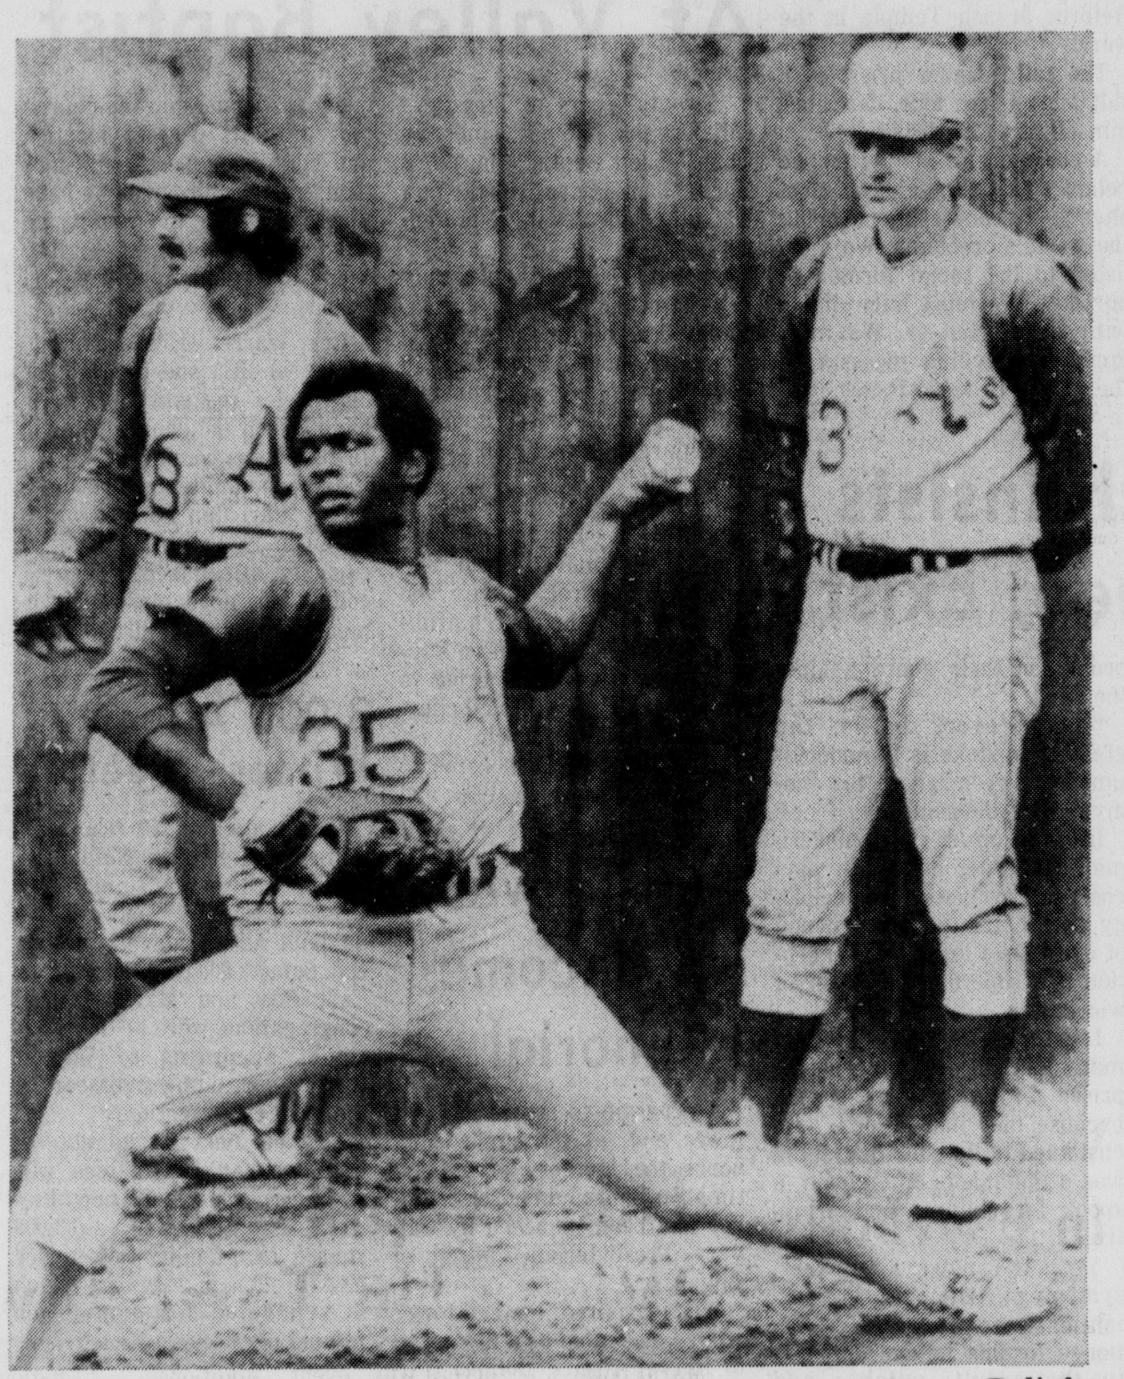
Russell has a slight knee injury and skipped Thursday's intrasquad scrimmage. However, he may be able to see limited action against the Hawks.

"I wanted to play 82 games this season. I haven't missed one yet in 70. I hope I don't blow it now," said Russell.

Golden State is 3-0 against the Hawks this season. However in their last meeting in Oakland, it took a three-point play by Nate Thurmond with four seconds remaining to give the Warriors a 118-115 victory.

Atlanta played without regular center Walt Bellamy and forward Jim Washington in that game. Both are back now and ready to go against the Warriors.

Golden State tackls the Philadelphia 76ers in Pittsburgh Saturday night. Then the Warriors head for Oregon for a Tuesday night game against the Portland Trail Blazers.



NOW PITCHING — Oakland A's left-hander Vida Blue, the 1971 American League Cy Young award winner, warmed up at the A's training camp yesterday as pitching coach Wes Stock (3) looked on in Mesa Arizona. Relief pitcher Don Shaw (8) was also in the bullpen when Blue, though still unsigned, took his first workout yesterday.

SHARON WALSH'S BID FOR UPSET IS FOILED

DALLAS (UPI) — David nearly repeated his upset over Goliath last night.

Heavily-favored Evonne Goolagong of Australia advanced into the semi-finals today of the $37,000 Maureen Connolly Brinker tennis tourney against Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan after pulling out a 5-7, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Sharon Walsh of San Rafael. Miss Goolagong was three games behind in the second set, but then ran off 11 straight games.

Miss Walsh came close to pulling off the upset of the tournament.

After capturing the first set against Miss Goolagong, she won the first three games of the second set before caving in.

"I guess I just started thinking" said Miss Walsh. "I wasn't thinking about winning really, but I just got too cautious. I'm pleased to have played so well there in the first and second sets. I've never hit my forehand so well."

Miss Walsh played what she admitted was perhaps the best tennis of her life in winning the opening set and taking a lead in the second.

Giants Vs. Indians In Exhibition Today

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants will be doing a little travelling around Arizona over the weekend after knocking off the Chicago Cubs 8-4 Friday in an exhibition game by virtue of four unearned runs in extra innings.

The Giants, who finished last season to one of their poorest showings since moving to the West Coast, will play the Cleveland Indians in Tucson Saturday and then in Phoenix Sunday.

San Francisco victimized the Cubs taking advantage of an error by third baseman Cleo James and a rough inning by rookie pitcher Dick Seminoff.

Seminoff issued four walks and hit a batter as the Giants gladly ended an 11-inning affair that saw 54 players take part—27 for each team.

Dave Rader, Gary Mathews and Alan Gallagher led the Giants 15-hit attack with a pair of hits each, while Jose Cardenal had two of the Cubs 10 hits and Ron Santo added a home run.

The Giants suffered the only casualty in the game when pitcher Jim Barr was hit below the left knee by a line drive off the bat of Randy Hundly.

Barr was forced to leave the game, but preliminary examination indicated the injury was not serious.

Two Mill Valley pitchers saw action yesterday for the Giants. Frank Reberger hurled one and two-thirds innings and surrendered no runs, while Randy Moffitt pitched two innings and gave up a run.

A's Blue In 1st Workout; Champs Lose

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — The world champion Oakland Athletics lost their exhibition opener Friday while lefthanded pitcher Vida Blue sweated through his first spring workout in two years.

Blue feels he still can be traded by A's owner Charles O. Finley. The 23-year-old pitcher says he last talked with Finley on Sunday and the owner made no compromise offer.

"Charlie mentioned the possibility I could be traded," Blue said. "But I have to get in shape no matter who I'm going to play for."

Despite his holdout, Blue says he is anxious to get his contract status cleared up for 1973 so he can concentrate on pitching.

"Whether he (Finley) realizes it or not, I want to sign," said the lefthander who slumped to 6-10 last year following a holdout until May 2. He was the American League's Most Valuable Player and top pitcher in 1971 with a 24-8 record.

On the playing field, catcher Darrel Porter smashed a three-run homer off Jim Hunter to pace the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-3 Cactus League win over the Athletics. Porter's clout in the second inning erased a 2-0 Oakland lead.

Lefthander Darold Knowles of the A's was expected to test his broken thumb for the first time today since breaking it last September.

Drag Racing Today On Fremont Track

FREMONT, Calif. (UPI) — More than 21,000 drag racing fans are expected to attend the American Hot Rod Association's Northern Nationals at Fremont Raceway today and Sunday.

More than $100,000 in prizes and accessory awards attracted some 460 entries when practice and qualifying runs started Friday.

Marin Cagers Face San Francisco

Tars Are Mauled By Compton In Tourney

VENTURA — College of Marin's Tar basketball team will have to be content in trying to become the best in Northern California.

The Compton College Tartars ended Marin's hopes of being the best junior college team in the state last night by running off with a 90-65 victory in a semi-final game of the 22nd annual California ships.

Marin will face City College of San Francisco today at 5 p.m. in the consolation championship, which can be better called the Northern California title game.

In the real championship, it will be two Southern California schools, Compton facing Long Beach City College, 9 p.m. Long Beach advanced to the finals by whipping the Rams of San Francisco, 67-58, in last night's other semi-final game.

Compton seems to be the class of the tournament and gives you the impression of being a four-year school playing against the two-year junior colleges. The Tartars crushed East Los Angeles, 125-95, in their tourney opener Thursday night.

They wasted little time last night in showing who was boss, matching an accurate shooting offense with a full-court press which stymied Marin and amazed the 2,600 fans in Ventura College's gymnasium. After the first five minutes, Compton had jumped out to a 16-2 lead.

Marin made a valiant effort to catch the streaking Tartars midway through the first half and cut the lead to seven, 29-22, but eight straight Compton points put the game out of reach for good.

Marin forward Wil Garner, playing with a bruised left hip suffered in the Tars 73-64 tourney-opening win over Riverside Thursday, led Marin with 16 points on eight of 26 shots from the field. Compton's high scorers were 6-foot-5 guard Al Forney with 21 points and 6-8 forward Ike Whitfield, 20 points.

Compton was just too much for Marin with its front line of 7-foot center Ed Gregg and forwards Whitfield and Dean Bowser, also 6-8. They controlled the boards, outrebounding Marin, 62-53. Compton outrebounded Marin in the first half, 27-19.

And because of that ever-present full-court press, Compton caused 29 Marin turnovers, a very high figure for the usually sure-handed Tars. Compton netted only 16 miscues.

"These kids never gave up," said head coach John Panagakis following the game. "We weren't patient enough early in the game," he added, referring to the missed shots for Marin in the opening stage of the contest. "Compton is a fine, fine team," he said as understatement. "One of the coaches came up to me and said Compton is as good as a four-year college team." That coach was right, John.

Sports

About the upcoming game with City College of San Francisco, Panagakis said, "These kids will come back. It's tough to bounce back, but they will."

Panagakis also said he would be surprised to see CCSF put up a fullcourt press against his team. "It is just not a pressing ball club."

Garner, a doubtful starter until getting approval from a doctor, said he felt pain during the game, "especially when I had to screen off other players." If the pain wasn't enough, there was the frustration for Garner of missing a stuff shot with just two minutes left in the game.

He went up and slammed the ball, but instead of going through the hoop, it went over it, and Garner was left hanging on the rim for an automatic technical foul. At that point, with Marin already down by 29 points, he was pulled from the game along with the other Marin starters as reserves from both sides did the mopup work.

Center Neil Traub and forward Joe Casteel each scored 11 points for Marin, and Traub, playing a tough board game before fouling out with 8:29 left, led Marin in rebounds with 15, high for both teams.

The small junior college division portion of the tournament got underway yesterday, Barstow beating Shasta College of Redding, 70-64, and Menlo downing Merced, 60-49.

Disappointed Drake Plays Salesian '5' Tonight

By LEW CODDINGTON

OAKLAND — In the locker rooms and at the press tables, there was wonder and respect for how far Drake High School had come, but among the Pirates there was only disappointment at how far they could have gone.

After playing defending champion San Joaquin Memorial of Fresno to a standstill for three quarters, Drake yielded to the inevitability of Clifton Pondexter and suffered a 61-56 defeat last night in the semifinals of the basketball Tournament of Champions.

The Prates will play for third place this evening at 6:30 at the Oakland Coliseum Arena against Salesian High of Richmond, 87-58 loser to Berkeley in the other semi-final game.

Memorial will defend its championship at 8 p.m. against Berkeley. In other games yesterday, Wilson of San Francisco rallied from 22 points down to stun Castlemont of Oakland, 70-69, and Arroyo of San Lorenzo edged Dublin, 65-62, setting up a Wilson-Arroyo clash at 5 p.m. for the consolation title.

"When Drake took the floor last (Thursday) night, people laughed at them," said Memorial's expansive, expressive coach Tom Cleary after last night's game. "They laughed. But I'll tell you — that team is no joke. They're a remarkable team. Their coach has class, and the players are the same."

Short to the point of absurdity and carrying the burden of Marin's past failures in the tournament, Drake now 25-6 surprised virtually everybody by stunning once-beaten Castlemont, 67-61, and carrying a 46-45 lead into the fourth quarter against Memorial (now 24-5).

Then Cleary called for a "high-low post," an offensive maneuver in which forward Nelson Beazley took the ball outside and looked for big Pondexter near the bucket. Pondexter's sophomore brother Sam set up inside, then cleared out, leaving room for Cliff.

The maneuver sounds complicated, but its execution was brutally simple. When the fluttering lob passes came in to the 6-foot-7 senior All-American, he went to the hoop with fierce single-mindedness, scoring five cloe-range baskets in the first four minutes and nine seconds of the fourth quarter as Memorial went ahead, 57-46.

During the same stretch, Drake turned the ball over four consecutive times, and failed to get off a shot from the floor in the first 4:22 of the period.

Drake coach Pete Hayward, ever a perfectionist, repeatedly turned aside efforts by San Francisco reporters to get him to praise his team's unending, conspicuous hustle. "They (the players) are going to realize in the next couple of days what they could have done —they could have won the game," he said.

Hayward lauded 6-0 junior forward Eddie Joe Chavez for "keeping us in the game offensively," and praised the defensive play of 5-7 senior guard Dan Howard, who was erroneously introduced to the crowd of 10,500 as "Howard Daniel."

The throng included about 500 vocal Pirate fans wearing paper hats made from the green paper of the sports section of the San Francisco Chronicle.

Chavez made 10 of 14 shots from the floor and scored 21 points, second only to Pondexter's 27. The underpublicized Daniel — er, Howard — led all playmakers with seven assists and was constantly making statistically immeasurable contributions by forcing mistakes and scooping up loose balls.

Drake jumped out to a 6-0 lead on three buckets by Chavez, but Memorial rallied to turn the game into a see-saw struggle, finally going ahead at the half, 31-26.

The Pirates made six of their first seven shots after intermission, with all five players scoring, to take a 38-33 lead. Their quickness and persistence were turning the game around, "but we let 'em (Memorial) off the hook," in Hayward's words. "We made 11 turnovers in the third quarter."

"We had to slow it down," said Pondexter afterward. "If we take our time and go to our basic offense, they can't keep up with it."

Slowing down the pace also kept Memorial, which substituted only rarely, from being worn down late in the game — a fate which befell Castlemont Thursday and countless other teams during the year.

And it enabled Pondexter to leave smiling beneath his knit, tasselled cap, contemplating the joys of playing for the title for the second straight year.

Expanding Relief Role Plans For Giants' Sosa

PHOENIX — Elias Sosa is described in the 1973 Press-Radio-TV Guide of the San Francisco Giants as "a shy 22-year-old right-hander from the Dominican Republic."

Actually, there's nothing shy about Sosa. He isn't timid and he isn't easily frightened. In fact, Sosa thrives on emergency situations. Sosa is a relief pitcher.

Until Jerry Johnson was claimed from the Giants by the Cleveland Indians for a $20,000 waiver fee, Sosa didn't receive much attention from either press or radio representatives covering the spring training camp of the Giants.

HOWEVER, JOHNSON'S departure created a vacancy in the Giant bullpen. And that suddenly put the spotlight on Sosa as the logical candidate to fill it.

"It's a big chance for me," said Sosa. "I know I can do the job. But I don't think I should talk too much before doing the job. Talk should come after a job is done."

LAST SEASON Sosa appeared in 55 games for the Phoenix AAA farm club of the Giants and compiled 120 innings during which he struck out 92 and walked 44. He wound up with a 10-2 record and 2.93 ERA. All but four of his appearances were in relief roles.

To see what Sosa could do in the majors, the Giants called him up for a trial last September after Phoenix completed its Pacific Coast League season. Sosa appeared in eight games, pitched a total of 16 innings during which he struck out 10 and walked 12. He allowed four runs. His ERA was 2.25.

THAT ENTITLED Sosa to a 1973 spring training camp invitation. But until Johnson was waived to Cleveland as the climax of a contract stalemate, Sosa was just another name on the roster of the Giants. He was rated behind Jim Barr and Randy Moffitt in the bullpen department.

Sosa still is considered a No. 3 bullpen candidate behind Barr and Moffitt but now a No. 3 candidate with much brighter prospects.

CHARLIE FOX thinks Ssa has an excellent chance of joining the bullpen crew. "He can throw strikes," said Fox, "and that's what relief work is all about."

Sosa's best pitch is a sinker. He uses it 80 per cent of the time but isn't afraid to throw his slider which he describes as "a hard one."

FACE KINGS TONIGHT

Day Of Reckoning Nearing For Seals

OAKLAND (UPI) — A day of reckoning is fast approaching for the California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League.

While rumors swirl that the last-place team in the NHL West might be moved, disbanded or sold to the NHL, the Seals regrouped tonight for a game against the Kings in Los Angeles. Sunday afternoon the Seals are back home for a matinee with the Chicago Black Hawks.

Sparse attendance, changes of managers and general managers and the trades of topsalaried players were part of a dismal season that so far has produced only 11 victories and 15 ties in 67 games.

The schedule ends mercifully March 30 and this marks the final year of a lease the Seals have on the Oakland Coliseum-Arena.

It has been rumored that the NHL has offered between $4.5 and $5 million for the team. The NHL would purchase the club until a new owner can be found.

An informed league official, who wanted to remain anonymous, said the NHL desires to get control of the California franchise in order to stem a mass exodus of Seals to the rival World Hockey Association.

"The league is tired of having Oakland as the WHA's No. 1 farm team," said the individual.

Last summer, eight players jumped the Seals for the WHA. This season, two players have already indicated they are going to the WHA no matter what owner Charles O. Finley offers and eight others have opened negotiations with the WHA.

"I don't expect to be back here next year," said one player. "I'll be looking for WHA offers and at the same time I don't expect they (the Seals) will protect me. But if Finley sells the club, you'll find more players willing to stay."

The NHL board of governors is meeting in New York next week and they will undoubtedly discuss the Seals situation.

Finley also is in trouble with minority stockholders of the Seals. Much to their consternation, he cut ticket prices in half at midseason to try to pick up sagging attendance.

But the attendance is still drooping.

Track, Baseball Events Postponed

Although the sun was shining, the rain still took its toll yesterday as wet grounds forced postponement of the Ukiah at Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park baseball game and the Petaluma at Analy of Sebastopol track meet.

The Petaluma-Analy meet will be run Monday at 3:30 p.m., weather permitting. The Ukiah-Rancho Cotate baseball game has not yet been rescheduled.

No-Hitter By Marin's Bianchini

CAMPBELL — Don Bianchini wasn't supposed to pitch nine innings yesterday, but he thwarted his coach's plan and hurled himself into the College of Marin record books by no-hitting West Valley College of Campbell, 8-0.

The gem was believed to be the first nine-inning no-hitter in Marin's history, although Dennis Bueler pitched a seven-inning masterpiece against Skyline of San Bruno in a tournament last season.

"In the back of my mind I was thinking of only having Bianchini go five or six innings," said Tar coach Vic Petreshene, "but he said he decided while he was warming up he was going to go nine." So he made it virtually impossible for Petreshene to send in a reliever.

The freshman right-hander struck out 10 batters, walked four, and saw two errors made behind him. His catcher was Tom Olson, who has caught only about 20 games in his life but has handled two no-hitters — Bianchini's and Bueler's.

Four sparkling defensive plays aided the former Marin Catholic High School star, the most glittering being a diving, twisting catch of a pop-up by third baseman Greg Mazeres in the eighth inning.

Marin shortstop Steve Sherry lost sight of the ball along the foul line in short left field, but Mazeres came along. "He was looking over his left shoulder, and the ball was over his right shoulder, but he turned at the last minute and caught it falling, with his glove on the ground," Petreshene said.

Pete Arbios made a running catch deep in center field in the fourth inning, John Billings made a last-second grab in left field in the seventh, and Bianchini himself gloved a sharp line drive in the sixth.

The only run Bianchini needed came in the first inning when Jim Thompson stole home on the front end of a double steal. Sherry's bases-loaded, two-run single keyed a five-run rally in the fifth inning which assured the victory.

The game was the Camino Norte Conference opener for the Tars, 3-2 on the year. Bianchini's record is 2-0.

Warriors Vs. Hawks Tonight

ATLANTA (UPI) — Cazzie Russell was a question mark tonight as the Golden State Warriors opened a three-game road trip against the Atlanta Hawks.

Russell has a slight knee injury and skipped Thursday's intrasquad scrimmage. However, he may be able to see limited action against the Hawks.

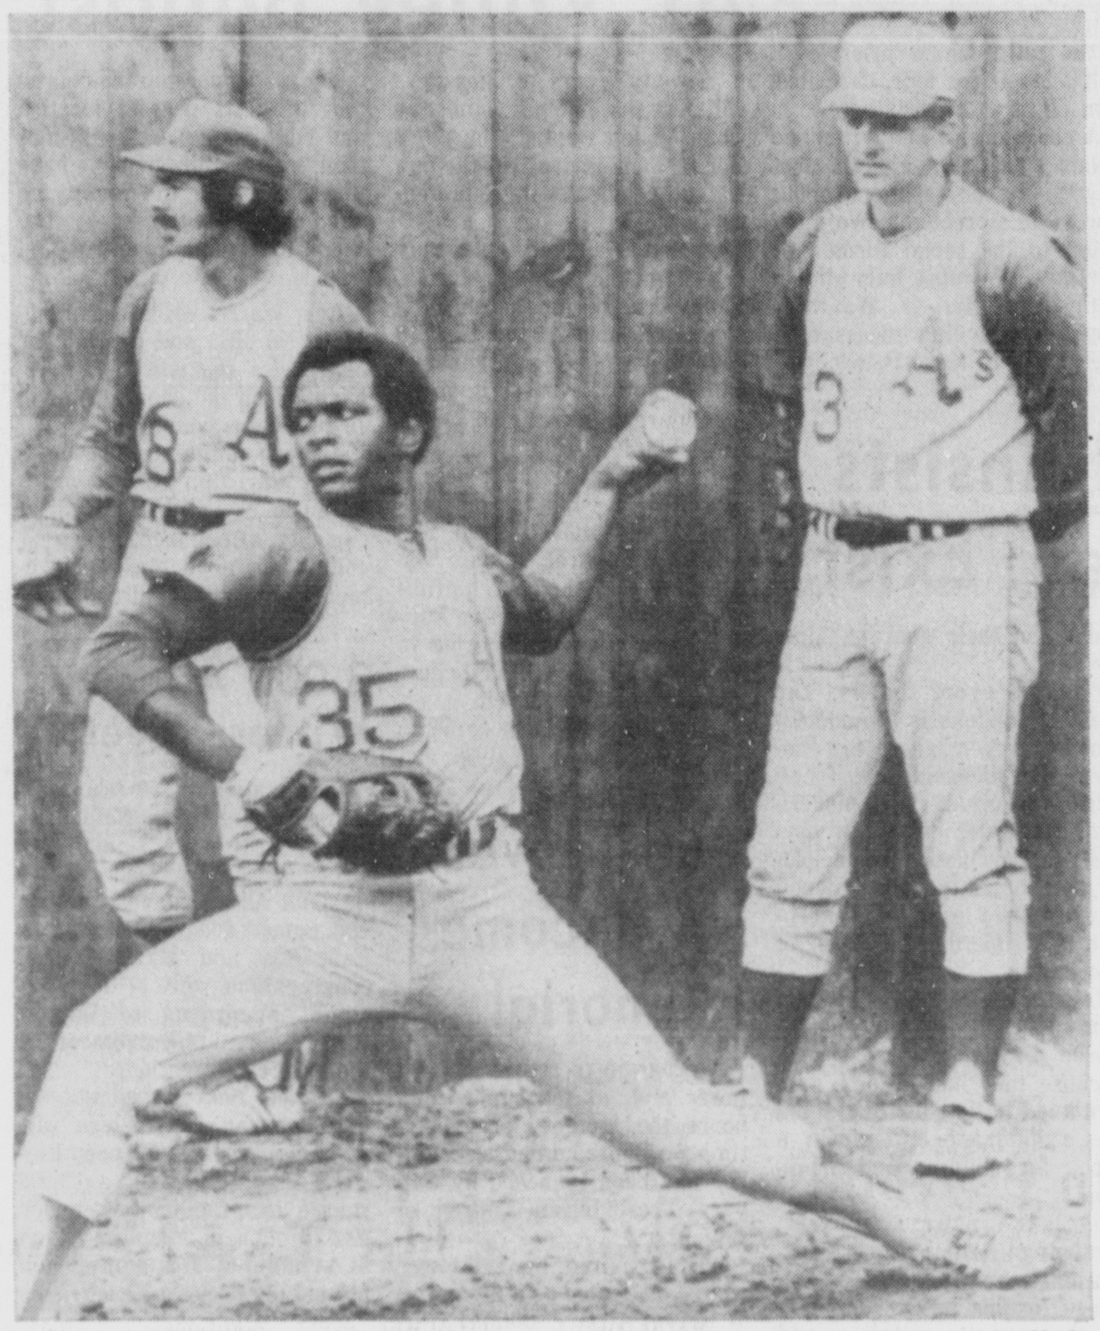
"I wanted to play 82 games this season. I haven't missed one yet in 70. I hope I don't blow it now," said Russell.

Golden State is 3-0 against the Hawks this season. However in their last meeting in Oakland, it took a three-point play by Nate Thurmond with four seconds remaining to give the Warriors a 118-115 victory.

Atlanta played without regular center Walt Bellamy and forward Jim Washington in that game. Both are back now and ready to go against the Warriors.

Golden State tackls the Philadelphia 76ers in Pittsburgh Saturday night. Then the Warriors head for Oregon for a Tuesday night game against the Portland Trail Blazers.

Marin Cagers Face San Francisco



NOW PITCHING — Oakland A's left-hander Vida Blue, the 1971 American League Cy Young award winner, warmed up at the A's training camp yesterday as pitching coach Wes Stock (3) looked on in Mesa Arizona. Relief pitcher Don Shaw (8) was also in the bullpen when Blue, though still unsigned, took his first workout yesterday.

SHARON WALSH'S BID FOR UPSET IS FOILED

DALLAS (UPI) — David nearly repeated his upset over Goliath last night.

Heavily-favored Evonne Goolagong of Australia advanced into the semi-finals today of the $37,000 Maureen Connolly Brinker tennis tourney against Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan after pulling out a 5-7, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Sharon Walsh of San Rafael. Miss Goolagong was three games behind in the second set, but then ran off 11 straight games.

Miss Walsh came close to pulling off the upset of the tournament.

After capturing the first set against Miss Goolagong, she won the first three games of the second set before caving in.

"I guess I just started thinking" said Miss Walsh. "I wasn't thinking about winning really, but I just got too cautious. I'm pleased to have played so well there in the first and second sets. I've never hit my forehand so well."

Miss Walsh played what she admitted was perhaps the best tennis of her life in winning the opening set and taking a lead in the second.

Giants Vs. Indians In Exhibition Today

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants will be doing a little travelling around Arizona over the weekend after knocking off the Chicago Cubs 8-4 Friday in an exhibition game by virtue of four unearned runs in extra innings.

The Giants, who finished last season to one of their poorest showings since moving to the West Coast, will play the Cleveland Indians in Tucson Saturday and then in Phoenix Sunday.

San Francisco victimized the Cubs taking advantage of an error by third baseman Cleo James and a rough inning by rookie pitcher Dick Seminoff.

Seminoff issued four walks and hit a batter as the Giants gladly ended an 11-inning affair that saw 54 players take part—27 for each team.

Dave Rader, Gary Mathews and Alan Gallagher led the Giants 15-hit attack with a pair of hits each, while Jose Cardenal had two of the Cubs 10 hits and Ron Santo added a home run.

The Giants suffered the only casualty in the game when pitcher Jim Barr was hit below the left knee by a line drive off the bat of Randy Hundly.

Barr was forced to leave the game, but preliminary examination indicated the injury was not serious.

Two Mill Valley pitchers saw action yesterday for the Giants. Frank Reberger hurled one and two-thirds innings and surrendered no runs, while Randy Moffitt pitched two innings and gave up a run.

A's Blue In 1st Workout; Champs Lose

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — The world champion Oakland Athletics lost their exhibition opener Friday while lefthanded pitcher Vida Blue sweated through his first spring workout in two years.

Blue feels he still can be traded by A's owner Charles O. Finley. The 23-year-old pitcher says he last talked with Finley on Sunday and the owner made no compromise offer.

"Charlie mentioned the possibility I could be traded," Blue said. "But I have to get in shape no matter who I'm going to play for."

Despite his holdout, Blue says he is anxious to get his contract status cleared up for 1973 so he can concentrate on pitching.

"Whether he (Finley) realizes it or not, I want to sign," said the lefthander who slumped to 6-10 last year following a holdout until May 2. He was the American League's Most Valuable Player and top pitcher in 1971 with a 24-8 record.

On the playing field, catcher Darrel Porter smashed a three-run homer off Jim Hunter to pace the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-3 Cactus League win over the Athletics. Porter's clout in the second inning erased a 2-0 Oakland lead.

Lefthander Darold Knowles of the A's was expected to test his broken thumb for the first time today since breaking it last September.

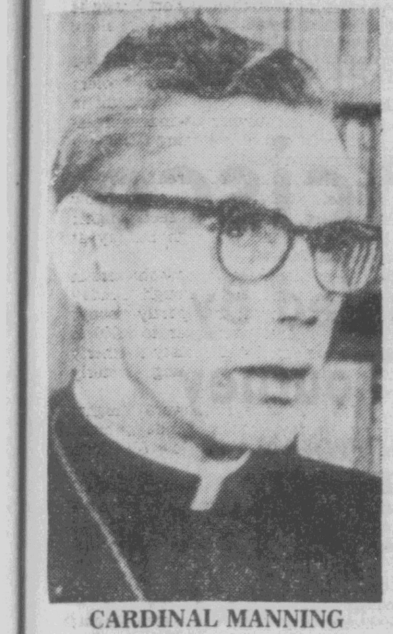
Cardinal Manning Rated Among Most Progressive

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Timothy Manning, the boy from County Cork who heads the fourth largest Roman Catholic Archdiocese in the United States, is something of an ecclesiastical superstar.

Manning, 63, was appointed bishop at 36, one of the youngest prelates in church history.

In his two years as leader of the Los Angeles archdiocese, he has become known as one of the most progressive Catholic churchmen in America.



CARDINAL MANNING
Ecclesiastical superstar

His elevation gives the entire area west of St. Louis its first active Cardinal since Cardinal James Francis McIntyre, 85, chose retirement two years ago.

Since McIntyre still lives at St. Basil's rectory, the Los Angeles area will now have two resident cardinals.

Manning was born Nov. 15, 1909, in Ballingeary, County Cork, and still speaks with a shadow of a brogue.

He studied four years under the Jesuits at Mungret College in Limerick, and entered St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park, Calif., at 18.

Ordained at St. Vibiana's in downtown Los Angeles in 1934, he said his first Mass there and was elevated to bishop there in 1946.

He has spent most of his priestly life in Los Angeles, and still lives in St. Vibiana's rectory, in what now borders skid row, and he says it is there that "God willing, I shall one day lie before the altar in death."

Manning studied at the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome, where he earned a doctorate in canon law, and served as secretary to McIntyre's predecessor, Archbishop John J. Cantwell.

Manning was the first bishop of the Fresno see, serving for two years before returning to the Los Angeles area in 1969.

As Archbishop, Manning allowed priests to provide young men with information on legally avoiding the draft, and sponsored voter registration drives.

He sent priests working in black parishes to school to study black culture, and taxed wealthy parishes to pay for improvements in inner-city churches.

He regularly visits churches of his own and other faiths, and gave his first major address at Wilshire Temple, the largest Reform Jewish Temple in the world.

The tall, slender priest with salt and pepper hair, describes himself as a "moderate."

A gifted orator and writer, he believes that "the church must engage in conversations about the world's problems. We must listen to the social turmoil of our day. We must have dialog with men about it. We must apply the healing message of the gospel to those issues."

Roman Catholic Church Insists That Satan Does, Indeed, Exist

By BARRY JAMES

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The devil's deepest wile, according to French poet Charles Baudelaire, is to persuade humanity he does not exist.

Now the Vatican has a campaign going to give the devil his due before he drops out of public sight altogether.

Pope Paul VI dedicated an entire speech recently, for the first time in his nine-year pontificate, to the subject of Satan.

This was followed by talks on Vatican radio and special articles in the Vatican press.

The Pope said Satan truly exists as an active force in the world, and used these words about him:

"A dark and enemy agent ... a terrible, mysterious and fearsome reality ... a live, spiritual, perverted and perverting being ... the enemy number one, the tempter par excellence ... the hidden enemy who sows errors and misfortunes in human history."

The Pope asked his listeners not to treat his words as "superstitious or unreal."

But that is exactly how part of Italy's secular press treated them, including a Communist newspaper which ran a tongue in-cheek "interview with Satan."

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano snapped back that such articles themselves showed the influence of Satan.

L'Osservatore even prepared a special page on the devil.

The Rev. John Navone of Seattle, Wash., a professor of theology at Rome's Gregorian University, who organized a panel discussion on Satan last year, said the debate about the devil brings up the whole subject of spirits, including demonds and angels — a subject which has largely lapsed into oblivion over the past decade.

Navone said interest in spirits is evidenced by such modern fads as occultism, mindbending drugs, astrology, psychic experiences and oriental religions in western societies. Navone said men today tend to think of the devil — if they think of him at all — as a fun figure, a type of "Satanic Playmate," rather than the cruelly evil figure of the scriptures and literature who uses men for his own purpose.

The Pope's approach to religious faith usually has stressed the positive and pragmatic, both for ecumenical reasons and to keep the church credible to modern man. L'Osservatore Roman once went out of its way to inform its readers that the pontiff does believe in hell, even though he never mentioned the subject.

But faced by what he reportedly sees as a worsening crisis of faith and authority in the church, the Pope has been getting ever more pessimistic.

Last June, he suggested that Satan had entered the church through some "fissure" to stifle the fruits of the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

Apart from that passing reference, however, he had never publicly dealt with the devil until now. Talking about Satan meant delving back into language that has been largely discarded by modern theologians. For even among them, fiery Lucifer with his horns and tail has descended to the level of a vaudeville joke.

The Pope did not say what the devil looks like. He was trying to explain what, in his view, Satan IS like.

According to Paul, Satan is a being of vast malignity, sophistication and treachery who is seducing modern men with drugs, pornography, materialism and experiments in the occult. Whole nations, he said, have fallen under Satan's grip, although he left it to the audience to decide which ones.

Vatican Radio said the Pope did not mention Satan to inculcate fear. But it said he would be ignoring a fundamental reality of faith if he did not put people on their guard against the devil.

"As in every battle, the greatest mistake is to underestimate or even ignore the enemy," the radio said.

In the Pope's view, modern man relies too much on psychology, psychiatry and sociology to explain the phenomenon of evil, while losing his conception of a supernatural power of wickedness.

L'Osservatore Romano said many Catholics had been surprised by the Pope's speech because they had become "accustomed to the idea that Satan was a metaphor, an emblem, a spook for children and primitives."

Yet, the newspaper said, symbols of Satanism are flourishing everywhere. It mentioned fortune tellers, dabblers in the occult, witches and witchdoctors, "madmen and criminals who call themselves Satan and, like Satan, go in for the trade of murder," (an apparent reference to the Charles Manson "family"), demonic rites, sadism and sexual orgies "even in the most civilized cities."

Before dinner, Joyce Rose will tell the story of purim and after dinner there will be singing by the Hebrew Academy Children's Choir, led by Ze'ev Ben Shimon.

He will play works by Bach, Brahms, Franck, Pinkham, Messiaen and Vivaldi. A reception will follow the public recital.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION — Valley Baptist Church, 3 North San Pedro Road, will be the site tomorrow of a 20th anniversary celebration featuring special praise and thanksgiving. The church dates from its incorporation in 1953.

Anniversary Celebration At Valley Baptist Church

"Twenty Years of Blessing" will be the theme tomorrow when Valley Baptist Church, 3 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael, celebrates its 20th anniversary.

Started as a home Bible study in 1950, in the Bret Harte area, Valley has become a thriving church of about 225 members in attendance. The anniversary date is actually based upon its incorporation in 1953, when Rev. Stanley Tilley was Valley's first pastor.

In 1954, a building was purchased and moved from San Anselmo to Bret Harte. The following year the church affiliated with the Conservative Baptist Association of America to identify itself as a Bible believing and teaching church.

Rev. Stanley Walsh came to Valley as pastor in 1956 and under his leadership the church moved to its present location and built a small chapel. Since then, many improvements have taken place in the facility to accommodate the expanding needs of the membership and friends.

Rev. Warren Conrad came to Valley in 1963 and has led the church for the past ten years, having seen the church triple in size since his coming.

Another addition has been the Valley Christian School, which began in 1969 and has attained capacity attendance while excelling in academic achievement. Under the direction of Warren Leuty, the school expects to carry grades kindergarten through eighth this fall.

To celebrate the past 20 years of growth, Valley is having a special Sunday for praise and thanksgiving tomorrow. Members, friends, and many who have moved from the area have been invited back for the day of special activities.

A program of special interst is planned for the day highlighted by the presence of Valley's first pastor, Rev. Tilley, who will speak in a 4 p.m. service. Refreshments and fellowship will follow.

Bell Tower To Become Memorial

A program to repair the bell tower and, at the same time, honor the memory of a longtime resident and church member has been launched by Calvary Presbyterian Church of Bolinas.

When repaired, the bell tower will be dedicated as a memorial to Harvey Crotts, Bolinas resident for many years and active member of the church until his death in September, 1972.

The bell in the bell tower cannot presently be rung because of extensive work needed to rbuild the mounting, according to C. Jackson Napier, clerk of the session.

Donations are being accepted for the bell tower project and checks should be made payable to the church, with a notation that the donation is for the Crotts Memorial.

A list of all donors will be presented to the Crotts family, Napier said.

Dignity Of Man Program Slated

The Dignity of Man Foundation will present a multi-media program by Richard Smith at the Community Congregational Church at 145 Rock Hill Drive in Tiburon on Tuesday evening, March 20, at 7:30.

Smith has traveled the world and through the lens of his camera and the man himself, attempts the task of communicating the power of the concept of the dignity of man.

An exhibit of these photos is currently on display in the church. Those attending the program Tuesday are invited to bring a picnic supper if the weather permits.

3,000 Attend Witness Meet

A delegation of 250 Jehovah's Witnesses from San Rafael attended a two-day semiannual circuit assembly held at the Oakland Auditorium last weekend. Some 3,000 persons from 24 East Bay and Marin County congregations were at the gathering, according to Wayne Kitchel, presiding overseer of the local congregation.

At their next circuit assembly, Jehovah's Witnesses will be meeting at their new Bay Area Assembly Hall, a 33,000 square foot facility now under construction in Fremont which is scheduled for completion around next May.

Woman Activist Will Preach In San Rafael

Anne Bennett of Berkeley, peace activist, women's leader, and seminary teacher will be the guest preacher at the 10:15 a.m. service of the First Congregational Church of San Rafael tomorrow.

She will speak about the women's movement in relation to the Judeo-Christian heritage of the churches, dealing with such issues as our exclusion of femininity from our conception of God, and the possible future of woen in the churches.

Following the worship service, she will lead a discussion of her sermon and will be available to respond to questions and comments relating to the women's movement.

Choice Of Services Offered

A choice of three departments of Christian education will be available tomorrow at Living Word Lutheran Church, 400 Ignacio Boulevard in Novato, beginning at 6:30 p.m. on the first Sunday in Lent.

Sunday school is avilable for the children and adults may participate in any of three offerings. A new contemporary Bible class on the Patriarchs will be led by elders Irwin C. Swett and Bruce J. Marggraf; a new course in Christian doctrine, "The Wonderful Works of God," will be conducted by Pastors Armin K. E. Keibel and Gerald E. Geiger and Vicar Brian S. Terrell; and "Paradise Regained" will be the topic of the vesper service at 7:30 p.m.

The Living Word Lutheran Church is a branch of the Wisconsin Synod and uses the church at 400 Ignacio Boulevard. All services are open to the public.

St. Patricks' Day Dinner Scheduled

A long-time Sausalito tradition will be continued Saturday, March 17, when the city's Star of the Sea church holds its annual St. Patrick's Day dinner.

The public is invited to the 6 to 8:30 p.m. affair in the church hall, which traditionally draws many Southern Marinites for a celebration of the Irish holiday.

OF GOD AND MAN

Passing Buck Nothing New

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

It started in the Garden of Eden.

When the Lord asked Adam why he ate the forbidden fruit, Adam replied:

"It was the woman you gave me for a companion. She gave me the fruit and I ate it."

Eve was equally quick to shift the blame. "The serpent tricked me," she said.

Refusing to admit responsibility for misdeeds, trying to pass the buck to someone else, have been conspicuous features of human character through all centuries.

When Moses came down from Mount Sinai and found his brother Aaron had yielded to popular clamor and provided the Israelites with a golden calf to worship as an idol, Aaron had a glib explanation for his apostasy:

"Do not be angry, sir," he told Moses. "The people were deeply troubled...and they said to me, 'Make us gods.' So they gave me their gold. I threw it in the fire, and out came this calf."

Pontius Pilate couldn't find a legitimate reason to sentence Jesus to death. But the mob was shouting for an execution. So Pilate, weakly assenting to the demand, "took water and washed his hands in full view of the people, saying 'My hands are clean of this man's blood.'"

It still goes on, in our own time.

At the My Lai trials, each defendant has stoutly insisted it wasn't his idea to murder unarmed women and children: he was just obeying orders from somebody else.

In recent years, the ancient human tendency to shift the blame to someone else has undergone a significant refinement. Now we are reluctant to hold any individual personally responsible for crimes such as murder, rape and drug-pushing. Morally, we say, the guilt really lies with society as a whole. We are collectively to blame for allowing the existence of racism or poverty or other social conditions which breed criminal conduct.

There is some truth in this. We should never forget in our horrified reaction to any crime that something we, the people, helped to do, or left undone, may have been a factor in creating the rage, frustration or despair which issued in violence.

But it is dangerously easy to go too far in this direction, so we wind up making collective guilt a scapegoat for personal guilt.

Many people suffer the indignity and injustice of racial discrimination. Only a few become murderers and muggers because of it. Many young men have been sent to Vietnam to fight a war they found futile. Only a few worked off their frustration by gunning down helpless women and children.

Sure, the serpent tempted Eve. But it was Eve herself who let curiosity take precedence over obeying the Lord. And nobody twisted Adam's arm. He just let a woman talk him into doing a foolish thing — as men have been doing ever since.

No matter what the extenuating circumstances maybe, each of us is morally responsible for his own conduct. To deny that, or even to fuzz it over with glib generalities about parental influence or social environment, is to make ourselves less than human.

Johnson Gets New Start In Baseball

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Alex Johnson, whose fine on-the-field achievements have been overshadowed by his offthe-field behavior, is getting another chance for a new start with the Texas Rangers.

The 30-year-old problem outfielder, who suffered through a .239 season with Cleveland last year, was traded by the Indians Friday to Texas for relief pitchers Rich Hinton and Vince Colbert. The fact that neither of the two pitchers figured prominently in Texas thinking for 1973 indicates the value now placed on Johnson, who just three years ago won the American League batting championship with a .329 average with California.

Whitey Herzog, the freshman manager `of Texas, said his intention was to use Johnson almost strictly as a designated hitter.

"I don't promise anything with Johnson but what we want him to do is come in here and hit," Herzog said. "If he does that, we figure we got a good deal for what we gave up. If he doesn't come in and shape up in a hurry, we'll release him."

Johnson was suspended by California for two months in 1971, but he later was awarded back pay of $29,970 when a psychiatrist testified that Johnson had been under emotional stress and should have been treated as a sick man.

Johnson, who had not signed his contract with Cleveland, was contacted following the trade by Bob Short, owner of the Rangers, and Short said they came to terms on the telephone.

Colbert, a righthander, returns to Cleveland, where he turned in a 1-7 record last year before being optioned to Portland of the Pacific Coast League. Colbert was obtained by the Rangers on the final day of the recent winter meetings. Hinton, a lefthander, had an 0-1 mark in five games with Texas last year after being acquired from the New York Yankees.

Herzog made his debut as a manager Friday, and it turned out to be an unsuccessful one as Texas took a 7-4 beating from the New York Yankees at Pompano Beach, Fla. Celerino Sanchez and Frank Tepedino slugged two-run homers for New York.

The Chicago White Sox enjoyed a cheerful day at Sarasota when two of their key performers starred in a 2-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals. Bill Melton, who was sidelined most of last season with a ruptured disc, drove home both runs with a 400-foot double and a sacrifice fly and pitching ace Wilbur Wood retired nine men in a row over the first three innings.

The Cleveland Indians were the latest team to take advantage of the designated hitter rule as Ray Fosse drove in two runs and scored the winning run on an eighth-inning double by Ron Lolich in a 7-6 victory over California at Palm Springs, Calif.

Joe Ferguson powered a 10-hit Los Angeles attack with a home run and triple as the Dodgers beat the Baltimore Orioles, 6-2, in a night game at Miami; the San Francisco Giants scored four unearned runs in the 11th inning to beat the Chicago Cubs, 8-4, in a game at Scottsdale that utilized 54 players; San Diego scored five runs in the second inning en route to a 9-0 triumph over Cleveland at Yuma, Ariz.

Pitcher Joe Gilbert pitched three scoreless innings and drove home two runs with a double in leading the Montreal Expos to a 3-1 success over the Minnesota Twins at Daytona Beach; home runs by Deron Johnson, Greg Luzinski and Bill Robinson lifted the Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-0 shutout over the Boston Red Sox at Clearwater and Detroit vs. Pittsburgh at Lakeland was rained out.

Stanford Fans Have Improbable Dream

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Stanford's basketball fans have a dream—and it's not an impossible one, just a bit improbable.

They figure that if UCLA's super center, Bill Walton, decides to skip his senior year and turn professional, that might create the opportunity next season for their Cards to dethrone the Bruins.

Seven-foot Rich Kelley ended a great soph year by scoring 24 to lead the Cards to the 70-66 win over California Friday night to give them a 14-11 season's mark after a disastrous start. And 6-11 Tim Patterson, just a freshman this year, gives Stanford even more board power. Redwood High School graduate Scott Trobbe scored four points for Stanford.

John Coughran had 25 for Cal, which ended 11-14 on the year.

Washington beat Washington State 88-76 Friday with Ray Price hitting 27 and Louie Nelson adding 20 to probably sew up the Pac-8 scoring title. Mike Dolven and Sammy Miller of the losers had 22 apiece.

The number one-rated Bruins, with Walton going strong in the pivot, try to cap a perfect 26-0 season this afternoon against National Invitational Tourney — bound USC, which has an 18-8 mark. UCLA will be looking for its 71st win in a row. In the last regular game of all, Oregon State is at Oregon tonight.

Meanwhile, first-round National Collegiate Athletic Association playoffs begin today with the Western regionals in action at Logan, Utah, where third-rated Long Beach State, champ of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, battles Big Sky winner Weber State. The winner of that one takes on West Coast Athletic Conference San Francisco next week.

Then Arizona State and Oklahoma go at it with the winner having the dubious honor of meeting UCLA in the next round.

In the Far West college playoffs Friday, Riverside ran its record to 24-4 by flattening Puget Sound 71-51 with Keith Batiste leading the way with 9-of-10 from the field and 20 points.

West Valley College of Campbell, with what its coach considers its strongest team in history, defeated host College of Marin yesterday in a Camino Norte Conference track and field meet, 96-40.

Greg Biber turned in a fine performance for Marin (0-2), winning the long jump at 20-5½ and finishing second in the 120-yard high hurdles and the triple jump.

Strange 9th Inning Costly For Dodgers

By DAVE BRASE and TIM SIMONS

BROOKLYN — There are two outs in the ninth inning and the Brooklyn Dodgers are one out away from tying up this World Series with the New York Yankees.

The powerful Yankees are series veterans. They have been in this October classic five out of the last six years. They are led by established stars such as Joe DiMaggio, Phil Rizzuto and Bill Dickey.

The Dodgers have thoroughly thrilled their fans by getting into this series. It's the first time since 1920 that Brooklyn has won a pennant. Their lineup features a cast of colorful ballplayers with names like Cookie Lavagetto, Babe Herman, and Pee Wee Reese.

The Yanks lead the series 2-1 but the Dodgers just about have this game locked up.

On the mound for Brooklyn is Hugh Casey. He has two strikes on Tommy Heinrich. Hugh winds and fires. Heinrich swings and misses. Umpire Larry Goetz signals strike three and Ebbets Field cries out in triumph. This game has ended.

Wait a minute! Catcher Mickey Owen is chasing a ball back towards the backstop. He must have missed that third strike. Heinrich is now running for first base. He's safe and the Yankees have new life.

New York promptly converts this second chance into four runs and the Dodgers have tragically lost their third game of the series.

This strange ninth inning on October 5, 1941 will be long remembered by Brooklyn baseball fans.

MARIN BOWLING

Handicap Tourney Winds Up Tomorrow

Marin bowling observers will focus their attention this weekend on the Marin County Men's Bowling Association's 25th annual handicap tourney concluding today and tomorrow at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael and Nave Lanes in Ignacio.

Latest figures show some 330 local keglers will have bowled in singls action at Country Club Bowl, with 165 in doubles and 90 in the team event when the tourney concludes tomorrow.

Much of the attention will be centered around the team play, which will feature a five-man team from the Winning Wheels Bowling League of San Rafael, an organization for sports-minded people who are confined to wheelchairs.

The Marin group will be represented by Walter Hughes, Kentfield; Hal Frazier, San Rafael; Russ Bolke, Corte Madera; Irv Myerson, San Francisco; and Phil Myers, Daly City.

Team play is slated at Nave Lanes tonight at 7 o'clock and 9:30. Tomorrow's team action is set for 2 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. The Winning Wheels team will bowl at 6:30 p.m. This same schedule prevailed last weekend.

Harold Kwan, tourney coordinator for the silver anniversary event, said that the "scoring will be on a handicap basis, with the highest scores winning. Each bowler will roll three games in his specialty."

THE MEN'S Bowling Association has set its awards dinner for Saturday, March 31, at 8 p.m. at the San Geronimo Country Club. Tickets cost $10 per person for the dinner-dance event. Additional information can be obtained from Harold Kwan at P.O. Box 133, Corte Madera.

WHEN AN AVERAGE is above average. San Rafael bowler Mike Bankmann has a 160 average, but he apparently forgot that when he stepped to the line last Sunday night in the Tahoe Special, a mixed league at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. The Marinite proceeded to bowl his best series, a 727, with games of 231, 238 and 258.

RON BACCEI showed last weekend he is a bowling leader no matter where he is. The San Rafael kegler rolled a 737 at Country Club Bowl last Friday night in the North Bay Classic and a 720 Wednesday night in the Merry Mixers at Greenbrae Lanes. The two scorers were the best recorded in Marin league action last week. In his 737 series, Baccei had games of 211, 268 and 258.

NHL Bruins' Orr Is Too Hot For Flames

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Bobby Orr was just too hot for the Atlanta Flames to handle last night.

In the first period Orr scored his 20th goal. In the second period he handed off his 60th assis and throughout the game he dominated the Atlanta forwards. The result, of course, was that the Boston Bruins doused the Flames 3-2.

Atlanta's Rey Comeau put the Flames ahead in the first period with his 20th goal of the season. Less than three minutes later Orr, who has missed 15 games with injuries, scored on a wrist shot from five feet in front of the crease.

In the second period, Orr blasted a bullet like shot at Atlanta goalie Phil Myre, who stopped the puck, but couldn't control it. Boston's Gregg Sheppard poked it in for his 21st goal of the season.

Later in the second period, John Bucyk stole an Atlanta pass, skated in alone and streaked a waist-high shot past Myre.

Atlanta's Curt Bennett scored his 15th goal of the season in the third period.

In the only other National Hockey League game last night, Vancouver whipped Buffalo 5-2.

Lee Has Jump On Doral Golf Field

MIAMI (UPI) — Lee Trevino has turned the Doral Eastern golf tournament into a game of hare and hound and the Mexican jackrabbit has four big jumps on the field with a record-setting 134 total, 10 strokes under par, going into today's third round.

The man closest to him in the chase is a three-quarter Wintu Indian named Rod Curl, a swarthy little pro from Redding, Calif. who looks almost like a younger brother of Trevino. Curl fired a 68 Friday in the second round for a total of 138.

If Trevino can get his wedge shots working he might make a runaway toward his second title in three weeks. Two Sundays ago he captured the $52,000 first prize in the rich Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic held in nearby Lauderhill Fla.

Adding a second round two-under par 70 to his record-equaling opening card of 64, Trevino reported dissatisfaction with his short iron shots.

He soon went to work on the practice tee. "I hit my wedge poorly today," he said. "I'm fixin' to wear that thing out."

Trevino played conservatively in the second round, particularly because the afternoon was heavily overcast with threatening clouds. He birdied the first and tenth holes with two-putt greens. His longest putt of the day was a 30-footer which netted a birdie three on number three.

Bobby Mitchell and Dave Hill each had 139 and had a chance if the leader falters.

The best round of the day was a 66, shot in the afternoon by Homero Blancas. It moved him into a tie at 140 with four others—Buddy Allin, Bob Barbarossa, Jerry McGee, and Tom Weiskopf.

Barbarossa and McGee fell back from second place 68s in the opening round by shooting even-par 72s Friday over Doral's 7,065-yard "Blue Monster" course.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus almost shot himself out of contention with a two-over par 74 in the second round, putting him nine strokes back of the pace with 143 along with Napa's Ron Cerrudo.

Marin Tars Top Skyline Netters In League Play

College of Marin's tennis team maintained its perfect record at 4-0 yesterday by blanking Skyline College of San Bruno, 9-0.

Tar coach Bill (Buz) Thiercoff, who claims he caught a cold at the match in San Bruno, said, "That's got to be the windiest day I've seen for tennis." Thiercof noted that winds were as high as 30 miles per hour.

The Marin win left the Tars with a 2-0 Camino Norte Conference record.

Marin's next home match in Wednesday, against City College of San Francisco. The next league match is next Friday, March 16, against De Anza College of Cupertino at Kentfield. De Anza is also undefeated in league play, and the match will give the winner the league lead. Both matches are set for 2:30 p.m.

Johnson Gets New Start In Baseball

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Alex Johnson, whose fine on-the-field achievements have been overshadowed by his offthe-field behavior, is getting another chance for a new start with the Texas Rangers.

The 30-year-old problem outfielder, who suffered through a .239 season with Cleveland last year, was traded by the Indians Friday to Texas for relief pitchers Rich Hinton and Vince Colbert. The fact that neither of the two pitchers figured prominently in Texas thinking for 1973 indicates the value now placed on Johnson, who just three years ago won the American League batting championship with a .329 average with California.

Whitey Herzog, the freshman manager `of Texas, said his intention was to use Johnson almost strictly as a designated hitter.

"I don't promise anything with Johnson but what we want him to do is come in here and hit," Herzog said. "If he does that, we figure we got a good deal for what we gave up. If he doesn't come in and shape up in a hurry, we'll release him."

Johnson was suspended by California for two months in 1971, but he later was awarded back pay of $29,970 when a psychiatrist testified that Johnson had been under emotional stress and should have been treated as a sick man.

Johnson, who had not signed his contract with Cleveland, was contacted following the trade by Bob Short, owner of the Rangers, and Short said they came to terms on the telephone.

Colbert, a righthander, returns to Cleveland, where he turned in a 1-7 record last year before being optioned to Portland of the Pacific Coast League. Colbert was obtained by the Rangers on the final day of the recent winter meetings. Hinton, a lefthander, had an 0-1 mark in five games with Texas last year after being acquired from the New York Yankees.

Herzog made his debut as a manager Friday, and it turned out to be an unsuccessful one as Texas took a 7-4 beating from the New York Yankees at Pompano Beach, Fla. Celerino Sanchez and Frank Tepedino slugged two-run homers for New York.

The Chicago White Sox enjoyed a cheerful day at Sarasota when two of their key performers starred in a 2-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals. Bill Melton, who was sidelined most of last season with a ruptured disc, drove home both runs with a 400-foot double and a sacrifice fly and pitching ace Wilbur Wood retired nine men in a row over the first three innings.

The Cleveland Indians were the latest team to take advantage of the designated hitter rule as Ray Fosse drove in two runs and scored the winning run on an eighth-inning double by Ron Lolich in a 7-6 victory over California at Palm Springs, Calif.

Joe Ferguson powered a 10-hit Los Angeles attack with a home run and triple as the Dodgers beat the Baltimore Orioles, 6-2, in a night game at Miami; the San Francisco Giants scored four unearned runs in the 11th inning to beat the Chicago Cubs, 8-4, in a game at Scottsdale that utilized 54 players; San Diego scored five runs in the second inning en route to a 9-0 triumph over Cleveland at Yuma, Ariz.

Pitcher Joe Gilbert pitched three scoreless innings and drove home two runs with a double in leading the Montreal Expos to a 3-1 success over the Minnesota Twins at Daytona Beach; home runs by Deron Johnson, Greg Luzinski and Bill Robinson lifted the Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-0 shutout over the Boston Red Sox at Clearwater and Detroit vs. Pittsburgh at Lakeland was rained out.

Stanford Fans Have Improbable Dream

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Stanford's basketball fans have a dream—and it's not an impossible one, just a bit improbable.

They figure that if UCLA's super center, Bill Walton, decides to skip his senior year and turn professional, that might create the opportunity next season for their Cards to dethrone the Bruins.

Seven-foot Rich Kelley ended a great soph year by scoring 24 to lead the Cards to the 70-66 win over California Friday night to give them a 14-11 season's mark after a disastrous start. And 6-11 Tim Patterson, just a freshman this year, gives Stanford even more board power. Redwood High School graduate Scott Trobbe scored four points for Stanford.

John Coughran had 25 for Cal, which ended 11-14 on the year.

Washington beat Washington State 88-76 Friday with Ray Price hitting 27 and Louie Nelson adding 20 to probably sew up the Pac-8 scoring title. Mike Dolven and Sammy Miller of the losers had 22 apiece.

The number one-rated Bruins, with Walton going strong in the pivot, try to cap a perfect 26-0 season this afternoon against National Invitational Tourney — bound USC, which has an 18-8 mark. UCLA will be looking for its 71st win in a row. In the last regular game of all, Oregon State is at Oregon tonight.

Meanwhile, first-round National Collegiate Athletic Association playoffs begin today with the Western regionals in action at Logan, Utah, where third-rated Long Beach State, champ of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, battles Big Sky winner Weber State. The winner of that one takes on West Coast Athletic Conference San Francisco next week.

Then Arizona State and Oklahoma go at it with the winner having the dubious honor of meeting UCLA in the next round.

In the Far West college playoffs Friday, Riverside ran its record to 24-4 by flattening Puget Sound 71-51 with Keith Batiste leading the way with 9-of-10 from the field and 20 points.

Strange 9th Inning Costly For Dodgers

By DAVE BRASE and TIM SIMONS

BROOKLYN — There are two outs in the ninth inning and the Brooklyn Dodgers are one out away from tying up this World Series with the New York Yankees.

The powerful Yankees are series veterans. They have been in this October classic five out of the last six years. They are led by established stars such as Joe DiMaggio, Phil Rizzuto and Bill Dickey.

The Dodgers have thoroughly thrilled their fans by getting into this series. It's the first time since 1920 that Brooklyn has won a pennant. Their lineup features a cast of colorful ballplayers with names like Cookie Lavagetto, Babe Herman, and Pee Wee Reese.

The Yanks lead the series 2-1 but the Dodgers just about have this game locked up.

On the mound for Brooklyn is Hugh Casey. He has two strikes on Tommy Heinrich. Hugh winds and fires. Heinrich swings and misses. Umpire Larry Goetz signals strike three and Ebbets Field cries out in triumph. This game has ended.

Wait a minute! Catcher Mickey Owen is chasing a ball back towards the backstop. He must have missed that third strike. Heinrich is now running for first base. He's safe and the Yankees have new life.

New York promptly converts this second chance into four runs and the Dodgers have tragically lost their third game of the series.

This strange ninth inning on October 5, 1941 will be long remembered by Brooklyn baseball fans.

MARIN BOWLING

Handicap Tourney Winds Up Tomorrow

Marin bowling observers will focus their attention this weekend on the Marin County Men's Bowling Association's 25th annual handicap tourney concluding today and tomorrow at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael and Nave Lanes in Ignacio.

Latest figures show some 330 local keglers will have bowled in singls action at Country Club Bowl, with 165 in doubles and 90 in the team event when the tourney concludes tomorrow.

Much of the attention will be centered around the team play, which will feature a five-man team from the Winning Wheels Bowling League of San Rafael, an organization for sports-minded people who are confined to wheelchairs.

The Marin group will be represented by Walter Hughes, Kentfield; Hal Frazier, San Rafael; Russ Bolke, Corte Madera; Irv Myerson, San Francisco; and Phil Myers, Daly City.

Team play is slated at Nave Lanes tonight at 7 o'clock and 9:30. Tomorrow's team action is set for 2 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. The Winning Wheels team will bowl at 6:30 p.m. This same schedule prevailed last weekend.

Harold Kwan, tourney coordinator for the silver anniversary event, said that the "scoring will be on a handicap basis, with the highest scores winning. Each bowler will roll three games in his specialty."

THE MEN'S Bowling Association has set its awards dinner for Saturday, March 31, at 8 p.m. at the San Geronimo Country Club. Tickets cost $10 per person for the dinner-dance event. Additional information can be obtained from Harold Kwan at P.O. Box 133, Corte Madera.

WHEN AN AVERAGE is above average. San Rafael bowler Mike Bankmann has a 160 average, but he apparently forgot that when he stepped to the line last Sunday night in the Tahoe Special, a mixed league at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. The Marinite proceeded to bowl his best series, a 727, with games of 231, 238 and 258.

RON BACCEI showed last weekend he is a bowling leader no matter where he is. The San Rafael kegler rolled a 737 at Country Club Bowl last Friday night in the North Bay Classic and a 720 Wednesday night in the Merry Mixers at Greenbrae Lanes. The two scorers were the best recorded in Marin league action last week. In his 737 series, Baccei had games of 211, 268 and 258.

NHL Bruins' Orr Is Too Hot For Flames

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Bobby Orr was just too hot for the Atlanta Flames to handle last night.

In the first period Orr scored his 20th goal. In the second period he handed off his 60th assis and throughout the game he dominated the Atlanta forwards. The result, of course, was that the Boston Bruins doused the Flames 3-2.

Atlanta's Rey Comeau put the Flames ahead in the first period with his 20th goal of the season. Less than three minutes later Orr, who has missed 15 games with injuries, scored on a wrist shot from five feet in front of the crease.

In the second period, Orr blasted a bullet like shot at Atlanta goalie Phil Myre, who stopped the puck, but couldn't control it. Boston's Gregg Sheppard poked it in for his 21st goal of the season.

Later in the second period, John Bucyk stole an Atlanta pass, skated in alone and streaked a waist-high shot past Myre.

Atlanta's Curt Bennett scored his 15th goal of the season in the third period.

In the only other National Hockey League game last night, Vancouver whipped Buffalo 5-2.

Lee Has Jump On Doral Golf Field

MIAMI (UPI) — Lee Trevino has turned the Doral Eastern golf tournament into a game of hare and hound and the Mexican jackrabbit has four big jumps on the field with a record-setting 134 total, 10 strokes under par, going into today's third round.

The man closest to him in the chase is a three-quarter Wintu Indian named Rod Curl, a swarthy little pro from Redding, Calif. who looks almost like a younger brother of Trevino. Curl fired a 68 Friday in the second round for a total of 138.

If Trevino can get his wedge shots working he might make a runaway toward his second title in three weeks. Two Sundays ago he captured the $52,000 first prize in the rich Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic held in nearby Lauderhill Fla.

Adding a second round two-under par 70 to his record-equaling opening card of 64, Trevino reported dissatisfaction with his short iron shots.

He soon went to work on the practice tee. "I hit my wedge poorly today," he said. "I'm fixin' to wear that thing out."

Trevino played conservatively in the second round, particularly because the afternoon was heavily overcast with threatening clouds. He birdied the first and tenth holes with two-putt greens. His longest putt of the day was a 30-footer which netted a birdie three on number three.

Bobby Mitchell and Dave Hill each had 139 and had a chance if the leader falters.

The best round of the day was a 66, shot in the afternoon by Homero Blancas. It moved him into a tie at 140 with four others—Buddy Allin, Bob Barbarossa, Jerry McGee, and Tom Weiskopf.

Barbarossa and McGee fell back from second place 68s in the opening round by shooting even-par 72s Friday over Doral's 7,065-yard "Blue Monster" course.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus almost shot himself out of contention with a two-over par 74 in the second round, putting him nine strokes back of the pace with 143 along with Napa's Ron Cerrudo.

Marin Tars Top Skyline Netters In League Play

College of Marin's tennis team maintained its perfect record at 4-0 yesterday by blanking Skyline College of San Bruno, 9-0.

Tar coach Bill (Buz) Thiercoff, who claims he caught a cold at the match in San Bruno, said, "That's got to be the windiest day I've seen for tennis." Thiercof noted that winds were as high as 30 miles per hour.

The Marin win left the Tars with a 2-0 Camino Norte Conference record.

Marin's next home match in Wednesday, against City College of San Francisco. The next league match is next Friday, March 16, against De Anza College of Cupertino at Kentfield. De Anza is also undefeated in league play, and the match will give the winner the league lead. Both matches are set for 2:30 p.m.

Disappointed Drake Plays Salesian '5' Tonight

By LEW CODDINGTON

OAKLAND — In the locker rooms and at the press tables, there was wonder and respect for how far Drake High School had come, but among the Pirates there was only disappointment at how far they could have gone.

After playing defending champion San Joaquin Memorial of Fresno to a standstill for three quarters, Drake yielded to the inevitability of Clifton Pondexter and suffered a 61-56 defeat last night in the semi-finals of the basketball Tournament of Champions.

The Prates will play for third place this evening at 6:30 at the Oakland Coliseum Arena against Salesian High of Richmond, 87-58 loser to Berkeley in the other semi-final game.

Memorial will defend its championship at 8 p.m. against Berkeley. In other games yesterday, Wilson of San Francisco rallied from 22 points down to stun Castlemont of Oakland, 70-69, and Arroyo of San Lorenzo edged Dublin, 65-62, setting up a Wilson-Arroyo clash at 5 p.m. for the consolation title.

"When Drake took the floor last (Thursday) night, people laughed at them," said Memorial's expansive, expressive coach Tom Cleary after last night's game. "They laughed. But I'll tell you — that team is no joke. They're a remarkable team. Their coach has class, and the players are the same."

Short to the point of absurdity and carrying the burden of Marin's past failures in the tournament, Drake now 25-6 surprised virtually everybody by stunning once-beaten Castlemont, 67-61, and carrying a 46-45 lead into the fourth quarter against Memorial (now 24-5).

Then Cleary called for a "high-low post," an offensive maneuver in which forward Nelson Beazley took the ball outside and looked for big Pondexter near the bucket. Pondexter's sophomore brother Sam set up inside, then cleared out, leaving room for Cliff.

The maneuver sounds complicated, but its execution was brutally simple. When the fluttering lob passes came in to the 6-foot-7 senior All-American, he went to the hoop with fierce single-mindedness, scoring five cloe-range baskets in the first four minutes and nine seconds of the fourth quarter as Memorial went ahead, 57-46.

During the same stretch, Drake turned the ball over four consecutive times, and failed to get off a shot from the floor in the first 4:22 of the period.

Drake coach Pete Hayward, ever a perfectionist, repeatedly turned aside efforts by San Francisco reporters to get him to praise his team's unending, conspicuous hustle. "They (the players) are going to realize in the next couple of days what they could have done —they could have won the game," he said.

Hayward lauded 6-0 junior forward Eddie Joe Chavez for "keeping us in the game offensively," and praised the defensive play of 5-7 senior guard Dan Howard, who was erroneously introduced to the crowd of 10,500 as "Howard Daniel."

The throng included about 500 vocal Pirate fans wearing paper hats made from the green paper of the sports section of the San Francisco Chronicle.

Chavez made 10 of 14 shots from the floor and scored 21 points, second only to Pondexter's 27. The underpublicized Daniel — er, Howard — led all playmakers with seven assists and was constantly making statistically immeasurable contributions by forcing mistakes and scooping up loose balls.

Drake jumped out to a 6-0 lead on three buckets by Chavez, but Memorial rallied to turn the game into a see-saw struggle, finally going ahead at the half, 31-26.

The Pirates made six of their first seven shots after intermission, with all five players scoring, to take a 38-33 lead. Their quickness and persistence were turning the game around, "but we let 'em (Memorial) off the hook," in Hayward's words. "We made 11 turnovers in the third quarter."

"We had to slow it down," said Pondexter afterward. "If we take our time and go to our basic offense, they can't keep up with it."

Slowing down the pace also kept Memorial, which substituted only rarely, from being worn down late in the game — a fate which befell Castlemont Thursday and countless other teams during the year.

And it enabled Pondexter to leave smiling beneath his knit, tasselled cap, contemplating the joys of playing for the title for the second straight year.

Expanding Relief Role Plans For Giants' Sosa

PHOENIX — Elias Sosa is described in the 1973 Press-Radio-TV Guide of the San Francisco Giants as "a shy 22-year-old right-hander from the Dominican Republic."

Actually, there's nothing shy about Sosa. He isn't timid and he isn't easily frightened. In fact, Sosa thrives on emergency situations. Sosa is a relief pitcher.

Until Jerry Johnson was claimed from the Giants by the Cleveland Indians for a $20,000 waiver fee, Sosa didn't receive much attention from either press or radio representatives covering the spring training camp of the Giants.

HOWEVER, JOHNSON'S departure created a vacancy in the Giant bullpen. And that suddenly put the spotlight on Sosa as the logical candidate to fill it.

"It's a big chance for me," said Sosa. "I know I can do the job. But I don't think I should talk too much before doing the job. Talk should come after a job is done."

LAST SEASON Sosa appeared in 55 games for the Phoenix AAA farm club of the Giants and compiled 120 innings during which he struck out 92 and walked 44. He wound up with a 10-2 record and 2.93 ERA. All but four of his appearances were in relief roles.

To see what Sosa could do in the majors, the Giants called him up for a trial last September after Phoenix completed its Pacific Coast League season. Sosa appeared in eight games, pitched a total of 16 innings during which he struck out 10 and walked 12. He allowed four runs. His ERA was 2.25.

THAT ENTITLED Sosa to a 1973 spring training camp invitation. But until Johnson was waived to Cleveland as the climax of a contract stalemate, Sosa was just another name on the roster of the Giants. He was rated behind Jim Barr and Randy Moffitt in the bullpen department.

Sosa still is considered a No. 3 bullpen candidate behind Barr and Moffitt but now a No. 3 candidate with much brighter prospects.

CHARLIE FOX thinks Ssa has an excellent chance of joining the bullpen crew. "He can throw strikes," said Fox, "and that's what relief work is all about."

Sosa's best pitch is a sinker. He uses it 80 per cent of the time but isn't afraid to throw his slider which he describes as "a hard one."

FACE KINGS TONIGHT

Day Of Reckoning Nearing For Seals

OAKLAND (UPI) — A day of reckoning is fast approaching for the California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League.

While rumors swirl that the last-place team in the NHL West might be moved, disbanded or sold to the NHL, the Seals regrouped tonight for a game against the Kings in Los Angeles. Sunday afternoon the Seals are back home for a matinee with the Chicago Black Hawks.

Sparse attendance, changes of managers and general managers and the trades of topsalaried players were part of a dismal season that so far has produced only 11 victories and 15 ties in 67 games.

The schedule ends mercifully March 30 and this marks the final year of a lease the Seals have on the Oakland Coliseum-Arena.

It has been rumored that the NHL has offered between $4.5 and $5 million for the team. The NHL would purchase the club until a new owner can be found.

An informed league official, who wanted to remain anonymous, said the NHL desires to get control of the California franchise in order to stem a mass exodus of Seals to the rival World Hockey Association.

"The league is tired of having Oakland as the WHA's No. 1 farm team," said the individual.

Last summer, eight players jumped the Seals for the WHA. This season, two players have already indicated they are going to the WHA no matter what owner Charles O. Finley offers and eight others have opened negotiations with the WHA.

"I don't expect to be back here next year," said one player. "I'll be looking for WHA offers and at the same time I don't expect they (the Seals) will protect me. But if Finley sells the club, you'll find more players willing to stay."

The NHL board of governors is meeting in New York next week and they will undoubtedly discuss the Seals situation.

Finley also is in trouble with minority stockholders of the Seals. Much to their consternation, he cut ticket prices in half at midseason to try to pick up sagging attendance.

But the attendance is still drooping.

Track, Baseball Events Postponed

Although the sun was shining, the rain still took its toll yesterday as wet grounds forced postponement of the Ukiah at Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park baseball game and the Petaluma at Analy of Sebastopol track meet.

The Petaluma-Analy meet will be run Monday at 3:30 p.m., weather permitting. The Ukiah-Rancho Cotate baseball game has not yet been rescheduled.

No-Hitter By Marin's Bianchini

CAMPBELL — Don Bianchini wasn't supposed to pitch nine innings yesterday, but he thwarted his coach's plan and hurled himself into the College of Marin record books by no-hitting West Valley College of Campbell, 8-0.

The gem was believed to be the first nine-inning no-hitter in Marin's history, although Dennis Bueler pitched a seven-inning masterpiece against Skyline of San Bruno in a tournament last season.

"In the back of my mind I was thinking of only having Bianchini go five or six innings," said Tar coach Vic Petreshene, "but he said he decided while he was warming up he was going to go nine." So he made it virtually impossible for Petreshene to send in a reliever.

The freshman right-hander struck out 10 batters, walked four, and saw two errors made behind him. His catcher was Tom Olson, who has caught only about 20 games in his life but has handled two no-hitters — Bianchini's and Bueler's.

Four sparkling defensive plays aided the former Marin Catholic High School star, the most glittering being a diving, twisting catch of a pop-up by third baseman Greg Mazeres in the eighth inning.

Marin shortstop Steve Sherry lost sight of the ball along the foul line in short left field, but Mazeres came along. "He was looking over his left shoulder, and the ball was over his right shoulder, but he turned at the last minute and caught it falling, with his glove on the ground," Petreshene said.

Pete Arbios made a running catch deep in center field in the fourth inning, John Billings made a last-second grab in left field in the seventh, and Bianchini himself gloved a sharp line drive in the sixth.

The only run Bianchini needed came in the first inning when Jim Thompson stole home on the front end of a double steal. Sherry's bases-loaded, two-run single keyed a five-run rally in the fifth inning which assured the victory.

The game was the Camino Norte Conference opener for the Tars, 3-2 on the year. Bianchini's record is 2-0.

Warriors Vs. Hawks Tonight

ATLANTA (UPI) — Cazzie Russell was a question mark tonight as the Golden State Warriors opened a three-game road trip against the Atlanta Hawks.

Russell has a slight knee injury and skipped Thursday's intrasquad scrimmage. However, he may be able to see limited action against the Hawks.

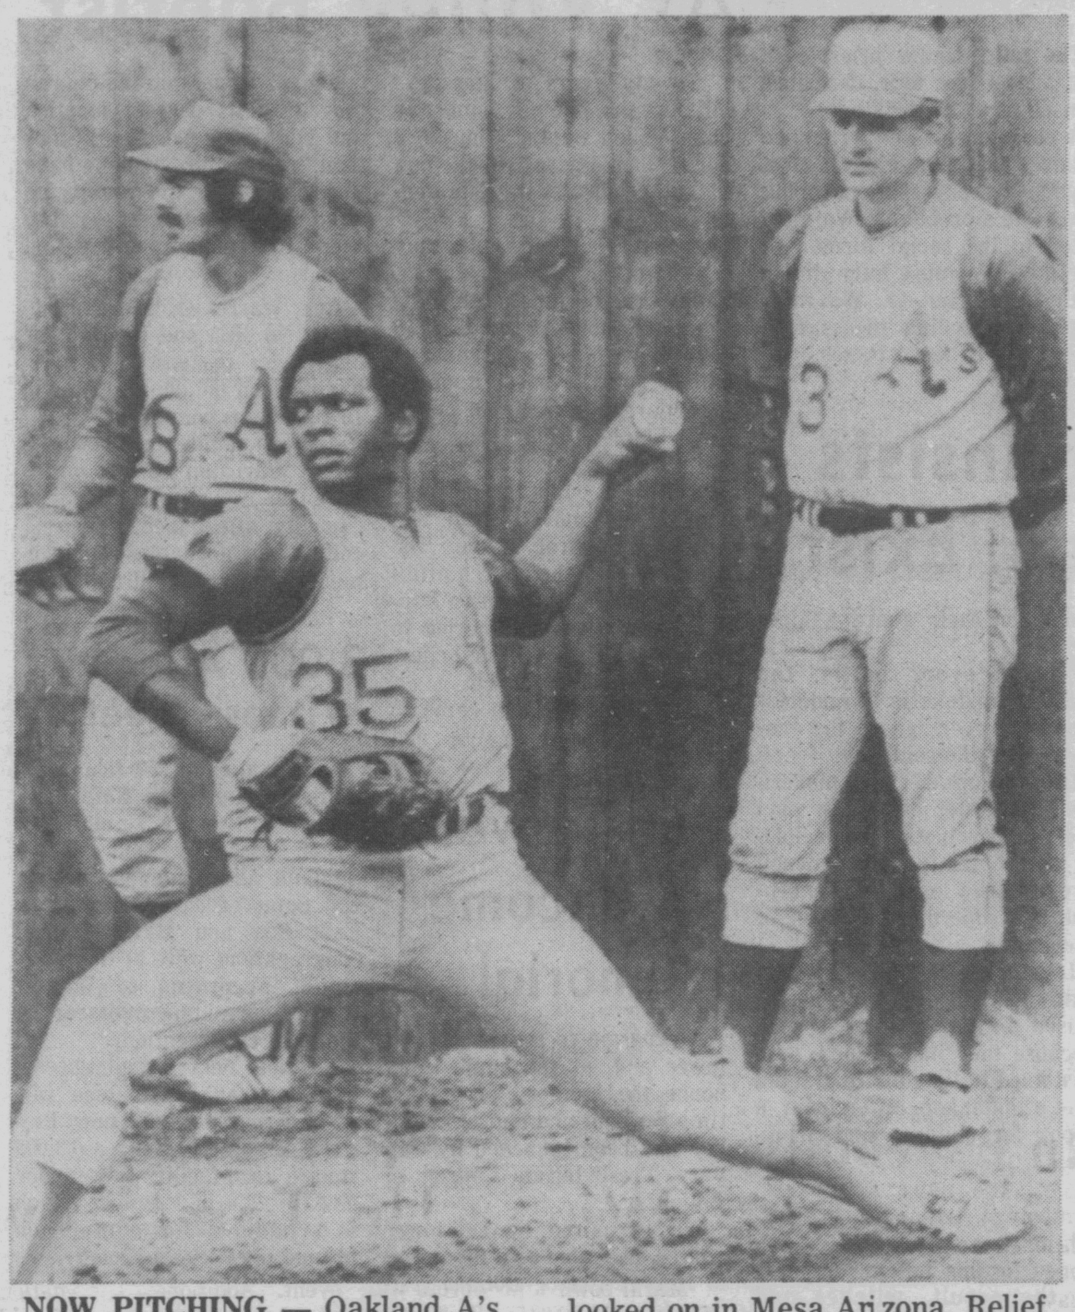
"I wanted to play 82 games this season. I haven't missed one yet in 70. I hope I don't blow it now," said Russell.

Golden State is 3-0 against the Hawks this season. However in their last meeting in Oakland, it took a three-point play by Nate Thurmond with four seconds remaining to give the Warriors a 118-115 victory.

Atlanta played without regular center Walt Bellamy and forward Jim Washington in that game. Both are back now and ready to go against the Warriors.

Golden State tackls the Philadelphia 76ers in Pittsburgh Saturday night. Then the Warriors head for Oregon for a Tuesday night game against the Portland Trail Blazers.

Marin Cagers Face San Francisco



NOW PITCHING — Oakland A's left-hander Vida Blue, the 1971 American League Cy Young award winner, warmed up at the A's training camp yesterday as pitching coach Wes Stock (3) looked on in Mesa Arizona. Relief pitcher Don Shaw (8) was also in the bullpen when Blue, though still unsigned, took his first workout yesterday.

SHARON WALSH'S BID FOR UPSET IS FOILED

DALLAS (UPI) — David nearly repeated his upset over Goliath last night.

Heavily-favored Evonne Goolagong of Australia advanced into the semi-finals today of the $37,000 Maureen Connolly Brinker tennis tourney against Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan after pulling out a 5-7, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Sharon Walsh of San Rafael. Miss Goolagong was three games behind in the second set, but then ran off 11 straight games.

Miss Walsh came close to pulling off the upset of the tournament.

After capturing the first set against Miss Goolagong, she won the first three games of the second set before caving in.

"I guess I just started thinking" said Miss Walsh. "I wasn't thinking about winning really, but I just got too cautious. I'm pleased to have played so well there in the first and second sets. I've never hit my forehand so well."

Miss Walsh played what she admitted was perhaps the best tennis of her life in winning the opening set and taking a lead in the second.

Giants Vs. Indians In Exhibition Today

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants will be doing a little travelling around Arizona over the weekend after knocking off the Chicago Cubs 8-4 Friday in an exhibition game by virtue of four unearned runs in extra innings.

The Giants, who finished last season to one of their poorest showings since moving to the West Coast, will play the Cleveland Indians in Tucson Saturday and then in Phoenix Sunday.

San Francisco victimized the Cubs taking advantage of an error by third baseman Cleo James and a rough inning by rookie pitcher Dick Seminoff.

Seminoff issued four walks and hit a batter as the Giants gladly ended an 11-inning affair that saw 54 players take part—27 for each team.

Dave Rader, Gary Mathews and Alan Gallagher led the Giants 15-hit attack with a pair of hits each, while Jose Cardenal had two of the Cubs 10 hits and Ron Santo added a home run.

The Giants suffered the only casualty in the game when pitcher Jim Barr was hit below the left knee by a line drive off the bat of Randy Hundly.

Barr was forced to leave the game, but preliminary examination indicated the injury was not serious.

Two Mill Valley pitchers saw action yesterday for the Giants. Frank Reberger hurled one and two-thirds innings and surrendered no runs, while Randy Moffitt pitched two innings and gave up a run.

A's Blue In 1st Workout; Champs Lose

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — The world champion Oakland Athletics lost their exhibition opener Friday while lefthanded pitcher Vida Blue sweated through his first spring workout in two years.

Blue feels he still can be traded by A's owner Charles O. Finley. The 23-year-old pitcher says he last talked with Finley on Sunday and the owner made no compromise offer.

"Charlie mentioned the possibility I could be traded," Blue said. "But I have to get in shape no matter who I'm going to play for."

Despite his holdout, Blue says he is anxious to get his contract status cleared up for 1973 so he can concentrate on pitching.

"Whether he (Finley) realizes it or not, I want to sign," said the lefthander who slumped to 6-10 last year following a holdout until May 2. He was the American League's Most Valuable Player and top pitcher in 1971 with a 24-8 record.

On the playing field, catcher Darrel Porter smashed a three-run homer off Jim Hunter to pace the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-3 Cactus League win over the Athletics. Porter's clout in the second inning erased a 2-0 Oakland lead.

Lefthander Darold Knowles of the A's was expected to test his broken thumb for the first time today since breaking it last September.

Drag Racing Today On Fremont Track

FREMONT, Calif. (UPI) — More than 21,000 drag racing fans are expected to attend the American Hot Rod Association's Northern Nationals at Fremont Raceway today and Sunday.

More than $100,000 in prizes and accessory awards attracted some 460 entries when practice and qualifying runs started Friday.

Tars Are Mauled By Compton In Tourney

By RALPH CHATOIAN
I-J Sports Editor

VENTURA — College of Marin's Tar basketball team will have to be content in trying to become the best in Northern California.

The Compton College Tartars ended Marin's hopes of being the best junior college team in the state last night by running off with a 90-65 victory in a semi-final game of the 22nd annual California ships.

Marin will face City College of San Francisco today at 5 p.m. in the consolation championship, which can be better called the Northern California title game.

In the real championship, it will be two Southern California schools, Compton facing Long Beach City College, 9 p.m. Long Beach advanced to the finals by whipping the Rams of San Francisco, 67-58, in last night's other semi-final game.

Compton seems to be the class of the tournament and gives you the impression of being a four-year school playing against the two-year junior colleges. The Tartars crushed East Los Angeles, 125-95, in their tourney opener Thursday night.

They wasted little time last night in showing who was boss, matching an accurate shooting offense with a full-court press which stymied Marin and amazed the 2,600 fans in Ventura College's gymnasium. After the first five minutes, Compton had jumped out to a 16-2 lead.

Marin made a valiant effort to catch the streaking Tartars midway through the first half and cut the lead to seven, 29-22, but eight straight Compton points put the game out of reach for good.

Marin forward Wil Garner, playing with a bruised left hip suffered in the Tars 73-64 tourney-opening win over Riverside Thursday, led Marin with 16 points on eight of 26 shots from the field. Compton's high scorers were 6-foot-5 guard Al Forney with 21 points and 6-8 forward Ike Whitfield, 20 points.

Compton was just too much for Marin with its front line of 7-foot center Ed Gregg and forwards Whitfield and Dean Bowser, also 6-8. They controlled the boards, outrebounding Marin, 62-53. Compton outrebounded Marin in the first half, 27-19.

And because of that ever-present full-court press, Compton caused 29 Marin turnovers, a very high figure for the usually sure-handed Tars. Compton netted only 16 miscues.

"These kids never gave up," said head coach John Panagakis following the game. "We weren't patient enough early in the game," he added, referring to the missed shots for Marin in the opening stage of the contest. "Compton is a fine, fine team," he said as understatement. "One of the coaches came up to me and said Compton is as good as a four-year college team." That coach was right, John.

About the upcoming game with City College of San Francisco, Panagakis said, "These kids will come back. It's tough to bounce back, but they will."

Panagakis also said he would be surprised to see CCSF put up a fullcourt press against his team. "It is just not a pressing ball club."

Garner, a doubtful starter until getting approval from a doctor, said he felt pain during the game, "especially when I had to screen off other players." If the pain wasn't enough, there was the frustration for Garner of missing a stuff shot with just two minutes left in the game.

He went up and slammed the ball, but instead of going through the hoop, it went over it, and Garner was left hanging on the rim for an automatic technical foul. At that point, with Marin already down by 29 points, he was pulled from the game along with the other Marin starters as reserves from both sides did the mopup work.

Center Neil Traub and forward Joe Casteel each scored 11 points for Marin, and Traub, playing a tough board game before fouling out with 8:29 left, led Marin in rebounds with 15, high for both teams.

The small junior college division portion of the tournament got underway yesterday, Barstow beating Shasta College of Redding, 70-64, and Menlo downing Merced, 60-49.

DIFFERENT STORY

There would be a different story to tell if West opened the ace of hearts. East would signal enthusiastically by dropping the king on his partner's ace! West would obediently lead another heart, and South would be down before he could get started.

Should West know enough to lead a heart in this situation? Yes, but let's return to this point after we have considered the strange bidding.

Upon hearing the opening bid, North can tell that his partner will make a slam against any opening lead except a heart. North knows he can bid the hand "scientifically" and thus find out whether or not his partner has control of hearts. Unfortunately, the opponents will listen to the bidding and will also find out about the hearts.

THE TROUBLE

The trouble with scientific bidding is that South will make the slam only when he cannot be defeated. The advantage of an immediate jump to slam is that South will probably make the slam even if it is theoretically unmakable. West must guess the right suit to lead, and the odds are about 2 to 1 that he will pick the wrong side suit to open.

SEAL OF APPROVAL

Now that we have given the seal of approval to North's slam-bang bidding, let's examine West's opening lead. The bidding should warn West that the slam can be beaten only if the defenders can win the first two tricks. For this reason, West's best chance is to lead his ace. If it wins the first trick, he will then be in a position to decide whether to continue or to shift to a different suit.

ANSWER: Bid two clubs. You plan to jump to four spades at your next turn, thus indicating great strength in the black suits. If partner can control the red suits, it is up to him to make a move toward slam.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

First names, please. Today's happy celebrity list includes the surnames they were born with and the rest is as easy as A, B, C. For their parents, it was:

1. Bacharach is a composer, all right, but not of "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" but of books and newspaper columns. This is the father of America's popular song writer and pianist. Today he is 75, busy as ever typing up bits of wit and humor for syndication to newspapers throughout the world. His first name is (A) Bert; (B) Burt, or (C) Bart.

2. Beiderbecke is your musician, said by some jazz authorities to have been America's greatest cornetist. He died young (age 27) but his sound is still there on old recordings with black artists like King Oliver, Louis Armstrong, and Jimmie Noone. He also worked commercially with Paul Whiteman. His Iowa folks named him Leon Bismarck but everyone else called him (A) Bunny; (B) Bix, or (C) Big.

3. Fitzgerald came to Hollywood from Ireland in 1937, a wee man with an ache in his heart to make movies. He played in "The Quiet Man" and "Going My Way." You know him as (A) Barry; (C) Sean, or (C) Michael.

4. Benbow was born in 1653, a tanner's son in England. He ran away to sea, was sailing merchant vessels until attacked by pirates, whom he licked so soundly the British Navy asked him to fight as a commander of the fleet. The inn in Stevenson's "Treasure Island" is named for him, but this admiral's first name was (A) Horatio; (B) Hector, or (C) John.

ANSWERS

1. Bert Bacharach; 2. Bix Beiderbecke; 3. Barry Fitzgerald; 4. Admiral John Benbow.

Johnson Gets New Start In Baseball

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Alex Johnson, whose fine on-the-field achievements have been overshadowed by his offthe-field behavior, is getting another chance for a new start with the Texas Rangers.

The 30-year-old problem outfielder, who suffered through a .239 season with Cleveland last year, was traded by the Indians Friday to Texas for relief pitchers Rich Hinton and Vince Colbert. The fact that neither of the two pitchers figured prominently in Texas thinking for 1973 indicates the value now placed on Johnson, who just three years ago won the American League batting championship with a .329 average with California.

Whitey Herzog, the freshman manager of Texas, said his intention was to use Johnson almost strictly as a designated hitter.

"I don't promise anything with Johnson but what we want him to do is come in here and hit," Herzog said. "If he does that, we figure we got a good deal for what we gave up. If he doesn't come in and shape up in a hurry, we'll release him."

Johnson was suspended by California for two months in 1971, but he later was awarded back pay of $29,970 when a psychiatrist testified that Johnson had been under emotional stress and should have been treated as a sick man.

Johnson, who had not signed his contract with Cleveland, was contacted following the trade by Bob Short, owner of the Rangers, and Short said they came to terms on the telephone.

Colbert, a righthander, returns to Cleveland, where he turned in a 1-7 record last year before being optioned to Portland of the Pacific Coast League. Colbert was obtained by the Rangers on the final day of the recent winter meetings. Hinton, a lefthander, had an 0-1 mark in five games with Texas last year after being acquired from the New York Yankees.

Herzog made his debut as a manager Friday, and it turned out to be an unsuccessful one as Texas took a 7-4 beating from the New York Yankees at Pompano Beach, Fla. Celerino Sanchez and Frank Tepedino slugged two-run homers for New York.

The Chicago White Sox enjoyed a cheerful day at Sarasota when two of their key performers starred in a 2-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals. Bill Melton, who was sidelined most of last season with a ruptured disc, drove home both runs with a 400-foot double and a sacrifice fly and pitching ace Wilbur Wood retired nine men in a row over the first three innings.

The Cleveland Indians were the latest team to take advantage of the designated hitter rule as Ray Fosse drove in two runs and scored the winning run on an eighth-inning double by Ron Lolich in a 7-6 victory over California at Palm Springs, Calif.

Joe Ferguson powered a 10-hit Los Angeles attack with a home run and triple as the Dodgers beat the Baltimore Orioles, 6-2, in a night game at Miami; the San Francisco Giants scored four unearned runs in the 11th inning to beat the Chicago Cubs, 8-4, in a game at Scottsdale that utilized 54 players; San Diego scored five runs in the second inning en route to a 9-0 triumph over Cleveland at Yuma, Ariz.

Pitcher Joe Gilbert pitched three scoreless innings and drove home two runs with a double in leading the Montreal Expos to a 3-1 success over the Minnesota Twins at Daytona Beach; home runs by Deron Johnson, Greg Luzinski and Bill Robinson lifted the Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-0 shutout over the Boston Red Sox at Clearwater and Detroit vs. Pittsburgh at Lakeland was rained out.

Stanford Fans Have Improbable Dream

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Stanford's basketball fans have a dream—and it's not an impossible one, just a bit improbable.

They figure that if UCLA's super center, Bill Walton, decides to skip his senior year and turn professional, that might create the opportunity next season for their Cards to dethrone the Bruins.

Seven-foot Rich Kelley ended a great soph year by scoring 24 to lead the Cards to the 70-66 win over California Friday night to give them a 14-11 season's mark after a disastrous start. And 6-11 Tim Patterson, just a freshman this year, gives Stanford even more board power. Redwood High School graduate Scott Trobbe scored four points for Stanford.

John Coughran had 25 for Cal, which ended 11-14 on the year.

Washington beat Washington State 88-76 Friday with Ray Price hitting 27 and Louie Nelson adding 20 to probably sew up the Pac-8 scoring title. Mike Dolven and Sammy Miller of the losers had 22 apiece.

The number one-rated Bruins, with Walton going strong in the pivot, try to cap a perfect 26-0 season this afternoon against National Invitational Tourney — bound USC, which has an 18-8 mark. UCLA will be looking for its 71st win in a row. In the last regular game of all, Oregon State is at Oregon tonight.

Meanwhile, first-round National Collegiate Athletic Association playoffs begin today with the Western regionals in action at Logan, Utah, where third-rated Long Beach State, champ of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, battles Big Sky winner Weber State. The winner of that one takes on West Coast Athletic Conference San Francisco next week.

Then Arizona State and Oklahoma go at it with the winner having the dubious honor of meeting UCLA in the next round.

In the Far West college playoffs Friday, Riverside ran its record to 24-4 by flattening Puget Sound 71-51 with Keith Batiste leading the way with 9-of-10 from the field and 20 points.

Strange 9th Inning Costly For Dodgers

By DAVE BRASE and TIM SIMONS

BROOKLYN — There are two outs in the ninth inning and the Brooklyn Dodgers are one out away from tying up this World Series with the New York Yankees.

The powerful Yankees are series veterans. They have been in this October classic five out of the last six years. They are led by established stars such as Joe DiMaggio, Phil Rizzuto and Bill Dickey.

The Dodgers have thoroughly thrilled their fans by getting into this series. It's the first time since 1920 that Brooklyn has won a pennant. Their lineup features a cast of colorful ballplayers with names like Cookie Lavagetto, Babe Herman, and Pee Wee Reese.

The Yanks lead the series 2-1 but the Dodgers just about have this game locked up.

On the mound for Brooklyn is Hugh Casey. He has two strikes on Tommy Heinrich. Hugh winds and fires. Heinrich swings and misses. Umpire Larry Goetz signals strike three and Ebbets Field cries out in triumph. This game has ended.

Wait a minute! Catcher Mickey Owen is chasing a ball back towards the backstop. He must have missed that third strike. Heinrich is now running for first base. He's safe and the Yankees have new life.

New York promptly converts this second chance into four runs and the Dodgers have tragically lost their third game of the series.

This strange ninth inning on October 5, 1941 will be long remembered by Brooklyn baseball fans.

MARIN BOWLING

Handicap Tourney Winds Up Tomorrow

Marin bowling observers will focus their attention this weekend on the Marin County Men's Bowling Association's 25th annual handicap tourney concluding today and tomorrow at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael and Nave Lanes in Ignacio.

Latest figures show some 330 local keglers will have bowled in singls action at Country Club Bowl, with 165 in doubles and 90 in the team event when the tourney concludes tomorrow.

Much of the attention will be centered around the team play, which will feature a five-man team from the Winning Wheels Bowling League of San Rafael, an organization for sports-minded people who are confined to wheelchairs.

The Marin group will be represented by Walter Hughes, Kentfield; Hal Frazier, San Rafael; Russ Bolke, Corte Madera; Irv Myerson, San Francisco; and Phil Myers, Daly City.

Team play is slated at Nave Lanes tonight at 7 o'clock and 9:30. Tomorrow's team action is set for 2 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. The Winning Wheels team will bowl at 6:30 p.m. This same schedule prevailed last weekend.

Harold Kwan, tourney coordinator for the silver anniversary event, said that the "scoring will be on a handicap basis, with the highest scores winning. Each bowler will roll three games in his specialty."

THE MEN'S Bowling Association has set its awards dinner for Saturday, March 31, at 8 p.m. at the San Geronimo Country Club. Tickets cost $10 per person for the dinner-dance event. Additional information can be obtained from Harold Kwan at P.O. Box 133, Corte Madera.

WHEN AN AVERAGE is above average. San Rafael bowler Mike Bankmann has a 160 average, but he apparently forgot that when he stepped to the line last Sunday night in the Tahoe Special, a mixed league at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. The Marinite proceeded to bowl his best series, a 727, with games of 231, 238 and 258.

RON BACCEI showed last weekend he is a bowling leader no matter where he is. The San Rafael kegler rolled a 737 at Country Club Bowl last Friday night in the North Bay Classic and a 720 Wednesday night in the Merry Mixers at Greenbrae Lanes. The two scorers were the best recorded in Marin league action last week. In his 737 series, Baccei had games of 211, 268 and 258.

NHL Bruins' Orr Is Too Hot For Flames

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Bobby Orr was just too hot for the Atlanta Flames to handle last night.

In the first period Orr scored his 20th goal. In the second period he handed off his 60th assis and throughout the game he dominated the Atlanta forwards. The result, of course, was that the Boston Bruins doused the Flames 3-2.

Atlanta's Rey Comeau put the Flames ahead in the first period with his 20th goal of the season. Less than three minutes later Orr, who has missed 15 games with injuries, scored on a wrist shot from five feet in front of the crease.

In the second period, Orr blasted a bullet like shot at Atlanta goalie Phil Myre, who stopped the puck, but couldn't control it. Boston's Gregg Sheppard poked it in for his 21st goal of the season.

Later in the second period, John Bucyk stole an Atlanta pass, skated in alone and streaked a waist-high shot past Myre.

Atlanta's Curt Bennett scored his 15th goal of the season in the third period.

In the only other National Hockey League game last night, Vancouver whipped Buffalo 5-2.

Lee Has Jump On Doral Golf Field

MIAMI (UPI) — Lee Trevino has turned the Doral Eastern golf tournament into a game of hare and hound and the Mexican jackrabbit has four big jumps on the field with a record-setting 134 total, 10 strokes under par, going into today's third round.

The man closest to him in the chase is a three-quarter Wintu Indian named Rod Curl, a swarthy little pro from Redding, Calif. who looks almost like a younger brother of Trevino. Curl fired a 68 Friday in the second round for a total of 138.

If Trevino can get his wedge shots working he might make a runaway toward his second title in three weeks. Two Sundays ago he captured the $52,000 first prize in the rich Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic held in nearby Lauderhill Fla.

Adding a second round two-under par 70 to his record-equaling opening card of 64, Trevino reported dissatisfaction with his short iron shots.

He soon went to work on the practice tee. "I hit my wedge poorly today," he said. "I'm fixin' to wear that thing out."

Trevino played conservatively in the second round, particularly because the afternoon was heavily overcast with threatening clouds. He birdied the first and tenth holes with two-putt greens. His longest putt of the day was a 30-footer which netted a birdie three on number three.

Bobby Mitchell and Dave Hill each had 139 and had a chance if the leader falters.

The best round of the day was a 66, shot in the afternoon by Homero Blancas. It moved him into a tie at 140 with four others—Buddy Allin, Bob Barbarossa, Jerry McGee, and Tom Weiskopf.

Barbarossa and McGee fell back from second place 68s in the opening round by shooting even-par 72s Friday over Doral's 7,065-yard "Blue Monster" course.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus almost shot himself out of contention with a two-over par 74 in the second round, putting him nine strokes back of the pace with 143 along with Napa's Ron Cerrudo.

Marin Tars Top Skyline Netters In League Play

College of Marin's tennis team maintained its perfect record at 4-0 yesterday by blanking Skyline College of San Bruno, 9-0.

Tar coach Bill (Buz) Thiercoff, who claims he caught a cold at the match in San Bruno, said, "That's got to be the windiest day I've seen for tennis." Thiercof noted that winds were as high as 30 miles per hour.

The Marin win left the Tars with a 2-0 Camino Norte Conference record.

Marin's next home match in Wednesday, against City College of San Francisco. The next league match is next Friday, March 16, against De Anza College of Cupertino at Kentfield. De Anza is also undefeated in league play, and the match will give the winner the league lead. Both matches are set for 2:30 p.m.

ART REVIEW

Important Show At Ross Clinic

By ADA GARFINKEL

Diaphanous veils of color peek clandestinely at the edges of thickly textured heraldic shields in the paintings of Joseph Leach, currently at the Ross Valley Clinic.

In a two-man show with sculptor John Chase Lewis, Leach has assembled his considerable talents to enter the arena of "painterly" painters started by Jackson Pollock and carried forward dramatically by Morris Louis and Jules Olitski.

Leach, however, has not abandoned the image altogether, nor the stretcher bars, as some have done.

His very large and handsome paintings with their solid background colors mingle copper, silver, and gold metallic paints with vibrant gauze-like stains and clots, which often culminate in long fringes of paint drips.

They delight the eye with their exuberance and richness.

Some express states of feeling. "Chim Chim Cheree," for example, is a tall slender canvas, with an eruptive form like a bird bursting forth in song. And "Favorite Things" is of the joyousness of Earth's abundance.

Or a simple shape that just "seems to happen" can stimulate deep impulses, as in the quiet, hushed atmosphere of "Lonnie's Lament." A broad, winged-shape-form in coppery rusts relieved by ultra blue, it spans the entire horizontal plane against a muted green background and is akin to a natural rock altar in a primeval forest.

One responds to these eloquent paintings not only with the eye, but even more effectively with the inner vision.

As with Leach's work, the welded steel sculpture of John Chase Lewis also had its origins in the late 50's in the works of John Chamberlain, whose abstract works of crushed chrome auto bumpers startled viewers.

Lewis, however, creates recognizable objects from his assembled automotive parts, such as the four massive "Wall Bulges" which are shaped as huge insect forms.

Others appear — or more correctly, re-appear — as portrait busts, as, for instance, "Closed Mind" and "Open Mind." As the titles suggest, the former is a self-contained shape. An open, faceless, Picasso-like head growing from a splayed stalk depicts the latter.

Lewis' major pieces also include varieties of insects of prehistoric dimensions in three-dimensional floor sculptures, and a very handsome burnished brass sculpture, entitled "Family Group II."

Probably, most intriguing of all, are the four highly-chromed miniature scooter-racers which Lewis, a former automotive designer, made for his children. Low-slung, each is individually designed. One has wings, another is like the seat of a bicycle. It is probably good they are fastened down!

This joint exhibit is one of the more important ones to be shown at this gallery. It will remain through April 6 and may be viewed weekdays from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., and Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The clinic is located at 1350 South Eliseo Drive, Greenbrae.

Wolfe Grade Parents To Protest Move To Change School's Name

Angry over the Kentfield School District board's decision to rename Wolfe Grade School without asking students' or parents' opinions, a group of parents will protest the move at Monday's board meeting.

The board announced at a special meeting Feb. 28 that Wolfe Grade would be named the Anthony G. Bacich school in memory of the late district superintendent.

Bacich, superintendent of the Kentfield district for seven years, died at a board meeting of a heart attack on Sept. 19.

A groundswell of opposition to the renaming apparently began among Wolfe Grade parents after the announcement of the board's unanimous decision, which came as a complete surprise, since many thought Adaline E. Kent Junior High School was to be renamed.

Interim Supt. Byron W. auzy said some letters of protest have been received, and it was expected that parents will appear at the board meeting at 8 p.m. at the district office.

Disagreement with the board's unanimous decision reportedly is based on several factors. . . parents say students at Wolfe Grade cannot pronounce the name Anthony G. Bacich, Don't know who he was, and prefer the name Wole Grade.

A conservative element among parents disagreed with innovative education programs introduced at Wolfe Grade by Bacich. Announcing the name change, trustee De Witt K. MacDonald acknowledged: "The school itself most closely represents his educational philosophy in terms of structure and program."

None of the protesting parents was willing to be quoted, but one told the Independent-Journal: "It seems the Kent school was stronger than Wolfe Grade in resisting the name change."

When the board suggested a memorial to Bacich, a large margin of each Kentfield school staff favored renaming the junior high school, and a joint meeting of the three district Parent-Teacher Association boards came out in favor of renaming the junior high, too.

According to MacDonald's board statement, the Kent School Council didn't agree with the teachers and P-TA boards and a survey of parents was promised.

It was this threat of an opinion survey among parents at Kent school, and at Greenbrae and Wolfe Grade schools that prompted the board to make its decision, said MacDonald.

Protestors said they meant no disrespect to the late superintendent and his family, but rather that they would prefer to keep the name Wolfe Grade and consider another form of memorial.

Action On College Land Is Delayed

The Marin County Zoning administrator yesterday postponed action on a proposed private college on 200 acres of rolling hills north of Novato.

Harvey Bragdon, deputy zoning administrator, said the matter was delayed for further study of fire protection and sewage disposal facilities. It will be considered again Thursday at 10 a.m.

The college, called World College West, is slated to open with about 40 students this fall and grow to 600 students by 1980.

It will be a coeducational, liberal arts school emphasizing work-study programs and study abroad.

A use permit is required because the land, located west of Highway 101 and south of the Sonoma County line, is zoned for agricultural use.

Burglars Hit Lumber Company

Burglars used a four-foot piece of lumber to smash their way early Friday into the Fairfax Lumber Co. where they stole three chain saws.

Fairfax police reported that someone broke a window of the firm at 109 Broadway at about 3 a.m. setting off a burglary alarm. By the time police arrived, the office was empty, and the saws, valued at $465, were missing from a display counter.

Innocent By Reason Of Insanity

An 18-year-old Santa Venetia youth, who threw a butter knife at a sheriff's deputy during an outburst in his home, has been found innocent by reason of insanity of a felony assault charge.

Judge David Menary Jr., who heard evidence against Jerry Amos Smith in a trial without jury Feb. 15, made the ruling Wednesday, then found Smith is presently sane and ordered him released.

Smith was arrested June 2 by sheriff's deputies that answered a report of a disturbance at his home.

Deputies said they found him smashing things and tried to calm him, but he fought them off with a knife and then threw it at one of the deputies. The weapon missed by two feet.

He fled into a bedroom and surrendered only after being maced and ter-gassed.

Psychiatrists appointed to examine him concluded he was insane at the time and became violent, apparently because his younger brother was wearing a pair of his pants.

Unit Formed To Revise City's Plan

More than 60 Larkspur residents have formed a citizens' committee to work on revising the Larkspur General Plan.

Representing almost every neighborhood group in the city, the residents split into six subcommittees and each elected a chairman. The six chairmen will form the steering committee.

Committees and chairman are:

Open space and conservation, John Roberts; technical elements, (such as seismic, noise, safety), Douglas Rainger; central business district, C. R. (Woody) Woodruff; housing, Robert Smith; scenic highways and circulation, Ronald Hilty, with Esther Taylor as alternate chairman; implementation and ordinance review — Sallyanne Wilson.

The state has set a July 1 deadline for revising cities' general plans.

Craftsmen Are Showing Work

A crafts show by the Baulines Craftsman's Guild is being presented through March 31 at the San Rafael City Library, 1100 E. Street.

On display are works in filmmaking, jewelry, photography, pottery, guitar and furniture making, sculpture, metal work, printmaking and weaving and fabric construction.

The guild is in its second year of offering aspiring craftsmen apprenticeships to independent, self-supporting craftsmen.

A Warning By Reagan On Strikes

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — University and college professors have been warned by Gov. Ronald Reagan that California will not tolerate a strike by them or any other group of public employes.

"I say if someone chooses to work for the people, for the public, and not in profit-making industry, there are some things they have to give up in return for some other things that I think have a value, such as job security," Reagan told the state College Academic Senate yesterday.

"I do not believe that we can tolerate or accept the right of public employes to strike in any field," he declared.

During a question and answer session, the governor told the professors from the California State University and College system that government has an obligation to provide its ervices.

"What if in the midst of a war, an army decided to strike, (saying) pay us or we're going to throw down our guns and let the enemy through," Reagan asked.

Wayne Bradley, president of the United Professors of California at San Francisco state university, differed. He insisted that a strike threat was needed.

In an apparent reference to Reagan's acting career, Bradley said, "Just as all actors are not great actors —not grade A actors—all teachers are not super-profs."

He said the threat of a strike was needed to insure "serious negotiations" for all teachers — not just the ones with superior qualifications who he said would have no difficulty in receiving a good contract.

Reagan also pledged to fight for his proposed 7.5 per cent salary hike for the state university and college faculty, which he said was a recognition of the "high quality of teaching."

The proposal was attacked Thursday by Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post, who told the professors a 5.5 per cent increase would be more acceptable.

He said Reagan was "unjustified" in proposing a 7.5 per cent increase for the state colleges while offering the University of California faculty only a 5.4 per cent hike.

Golden Hinde Will Set Sail April 5

A replica of the Golden Hinde, Sir Francis Drake's vessel, will sail from England April 5, bound for duty as a San Francisco tourist attraction by way of the Panama Canal.

The ship will be moored at Fisherman's Wharf as an exhibit for visitors, according to the British Consulate General.

Although there are no existing plans of the original Golden Hinde, the replica is being built to specifications provided by Marin naval architect Christian Norgaard of San Rafael, who spent three years researching the project, the consulate said.

Built of English oak and elm, the vessel weighs 102 tons, has a 60-foot keel and is 20 feet in the beam. The three-mast, three deck ship will carry eighteen cannon and 4,150 feet of sail.

Construction of the ship sparked wide interest in England, where thousands of people have paid to watch work on the vessel from especially built galleries.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes Slam-Bang Bidding Pays Off; Study This Example

There was no problem in the play of today's hand. Declarer gratefully won the first diamond trick in dummy, drew trumps and ran the rest of the top diamonds to get rid of his losing hearts. He could then show his hand and claim 13 tricks.

DIFFERENT STORY

There would be a different story to tell if West opened the ace of hearts. East would signal enthusiastically by dropping the king on his partner's ace! West would obediently lead another heart, and South would be down before he could get started.

Should West know enough to lead a heart in this situation? Yes, but let's return to this point after we have considered the strange bidding.

Upon hearing the opening bid, North can tell that his partner will make a slam against any opening lead except a heart. North knows he can bid the hand "scientifically" and thus find out whether or not his partner has control of hearts. Unfortunately, the opponents will listen to the bidding and will also find out about the hearts.

THE TROUBLE

The trouble with scientific bidding is that South will make the slam only when he cannot be defeated. The advantage of an immediate jump to slam is that South will probably make the slam even if it is theoretically unmakable. West must guess the right suit to lead, and the odds are about 2 to 1 that he will pick the wrong side suit to open.

SEAL OF APPROVAL

Now that we have given the seal of approval to North's slam-bang bidding, let's examine West's opening lead. The bidding should warn West that the slam can be beaten only if the defenders can win the first two tricks. For this reason, West's best chance is to lead his ace. If it wins the first trick, he will then be in a position to decide whether to continue or to shift to a different suit.

DAILTY QUESTION

Partner deals and bids one spade.

The next player passes, and you hold:
♠ - K Q 10 6 5
♥ - 10 6 5
♣ - A K J 6.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs. You plan to jump to four spades at your next turn, thus indicating great strength in the black suits. If partner can control the red suits, it is up to him to make a move toward slam.

General Plan Review Slated

The Novato City Council will continue review of the Novato general plan at 7 p.m. Monday at the Novato Community House.

Councilmen are scheduled to review designations which have been opposed by about 30 land owners, who are seeking changes to permit higher density on their lands.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

First names, please. Today's happy celebrity list includes the surnames they were born with and the rest is as easy as A, B, C. For their parents, it was:

1. Bacharach is a composer, all right, but not of "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" but of books and newspaper columns. This is the father of America's popular song writer and pianist. Today he is 75, busy as ever typing up bits of wit and humor for syndication to newspapers throughout the world. His first name is (A) Bert; (B) Burt, or (C) Bart.

2. Beiderbecke is your musician, said by some jazz authorities to have been America's greatest cornetist. He died young (age 27) but his sound is still there on old recordings with black artists like King Oliver, Louis Armstrong, and Jimmie Noone. He also worked commercially with Paul Whiteman. His Iowa folks named him Leon Bismarck but everyone else called him (A) Bunny; (B) Bix, or (C) Big.

3. Fitzgerald came to Hollywood from Ireland in 1937, a wee man with an ache in his heart to make movies. He played in "The Quiet Man" and "Going My Way." You know him as (A) Barry; (C) Sean, or (C) Michael.

4. Benbow was born in 1653, a tanner's son in England. He ran away to sea, was sailing merchant vessels until attacked by pirates, whom he licked so soundly the British Navy asked him to fight as a commander of the fleet. The inn in Stevenson's "Treasure Island" is named for him, but this admiral's first name was (A) Horatio; (B) Hector, or (C) John.

Wider Span Approach Is Facing Some Opposition

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Alarmed Golden Gate Bridge District directors yesterday learned that San Francisco supervisors may throw a monkey wrench into pending state plans to widen the dangerous San Francisco approach to the bridge.

The state plans call for an eight-lane viaduct with a median barrier, but belated opposition from San Francisco argues it should be six lanes as at present.

Bridge officials, however, objected that this would amount to a 25 per cent cut in traffic capacity because the concrete median barrier no longer will allow shifting a fourth lane in the direction of heavier traffic.

a six-lane project also would kill hopes of running buses against traffic in an opposing lane. This plan would require a buffer lae, which would be impossible if there were only three available.

Directors agreed to send a delegation to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors when it considers the matter at 2 p.m. on Monday.

In a related action, directors asked the state to require daylight use of headlights on the approach and to cut the present 45-mile-an-hour speed limit, perhaps to 35. Daytime headlight use has cut accidents on other dangerous highways throughout the state, including Highway 37 between Marin and Vallejo.

San Francisco Supervisor Peter Tamaras made the proposal for the daylight headlight use to increase safety until the approach is widened.

State financing for the $14 million widening was not supposed to be available until 1977, but legislation has been introduced to force work to begin next fiscal year.

Tamaras, opposing a cut of the project to six lanes, said to do so would kill the project. The state will not be interested in just widening the six lanes from 10 to 12 feet, he predicted.

The state already has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars and more than two years planning the eight-lane project, and is about to complete an environmental impact statement, Tamaras added.

The opposition started with citizens' groups fearing the project may lead either to a second deck on the bridge or a new freeway, the supervisor said. He discounted both fears as groundless.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

DRIVERS — Ratified a 13-month contract granting district bus drivers an hourly pay raise of 20 cents and improved working conditions. No mention was made of the $250,000 cost of the additional pay and benefits.

CYCLES — Asked staff to study confining motorcycles to extreme right-hand lanes to prevent them from cutting in and out of traffic.

BART — Received staff report that 23,195 passengers rode the district's buses and ferry on an average weekday last month, only 3,625 fewer than on the Bay Area Rapid Transit District system.

TRAILER — Accepted the sole bid of Porta House Inc. of Oakland to provide a trailer for $18,372. It will be used at the bus parking lot in San Francisco.

Workers Chant For Guerrilla Executions

KHARTOUM (UPI) — Thousands of workers attending a rally in support of President Jaafar Numeiry today chanted demands for the execution of Black September guerrillas who murdered two American diplomats and a Belgian last week.

Shouts of "revenge, execution for the commandos" and "traitor, traitor Arafat" were bellowed by the crowd. They referred to Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and leader of the Al Fatah guerrillas.

President Numeiry accused the head of the Al Fatah office in Khartoum of masterminding the attack on the Saudi Arabian embassy. The rally was called by trade union leaders to demonstrate support for Numeiry in his crackdown on guerrilla activities in Sudan.

Addressing the crowd over loudspeakers, Vice President Mohammed Al-Bagir said it has been proved beyond doubt that the Al Fatah office in Khartoum took part in the "planning nd carrying out of the embassy operation."

"We do not accept that Khartoum should be chosen as the place for the commission of such a crime," he said. He described the Black September attack as a "stupid adventure."

The vice president said three members of Al Fatah have been identified as taking part in planning the attack.

He said one of them, whom he identified only as "Kajam", has made a "full confession" of Al Fatah's role in the embassy drama.

"Kajam's confession reveals the source of the plot, its objectives and all indications lead to the Al Fatah office in Khartoum," Al-Bagir said. "We have tape recorded his confession and anybody who wants to can listen to it."

The state-run press reported that Sudan had offered to make available to any Arab government documents which it said would prove Fatah involvement with the attack.

Frenchman Promises To Appear

A 24-year-old Frenchman, who allegedly told officials he planned to sail home aboard a stolen sailboat, was released without bail yesterday when he promised to return March 20 for a preliminary hearing on a felony grand theft charge.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court ordered the release of Claude Lemoine after reviewing a probation report that concluded he would show up for court.

The report said Lemoine is working toward an advanced degree in computer science at Stanford University on a grant from the French government.

Lemoine was captured Wednesday in San Francisco Bay by the Coast Guard. He was sailing a 40-foot yawl reported stolen that day from its slip at the Sausalito Yacht Harbor.

The vessel belongs to John White of Sausalito.

Navy Test Boat Sets A Record

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A Navy test boat that rides on a cushion of air reached speeds faster than 80 miles an hour on Lake Pontchartrain, its builders announced Thursday.

Bell Aerospace of Textron, Inc., said it was a new world speed record for "surface effect ships," or boats that glide just above the surface of the water.

The propeller-driven SES100B setting the new record is 100 feet long and weighs 100 tons. Engineers say one day ships as large as aircraft carriers can be built along the same lines.

Delegates Applaud Amnesty Call

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The first plenary session of the 21st annual convention of the California Democratic Council indicated last night the delegates favor amnesty for draft evaders and tax reform aimed at redistributing wealth and power in the United States.

The 800 delegates and 200 alternates responded with a big round of applause when CDC President Nate Holden told them:

"We must not forget the brave young men who fought against the war by fleeing the country. When this mess is over, they should be welcomed back free of all penalty."

The delegates also applauded and cheered when Holden noted that two years ago the CDC called for release on bail of Angela Davis, the former UCLA instructor accused of conspiracy to commit murder in the Marin County courthouse shootings involving black militants. He added, "She has since been vindicated of all charges."

Holden called the CDC, an organization of about 10,000 volunteer party workers, "the conscience of the Democratic party."

"We do the talking and they do the listening," he said of the relationship between the CDC and the official party. "We've been right on so many occasions that today when we take a position they just say 'amen.'

"We were the first to call for seating of mainland China in the United Nations. We were first to call for an end to the immoral and illegal conflict in Southeast Asia.

"We must continue to work for abolition of the draft and dismantling of the military industrial complex."

Tax reform and redistribution of wealth and power was the theme of the CDC convention keynote speaker, former U.S. Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma.

"Two hundred corporations control 60 per cent of our manufacturing," Harris said. "It is a myth that we have widespread capitalism in this country. Only 2 per cent of the population own 80 per cent of corporate stocks; 2 per cent own 90 per cent of bonds issued; 2 per cent own 100 per cent of tax-free municipal bonds."

He called America "a society in deep stress" and its symptoms, he said, were drug abuse, alcoholism and other self-destructive practices.

Harris said that 122 Americans made more than $100,000 in 1971 and paid no federal income taxes.

Harris aserted that oil billionaire J. Paul Getty gets about $70 million in tax exemptions which he said is a form of welfare.

"I say take the rich off welfare," he cried.

On April, 16, income tax day, Harris said his organization called New Populist Institute will stage seminars and rallies throughout the country "to show the politicians the people want fundamental changes in the tax structure."

He said his group has started the practice of naming "tax avoiders of the week" which he described as a "king of reverse award."

He nominated as tax avoiders in this area the Signal Companies which he said earned $28.6 million in 1971 but paid no federal income taxes, and Gulf and Western Industries which earned $51.3 million in 1971 but paid no federal income tax. He said these figures were in the Congressional Record.

He called on political leaders to appeal to economic selfinterest which he pointed out would include blacks and white and in general "working class people."

Today's session of the three-day convention includes workshop discussions of freedom of the press; judicial and penal reform; and returning basic rights to the people.

A highlight of the evening session will be a so-called "Hot Seat Dinner" during which prospective Democratic candidates for governor will make statements and answer questions.

Those scheduled to appear are Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco; Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr.; Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti; State Senate Majority Leader George Moscone; and Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif.

Martin Stone, a businessman, was invited but told the CDC he would not appear because he has decided not to run for governor next year.

Workshop Set On Career Education

The Tamalpais High School District board will hold a workshop discussion on career education Monday at the Sir Francis Drake High School student center at 8 p.m.

Trustees from elementary school districts within the Tam District are expected to attend the session, which was arranged at the request of the Fairfax School District.

Growth Control Policies On Agenda

Growth control policies will be considered at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting Monday at 7 p.m. at city hall.

Councilmen Vernon P. Smith and Armando Flores last week proposed formation of a commission to study the city's growth pattern and recommend controls.

Jobless Rate Holds Steady Last Month

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate in February held steady at 5.2 er cent, slightly higher than the nationwide average of 5.1 per cent, the Reagan administration reports.

However, Sigurd I. Hanse, director of the state Department of Human Resources Development, said in the announcement yesterday that the number of Californians holding jobs last month dropped 10,300 to a total of 8.16 million.

The major reason for the decline was a seasonal reduction in trade employment and outdoor work, such as construction and agriculture, Hansen said.

The number of persons unemployed was listed as 550,000, compared to 513,000 in the previous month.

Hansen described the overall employment situation as "notably improved" from this time last year. He said 244,100 more person were holding nonagricultural jobs in February.

He said the state's aerospace industry had 24,600 more workers last month than one year ago.

Wider Span Approach Is Facing Some Opposition

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Alarmed Golden Gate Bridge District directors yesterday learned that San Francisco supervisors may throw a monkey wrench into pending state plans to widen the dangerous San Francisco approach to the bridge.

The state plans call for an eight-lane viaduct with a median barrier, but belated opposition from San Francisco argues it should be six lanes as at present.

Bridge officials, however, objected that this would amount to a 25 per cent cut in traffic capacity because the concrete median barrier no longer will allow shifting a fourth lane in the direction of heavier traffic.

a six-lane project also would kill hopes of running buses against traffic in an opposing lane. This plan would require a buffer lae, which would be impossible if there were only three available.

Directors agreed to send a delegation to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors when it considers the matter at 2 p.m. on Monday.

In a related action, directors asked the state to require daylight use of headlights on the approach and to cut the present 45-mile-an-hour speed limit, perhaps to 35. Daytime headlight use has cut accidents on other dangerous highways throughout the state, including Highway 37 between Marin and Vallejo.

San Francisco Supervisor Peter Tamaras made the proposal for the daylight headlight use to increase safety until the approach is widened.

State financing for the $14 million widening was not supposed to be available until 1977, but legislation has been introduced to force work to begin next fiscal year.

Tamaras, opposing a cut of the project to six lanes, said to do so would kill the project. The state will not be interested in just widening the six lanes from 10 to 12 feet, he predicted.

The state already has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars and more than two years planning the eight-lane project, and is about to complete an environmental impact statement, Tamaras added.

The opposition started with citizens' groups fearing the project may lead either to a second deck on the bridge or a new freeway, the supervisor said. He discounted both fears as groundless.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

DRIVERS — Ratified a 13-month contract granting district bus drivers an hourly pay raise of 20 cents and improved working conditions. No mention was made of the $250,000 cost of the additional pay and benefits.

CYCLES — Asked staff to study confining motorcycles to extreme right-hand lanes to prevent them from cutting in and out of traffic.

BART — Received staff report that 23,195 passengers rode the district's buses and ferry on an average weekday last month, only 3,625 fewer than on the Bay Area Rapid Transit District system.

TRAILER — Accepted the sole bid of Porta House Inc. of Oakland to provide a trailer for $18,372. It will be used at the bus parking lot in San Francisco.

Workers Chant For Guerrilla Executions

KHARTOUM (UPI) — Thousands of workers attending a rally in support of President Jaafar Numeiry today chanted demands for the execution of Black September guerrillas who murdered two American diplomats and a Belgian last week.

Shouts of "revenge, execution for the commandos" and "traitor, traitor Arafat" were bellowed by the crowd. They referred to Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and leader of the Al Fatah guerrillas.

President Numeiry accused the head of the Al Fatah office in Khartoum of masterminding the attack on the Saudi Arabian embassy. The rally was called by trade union leaders to demonstrate support for Numeiry in his crackdown on guerrilla activities in Sudan.

Addressing the crowd over loudspeakers, Vice President Mohammed Al-Bagir said it has been proved beyond doubt that the Al Fatah office in Khartoum took part in the "planning nd carrying out of the embassy operation."

"We do not accept that Khartoum should be chosen as the place for the commission of such a crime," he said. He described the Black September attack as a "stupid adventure."

The vice president said three members of Al Fatah have been identified as taking part in planning the attack.

He said one of them, whom he identified only as "Kajam", has made a "full confession" of Al Fatah's role in the embassy drama.

"Kajam's confession reveals the source of the plot, its objectives and all indications lead to the Al Fatah office in Khartoum," Al-Bagir said. "We have tape recorded his confession and anybody who wants to can listen to it."

The state-run press reported that Sudan had offered to make available to any Arab government documents which it said would prove Fatah involvement with the attack.

Jobless Rate Holds Steady Last Month

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate in February held steady at 5.2 er cent, slightly higher than the nationwide average of 5.1 per cent, the Reagan administration reports.

However, Sigurd I. Hanse, director of the state Department of Human Resources Development, said in the announcement yesterday that the number of Californians holding jobs last month dropped 10,300 to a total of 8.16 million.

The major reason for the decline was a seasonal reduction in trade employment and outdoor work, such as construction and agriculture, Hansen said.

The number of persons unemployed was listed as 550,000, compared to 513,000 in the previous month.

Hansen described the overall employment situation as "notably improved" from this time last year. He said 244,100 more person were holding nonagricultural jobs in February.

He said the state's aerospace industry had 24,600 more workers last month than one year ago.

Frenchman Promises To Appear

A 24-year-old Frenchman, who allegedly told officials he planned to sail home aboard a stolen sailboat, was released without bail yesterday when he promised to return March 20 for a preliminary hearing on a felony grand theft charge.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court ordered the release of Claude Lemoine after reviewing a probation report that concluded he would show up for court.

The report said Lemoine is working toward an advanced degree in computer science at Stanford University on a grant from the French government.

Lemoine was captured Wednesday in San Francisco Bay by the Coast Guard. He was sailing a 40-foot yawl reported stolen that day from its slip at the Sausalito Yacht Harbor.

The vessel belongs to John White of Sausalito.

Navy Test Boat Sets A Record

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A Navy test boat that rides on a cushion of air reached speeds faster than 80 miles an hour on Lake Pontchartrain, its builders announced Thursday.

Bell Aerospace of Textron, Inc., said it was a new world speed record for "surface effect ships," or boats that glide just above the surface of the water.

The propeller-driven SES100B setting the new record is 100 feet long and weighs 100 tons. Engineers say one day ships as large as aircraft carriers can be built along the same lines.

Delegates Applaud Amnesty Call

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The first plenary session of the 21st annual convention of the California Democratic Council indicated last night the delegates favor amnesty for draft evaders and tax reform aimed at redistributing wealth and power in the United States.

The 800 delegates and 200 alternates responded with a big round of applause when CDC President Nate Holden told them:

"We must not forget the brave young men who fought against the war by fleeing the country. When this mess is over, they should be welcomed back free of all penalty."

The delegates also applauded and cheered when Holden noted that two years ago the CDC called for release on bail of Angela Davis, the former UCLA instructor accused of conspiracy to commit murder in the Marin County courthouse shootings involving black militants. He added, "She has since been vindicated of all charges."

Holden called the CDC, an organization of about 10,000 volunteer party workers, "the conscience of the Democratic party."

"We do the talking and they do the listening," he said of the relationship between the CDC and the official party. "We've been right on so many occasions that today when we take a position they just say 'amen.'

"We were the first to call for seating of mainland China in the United Nations. We were first to call for an end to the immoral and illegal conflict in Southeast Asia.

"We must continue to work for abolition of the draft and dismantling of the military industrial complex."

Tax reform and redistribution of wealth and power was the theme of the CDC convention keynote speaker, former U.S. Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma.

"Two hundred corporations control 60 per cent of our manufacturing," Harris said. "It is a myth that we have widespread capitalism in this country. Only 2 per cent of the population own 80 per cent of corporate stocks; 2 per cent own 90 per cent of bonds issued; 2 per cent own 100 per cent of tax-free municipal bonds."

He called America "a society in deep stress" and its symptoms, he said, were drug abuse, alcoholism and other self-destructive practices.

Harris said that 122 Americans made more than $100,000 in 1971 and paid no federal income taxes.

Harris aserted that oil billionaire J. Paul Getty gets about $70 million in tax exemptions which he said is a form of welfare.

"I say take the rich off welfare," he cried.

On April, 16, income tax day, Harris said his organization called New Populist Institute will stage seminars and rallies throughout the country "to show the politicians the people want fundamental changes in the tax structure."

He said his group has started the practice of naming "tax avoiders of the week" which he described as a "king of reverse award."

He nominated as tax avoiders in this area the Signal Companies which he said earned $28.6 million in 1971 but paid no federal income taxes, and Gulf and Western Industries which earned $51.3 million in 1971 but paid no federal income tax. He said these figures were in the Congressional Record.

He called on political leaders to appeal to economic selfinterest which he pointed out would include blacks and white and in general "working class people."

Today's session of the three-day convention includes workshop discussions of freedom of the press; judicial and penal reform; and returning basic rights to the people.

A highlight of the evening session will be a so-called "Hot Seat Dinner" during which prospective Democratic candidates for governor will make statements and answer questions.

Those scheduled to appear are Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco; Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr.; Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti; State Senate Majority Leader George Moscone; and Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif.

Martin Stone, a businessman, was invited but told the CDC he would not appear because he has decided not to run for governor next year.

Workshop Set On Career Education

The Tamalpais High School District board will hold a workshop discussion on career education Monday at the Sir Francis Drake High School student center at 8 p.m.

Trustees from elementary school districts within the Tam District are expected to attend the session, which was arranged at the request of the Fairfax School District.

Growth Control Policies On Agenda

Growth control policies will be considered at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting Monday at 7 p.m. at city hall.

Councilmen Vernon P. Smith and Armando Flores last week proposed formation of a commission to study the city's growth pattern and recommend controls.

ART REVIEW

Important Show At Ross Clinic

By ADA GARFINKEL

Diaphanous veils of color peek clandestinely at the edges of thickly textured heraldic shields in the paintings of Joseph Leach, currently at the Ross Valley Clinic.

In a two-man show with sculptor John Chase Lewis, Leach has assembled his considerable talents to enter the arena of "painterly" painters started by Jackson Pollock and carried forward dramatically by Morris Louis and Jules Olitski.

Leach, however, has not abandoned the image altogether, nor the stretcher bars, as some have done.

His very large and handsome paintings with their solid background colors mingle copper, silver, and gold metallic paints with vibrant gauze-like stains and clots, which often culminate in long fringes of paint drips.

They delight the eye with their exuberance and richness.

Some express states of feeling. "Chim Chim Cheree," for example, is a tall slender canvas, with an eruptive form like a bird bursting forth in song. And "Favorite Things" is of the joyousness of Earth's abundance.

Or a simple shape that just "seems to happen" can stimulate deep impulses, as in the quiet, hushed atmosphere of "Lonnie's Lament." A broad, winged-shape-form in coppery rusts relieved by ultra blue, it spans the entire horizontal plane against a muted green background and is akin to a natural rock altar in a primeval forest.

One responds to these eloquent paintings not only with the eye, but even more effectively with the inner vision.

As with Leach's work, the welded steel sculpture of John Chase Lewis also had its origins in the late 50's in the works of John Chamberlain, whose abstract works of crushed chrome auto bumpers startled viewers.

Lewis, however, creates recognizable objects from his assembled automotive parts, such as the four massive "Wall Bulges" which are shaped as huge insect forms.

Others appear — or more correctly, re-appear — as portrait busts, as, for instance, "Closed Mind" and "Open Mind." As the titles suggest, the former is a self-contained shape. An open, faceless, Picasso-like head growing from a splayed stalk depicts the latter.

Lewis' major pieces also include varieties of insects of prehistoric dimensions in three-dimensional floor sculptures, and a very handsome burnished brass sculpture, entitled "Family Group II."

Probably, most intriguing of all, are the four highly-chromed miniature scooter-racers which Lewis, a former automotive designer, made for his children. Low-slung, each is individually designed. One has wings, another is like the seat of a bicycle. It is probably good they are fastened down!

This joint exhibit is one of the more important ones to be shown at this gallery. It will remain through April 6 and may be viewed weekdays from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., and Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The clinic is located at 1350 South Eliseo Drive, Greenbrae.

Wolfe Grade Parents To Protest Move To Change School's Name

Angry over the Kentfield School District board's decision to rename Wolfe Grade School without asking students' or parents' opinions, a group of parents will protest the move at Monday's board meeting.

The board announced at a special meeting Feb. 28 that Wolfe Grade would be named the Anthony G. Bacich school in memory of the late district superintendent.

Bacich, superintendent of the Kentfield district for seven

A groundswell of opposition to the renaming apparently began among Wolfe Grade parents after the announcement of the board's unanimous decision, which came as a complete surprise, since many thought Adaline E. Kent Junior High School was to be renamed.

Interim Supt. Byron W. auzy said some letters of protest have been received, and it was expected that parents will appear at the board meeting at 8 p.m. at the district office.

Disagreement with the board's unanimous decision reportedly is based on several years, died at a board meeting of a heart attack on Sept. 19.

factors. . . parents say students at Wolfe Grade cannot pronounce the name Anthony G. Bacich, Don't know who he was, and prefer the name Wole Grade.

A conservative element among parents disagreed with innovative education programs introduced at Wolfe Grade by Bacich. Announcing the name change, trustee De Witt K. MacDonald acknowledged: "The school itself most closely represents his educational philosophy in terms of structure and program."

None of the protesting parents was willing to be quoted, but one told the Independent-Journal: "It seems the Kent school was stronger than Wolfe Grade in resisting the name change."

When the board suggested a memorial to Bacich, a large margin of each Kentfield school staff favored renaming the junior high school, and a joint meeting of the three district Parent-Teacher Association boards came out in favor of renaming the junior high, too.

According to MacDonald's board statement, the Kent School Council didn't agree with the teachers and P-TA boards and a survey of parents was promised.

It was this threat of an opinion survey among parents at Kent school, and at Greenbrae and Wolfe Grade schools that prompted the board to make its decision, said MacDonald.

Protestors said they meant no disrespect to the late superintendent and his family, but rather that they would prefer to keep the name Wolfe Grade and consider another form of memorial.

Action On College Land Is Delayed

The Marin County Zoning administrator yesterday postponed action on a proposed private college on 200 acres of rolling hills north of Novato.

Harvey Bragdon, deputy zoning administrator, said the matter was delayed for further study of fire protection and sewage disposal facilities. It will be considered again Thursday at 10 a.m.

The college, called World College West, is slated to open with about 40 students this fall and grow to 600 students by 1980.

It will be a coeducational, liberal arts school emphasizing work-study programs and study abroad.

A use permit is required because the land, located west of Highway 101 and south of the Sonoma County line, is zoned for agricultural use.

Burglars Hit Lumber Company

Burglars used a four-foot piece of lumber to smash their way early Friday into the Fairfax Lumber Co. where they stole three chain saws.

Fairfax police reported that someone broke a window of the firm at 109 Broadway at about 3 a.m. setting off a burglary alarm. By the time police arrived, the office was empty, and the saws, valued at $465, were missing from a display counter.

Innocent By Reason Of Insanity

An 18-year-old Santa Venetia youth, who threw a butter knife at a sheriff's deputy during an outburst in his home, has been found innocent by reason of insanity of a felony assault charge.

Judge David Menary Jr., who heard evidence against Jerry Amos Smith in a trial without jury Feb. 15, made the ruling Wednesday, then found Smith is presently sane and ordered him released.

Smith was arrested June 2 by sheriff's deputies that answered a report of a disturbance at his home.

Deputies said they found him smashing things and tried to calm him, but he fought them off with a knife and then threw it at one of the deputies. The weapon missed by two feet.

He fled into a bedroom and surrendered only after being maced and ter-gassed.

Psychiatrists appointed to examine him concluded he was insane at the time and became violent, apparently because his younger brother was wearing a pair of his pants.

Unit Formed To Revise City's Plan

More than 60 Larkspur residents have formed a citizens' committee to work on revising the Larkspur General Plan.

Representing almost every neighborhood group in the city, the residents split into six subcommittees and each elected a chairman. The six chairmen will form the steering committee.

Committees and chairman are:

Open space and conservation, John Roberts; technical elements, (such as seismic, noise, safety), Douglas Rainger; central business district, C. R. (Woody) Woodruff; housing, Robert Smith; scenic highways and circulation, Ronald Hilty, with Esther Taylor as alternate chairman; implementation and ordinance review — Sallyanne Wilson.

The state has set a July 1 deadline for revising cities' general plans.

Craftsmen Are Showing Work

A crafts show by the Baulines Craftsman's Guild is being presented through March 31 at the San Rafael City Library, 1100 E. Street.

On display are works in filmmaking, jewelry, photography, pottery, guitar and furniture making, sculpture, metal work, printmaking and weaving and fabric construction.

The guild is in its second year of offering aspiring craftsmen apprenticeships to independent, self-supporting craftsmen.

A Warning By Reagan On Strikes

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — University and college professors have been warned by Gov. Ronald Reagan that California will not tolerate a strike by them or any other group of public employes.

"I say if someone chooses to work for the people, for the public, and not in profit-making industry, there are some things they have to give up in return for some other things that I think have a value, such as job security," Reagan told the state College Academic Senate yesterday.

"I do not believe that we can tolerate or accept the right of public employes to strike in any field," he declared.

During a question and answer session, the governor told the professors from the California State University and College system that government has an obligation to provide its ervices.

"What if in the midst of a war, an army decided to strike, (saying) pay us or we're going to throw down our guns and let the enemy through," Reagan asked.

Wayne Bradley, president of the United Professors of California at San Francisco state university, differed. He insisted that a strike threat was needed.

In an apparent reference to Reagan's acting career, Bradley said, "Just as all actors are not great actors —not grade A actors—all teachers are not super-profs."

He said the threat of a strike was needed to insure "serious negotiations" for all teachers — not just the ones with superior qualifications who he said would have no difficulty in receiving a good contract.

Reagan also pledged to fight for his proposed 7.5 per cent salary hike for the state university and college faculty, which he said was a recognition of the "high quality of teaching."

The proposal was attacked Thursday by Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post, who told the professors a 5.5 per cent increase would be more acceptable.

He said Reagan was "unjustified" in proposing a 7.5 per cent increase for the state colleges while offering the University of California faculty only a 5.4 per cent hike.

Golden Hinde Will Set Sail April 5

A replica of the Golden Hinde, Sir Francis Drake's vessel, will sail from England April 5, bound for duty as a San Francisco tourist attraction by way of the Panama Canal.

The ship will be moored at Fisherman's Wharf as an exhibit for visitors, according to the British Consulate General.

Although there are no existing plans of the original Golden Hinde, the replica is being built to specifications provided by Marin naval architect Christian Norgaard of San Rafael, who spent three years researching the project, the consulate said.

Built of English oak and elm, the vessel weighs 102 tons, has a 60-foot keel and is 20 feet in the beam. The three-mast, three deck ship will carry eighteen cannon and 4,150 feet of sail.

Construction of the ship sparked wide interest in England, where thousands of people have paid to watch work on the vessel from especially built galleries.

Injured By Cheese

NEW YORK (UPI) — A vacation in Italy was interrupted for identical twins Carol and Christine Foster when a runaway, 66-pound round Parmesan cheese fell from a truck and rolled into them, leaving each with a broken leg, reports the National Enquirer.

Plea Made To Car Theft Count

Mark Allen Warner, 22, of San Anselmo has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a felony auto theft charge.

He is slated to return to court Wednesday for setting a preliminary hearing.

San Anselmo police arrested him Wednesday on suspicion of taking a car parked Sunday on Los Angeles Boulevard.

Horse Racing A Lot Better Than Old Job

By JANE SHOEMAKER

GRANTVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — Patty Barton used to earn $1 an hour tending bar. Now she gets up to $500 for an evening's work as the winningest female jockey in the nation.

"I can remember in 1970 standing at an airport with nothing but a foot locker and a bird cage with a dog in it," she said.

"Now I'm driving a new pick-up; I have two house trailers, and I'm starting my own store. The tracks have been good to me."

Miss Barton, 28, of Chester, W.Va., and nine others who competed in an all-women race last week at Penn National Course agreed they were lured into the profession by money. But they admitted there are some drawbacks.

IN 1971, Miss Barton had 110 winners. She led the distaff field in 1972 with over 100 wins.

But her horses have been sluggish lately. She ended up in the middle of the pack when she competed at Penn National.

"All the girls talk about how good they are treated," she said, tugging at a stylish brown suede cap. "Well I know folks are treating me good right now because I'm not doing so well. When you're winning, they won't give you the time of day."

Miss Barton, a divroced mother of three young children, has numerous pulls, strains, and broken bones from her work. But her worst injury came during a post parade.

"My horse was like a monkey at the end of a leash," she said. "We parted company with me going right over her head. I landed on my feet, but it gave me a football knee."

JEANNE MAXWELL, 19, of Elk City, Okla., started out on top. The daughter of a trainer, she won the first race she entered.

"My odds were 29 to one," she said, recalling the race last June in Montreal. "I was in a trance for days."

Miss Maxwell, who trimmed herself from 140 to 112 pounds to ride, now keeps in shape by galloping horses for three hours each morning.

Off the track, she wants to be known as a lady. But on it, she said, "I let everyone know I mean business.

"When you start, you've gotta hustle," she said.

Miss Maxwell and Mary May, a tiny 21-year-old from Boulder, Colo., date their male counterparts. Both of them know the satisfaction of winning against them, too.

"If I've gone out with a jock," Miss May said, "I try even harder to beat him. I know he wouldn't give me one inch.

THE ONLY black woman licensed for riding is Cheryl White, 19, daughter of a Penn National trainer. She grew up on the tracks and now wants to make them her life.

Annual League Fashion Show Spotlights Universal Woman

By MOLLY MARIN

Always an extravaganza the 37th annual Junior League fashion show filled the Grand Ballroom of the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco yesterday with a crowd of nearly 1,200 for lunch.

The show with its lively music, blazing spotlights and fiery solar system screen projections was enhanced with the most wearable spring fashions seen in many seasons.

In keeping with the theme, "In Motion — The Universe — The Universal Woman," the quickly paced show was divided into segments by planets — Mercury, active sportswear; Earth, daytime fashions; Mars, children's apparel; Neptune, beach and out-of-doors fashions; Pluto, furs; Jupiter, teen styles; Saturn, after-five; Venus, formal, and a finale with a moon theme and models romping in a million dollars worth jewels.

Active sportswear, from white exercise shorts and an Hawaiian print shirt worn by Mrs. James E. Munson of Tiburon to the navy and white "board meeting" dress worn by Mrs. John A. Anderson Jr. had an easy, comfortable look. Pants were wide but not outlandishly so, and skirts hit mid-knee.

Also mid-knee was the lively yellow wool coat worn by Mrs. Lee M. Gammill Jr. of Mill Valley. Daytime fashions, many costume suits, were worn with Garbo hats and, also from the '30s, platform shoes, many in bone, a color not seen in San Francisco until recent years. Missing was the layered look, apparently out for spring. Mrs. Charles Raven III of Kentfield carried an umbrella as she modeled a navy and white wool classic dress, and also in navy and white Mrs. Richard J. Love of Belvedere was stunning in a check pleated costume suit. An interesting scarf effect topped the beige linen pantsuit worn by Mrs. James E. Munson of Tiburon. The scarf wrapped around her head, then draped her neck and shoulders. Mrs. Clarence O. Amonette Jr. of Ross wore a cool turquoise wool coat over a stark white skirt and blouse. Her coat was shaped in contrast to the wrap around jacket in peach worn by Mrs. Robert A. McHugh II of Mill Valley.

Martians danced as the young children of league members paraded in an array of fashions, all classic children's looks, from nautical to nightgowns.

Costume jewelry topped many of the vivid pastel playclothes. Halters topped many long dresses, most in flowing styles in floating fabrics. Particular crowd favorites were Mrs. Raven in an electric blue caftan and halter dresses on Mmes. Munson and Gammill.

As a concession to conservationists, furs were short, but Mrs. Amonett in a full length tip dyed sable coat drew the most applause. Other furs were reminiscent of the chubby look, many worn over full pants.

Young Marin models, Brita Dorst, Robin Frederick, Erin Hickey, Courtney Benoist and Dana Belshe and their counterparts from the city and the peninsula seemed to be in fashions a bit too sophisticated for the teen set, with the exception of Dana in a denim and gingham suit with a polka dot backpact.

Cocktail fashions began with a short dress in matte jersey and quickly switched to long — shirtdresses, trousers, caftans, kimonos and pleated skirts. Checks and floral prints in brilliant colors filled the runway.

Evening looks were dominated by elegance and softness. Long again dominated although two short gowns, both in organza, and two tiered gowns were shown.

Dripping in diamonds Mrs. Kirk Frederick of San Rafael and three other models in black body suits presented an extraordinay finale wearing brooches in places you wouldn't expect to see $50,000 jewelry.

Chairman of the show, which was repeated for a sell out dinner crowd last night, was Mrs. Gene M. Edwards of Mill Valley.

Wider Span Approach Is Facing Some Opposition

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Alarmed Golden Gate Bridge District directors yesterday learned that San Francisco supervisors may throw a monkey wrench into pending state plans to widen the dangerous San Francisco approach to the bridge.

The state plans call for an eight-lane viaduct with a median barrier, but belated opposition from San Francisco argues it should be six lanes as at present.

Bridge officials, however, objected that this would amount to a 25 per cent cut in traffic capacity because the concrete median barrier no longer will allow shifting a fourth lane in the direction of heavier traffic.

a six-lane project also would kill hopes of running buses against traffic in an opposing lane. This plan would require a buffer lae, which would be impossible if there were only three available.

Directors agreed to send a delegation to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors when it considers the matter at 2 p.m. on Monday.

In a related action, directors asked the state to require daylight use of headlights on the approach and to cut the present 45-mile-an-hour speed limit, perhaps to 35. Daytime headlight use has cut accidents on other dangerous highways throughout the state, including Highway 37 between Marin and Vallejo.

San Francisco Supervisor Peter Tamaras made the proposal for the daylight headlight use to increase safety until the approach is widened.

State financing for the $14 million widening was not supposed to be available until 1977, but legislation has been introduced to force work to begin next fiscal year.

Tamaras, opposing a cut of the project to six lanes, said to do so would kill the project. The state will not be interested in just widening the six lanes from 10 to 12 feet, he predicted.

The state already has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars and more than two years planning the eight-lane project, and is about to complete an environmental impact statement, Tamaras added.

The opposition started with citizens' groups fearing the project may lead either to a second deck on the bridge or a new freeway, the supervisor said. He discounted both fears as groundless.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

DRIVERS — Ratified a 13-month contract granting district bus drivers an hourly pay raise of 20 cents and improved working conditions. No mention was made of the $250,000 cost of the additional pay and benefits.

CYCLES — Asked staff to study confining motorcycles to extreme right-hand lanes to prevent them from cutting in and out of traffic.

BART — Received staff report that 23,195 passengers rode the district's buses and ferry on an average weekday last month, only 3,625 fewer than on the Bay Area Rapid Transit District system.

TRAILER — Accepted the sole bid of Porta House Inc. of Oakland to provide a trailer for $18,372. It will be used at the bus parking lot in San Francisco.

Workers Chant For Guerrilla Executions

KHARTOUM (UPI) — Thousands of workers attending a rally in support of President Jaafar Numeiry today chanted demands for the execution of Black September guerrillas who murdered two American diplomats and a Belgian last week.

Shouts of "revenge, execution for the commandos" and "traitor, traitor Arafat" were bellowed by the crowd. They referred to Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and leader of the Al Fatah guerrillas.

President Numeiry accused the head of the Al Fatah office in Khartoum of masterminding the attack on the Saudi Arabian embassy. The rally was called by trade union leaders to demonstrate support for Numeiry in his crackdown on guerrilla activities in Sudan.

Addressing the crowd over loudspeakers, Vice President Mohammed Al-Bagir said it has been proved beyond doubt that the Al Fatah office in Khartoum took part in the "planning nd carrying out of the embassy operation."

"We do not accept that Khartoum should be chosen as the place for the commission of such a crime," he said. He described the Black September attack as a "stupid adventure."

The vice president said three members of Al Fatah have been identified as taking part in planning the attack.

He said one of them, whom he identified only as "Kajam", has made a "full confession" of Al Fatah's role in the embassy drama.

"Kajam's confession reveals the source of the plot, its objectives and all indications lead to the Al Fatah office in Khartoum," Al-Bagir said. "We have tape recorded his confession and anybody who wants to can listen to it."

The state-run press reported that Sudan had offered to make available to any Arab government documents which it said would prove Fatah involvement with the attack.

Jobless Rate Holds Steady Last Month

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate in February held steady at 5.2 er cent, slightly higher than the nationwide average of 5.1 per cent, the Reagan administration reports.

However, Sigurd I. Hanse, director of the state Department of Human Resources Development, said in the announcement yesterday that the number of Californians holding jobs last month dropped 10,300 to a total of 8.16 million.

The major reason for the decline was a seasonal reduction in trade employment and outdoor work, such as construction and agriculture, Hansen said.

The number of persons unemployed was listed as 550,000, compared to 513,000 in the previous month.

Hansen described the overall employment situation as "notably improved" from this time last year. He said 244,100 more person were holding nonagricultural jobs in February.

He said the state's aerospace industry had 24,600 more workers last month than one year ago.

Frenchman Promises To Appear

A 24-year-old Frenchman, who allegedly told officials he planned to sail home aboard a stolen sailboat, was released without bail yesterday when he promised to return March 20 for a preliminary hearing on a felony grand theft charge.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court ordered the release of Claude Lemoine after reviewing a probation report that concluded he would show up for court.

The report said Lemoine is working toward an advanced degree in computer science at Stanford University on a grant from the French government.

Lemoine was captured Wednesday in San Francisco Bay by the Coast Guard. He was sailing a 40-foot yawl reported stolen that day from its slip at the Sausalito Yacht Harbor.

The vessel belongs to John White of Sausalito.

Navy Test Boat Sets A Record

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A Navy test boat that rides on a cushion of air reached speeds faster than 80 miles an hour on Lake Pontchartrain, its builders announced Thursday.

Bell Aerospace of Textron, Inc., said it was a new world speed record for "surface effect ships," or boats that glide just above the surface of the water.

The propeller-driven SES100B setting the new record is 100 feet long and weighs 100 tons. Engineers say one day ships as large as aircraft carriers can be built along the same lines.

Delegates Applaud Amnesty Call

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The first plenary session of the 21st annual convention of the California Democratic Council indicated last night the delegates favor amnesty for draft evaders and tax reform aimed at redistributing wealth and power in the United States.

The 800 delegates and 200 alternates responded with a big round of applause when CDC President Nate Holden told them:

"We must not forget the brave young men who fought against the war by fleeing the country. When this mess is over, they should be welcomed back free of all penalty."

The delegates also applauded and cheered when Holden noted that two years ago the CDC called for release on bail of Angela Davis, the former UCLA instructor accused of conspiracy to commit murder in the Marin County courthouse shootings involving black militants. He added, "She has since been vindicated of all charges."

Holden called the CDC, an organization of about 10,000 volunteer party workers, "the conscience of the Democratic party."

"We do the talking and they do the listening," he said of the relationship between the CDC and the official party. "We've been right on so many occasions that today when we take a position they just say 'amen.'

"We were the first to call for seating of mainland China in the United Nations. We were first to call for an end to the immoral and illegal conflict in Southeast Asia.

"We must continue to work for abolition of the draft and dismantling of the military industrial complex."

Tax reform and redistribution of wealth and power was the theme of the CDC convention keynote speaker, former U.S. Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma.

"Two hundred corporations control 60 per cent of our manufacturing," Harris said. "It is a myth that we have widespread capitalism in this country. Only 2 per cent of the population own 80 per cent of corporate stocks; 2 per cent own 90 per cent of bonds issued; 2 per cent own 100 per cent of tax-free municipal bonds."

He called America "a society in deep stress" and its symptoms, he said, were drug abuse, alcoholism and other self-destructive practices.

Harris said that 122 Americans made more than $100,000 in 1971 and paid no federal income taxes.

Harris aserted that oil billionaire J. Paul Getty gets about $70 million in tax exemptions which he said is a form of welfare.

"I say take the rich off welfare," he cried.

On April, 16, income tax day, Harris said his organization called New Populist Institute will stage seminars and rallies throughout the country "to show the politicians the people want fundamental changes in the tax structure."

He said his group has started the practice of naming "tax avoiders of the week" which he described as a "king of reverse award."

He nominated as tax avoiders in this area the Signal Companies which he said earned $28.6 million in 1971 but paid no federal income taxes, and Gulf and Western Industries which earned $51.3 million in 1971 but paid no federal income tax. He said these figures were in the Congressional Record.

He called on political leaders to appeal to economic selfinterest which he pointed out would include blacks and white and in general "working class people."

Today's session of the three-day convention includes workshop discussions of freedom of the press; judicial and penal reform; and returning basic rights to the people.

A highlight of the evening session will be a so-called "Hot Seat Dinner" during which prospective Democratic candidates for governor will make statements and answer questions.

Those scheduled to appear are Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco; Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr.; Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti; State Senate Majority Leader George Moscone; and Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif.

Martin Stone, a businessman, was invited but told the CDC he would not appear because he has decided not to run for governor next year.

Workshop Set On Career Education

The Tamalpais High School District board will hold a workshop discussion on career education Monday at the Sir Francis Drake High School student center at 8 p.m.

Trustees from elementary school districts within the Tam District are expected to attend the session, which was arranged at the request of the Fairfax School District.

Growth Control Policies On Agenda

Growth control policies will be considered at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting Monday at 7 p.m. at city hall.

Councilmen Vernon P. Smith and Armando Flores last week proposed formation of a commission to study the city's growth pattern and recommend controls.

DEAR RAP:

This is a memo to our friends and neighbors, and to all parents of adolescent offspring: Yes, we did go to Florida for a week and, yes, we did leave our two teen-age daughters alone. This is what happened:

ITEM 1: When we arrived at our Florida hotel, I found a note tucked in my makeup case, which read: "Hey, you guys: Have a ball in the sun. You deserve a rest. Don't worry about a thing —we can take care of each other and the house. See you in a week. Love, The Gals."

ITEM 2: Yes, they did have a party while we were gone. They used the lasagna I had left in the freezer for that purpose. No gloomy reports from up or down the block that decorum was abandoned.

ITEM 3: It's true, they were a few minutes late in meeting our plane. They had been vacuuming the house, changing bed linen and washing the two cars they drove to their separate schools. And they welcomed us with what we like to believe was gladness!

There's bound to be a generation gap, but the bridge to span it is built with confidence and trust. — A GRATEFUL CALIFORNIA MOM

And here's a note that is very special to both Sue and "ma": It was written by her older sister, Kathy, on the occasion of Sue's 18th birthday:

DEAR SUE:

Eighteen is a strange age. . .too old for high school. and a little young to be considered college age; old enough to vote and fight, yet too young to drink legally; old enough to hold a job, yet still too young for responsibility in that job; old enough to move out, get married, have a kid, or live with some guy, yet still "Daddy's baby". . .

Eighteen is a year for a lot of growing up and struggle, yet you still have your parents backing you up. It's a time of choosing. . .your job, or college, or lifestyle, or life. It's a time of learning. . .about people and places and you. It's a time of growing, certainly, but also a time of resting. . .before you really have to go out and learn, and choose, and live.

May your good sense and background help you to choose the right path — the one that's right for you. . .and may God always look after you.

Happy Birthday! — KAT

Let's end this "holiday" column with a couple of quotes:

"Courage is not only a balloon for rising but a parachute for falling." — Ludwig Borne.

A reader sends this poem, asking us to identify the author. We aren't sure, but we'll bet someone out there is:

"There's no thrill in easy sailing,
When the sky is clear and blue,
There's no joy in merely doing
Things which anyone can do.
But there is some satisfaction
That is mighty sweet to take,
When you reach a destination
That you thought you couldn't make."

SEW SIMPLE

Easy Way To Fill In Neckline After Dress Is Already Made

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just finished fitting a dress with a deep V neckline. I guess I didn't examine the pattern closely enough, now my husband won't let me out of the house because it is cut so low. Is there anything I can do to save the dress? I spent quite a lot of money on my material.

MRS. N.R.R.

DEAR MRS. N.R.R.,

There is a very simple way to fill in the neckline without having it look like you changed it. In fact, it will have the new, soft look for this year's fashions. You may add a ruffle to the neckline and also tie it in with a ruffle at the lower end of your sleeves if you desire.

Remove the neckline facing and be sure the neckline has not been stretched. It may be necessary to place a row of machine stitching on the seamline and pull it up slightly before applying the ruffles.

To cut circular ruffles, take a 12-inch square of your fabric and curve the three corners to look almost like a circle. Beginning at the fourth corner (the one you didn't curve), cut a 2-inch continuous strip following the curve at the outside edges until you come all the way to the center. If you need more ruffling, begin with another square and join the two pieces.

There are several ways of finishing the raw edges, you may roll the edges in a machine or hand hem. The raw edges may also be finished in a decorative machine stitch such as a scallop or it may be edged in a narrow braid.

If you wish the ruffles to be faced or double, proceed with the same size strip and pin the outer edges together. Make a very narrow seam and turn to the right side. Baste the two layers together at the unfinished edge and apply to your neckline.

If you desire the ruffles to appear fuller, run a gathering thread at the unfinished edge and pull slightly until you have the desired amount of gathers and then apply to garment.

Many times when you have doctored up a garment, it becomes your very favorite because it has an individual touch the pattern didn't call for. It fools your friends and they'll think you're so clever cut on broken line for ruffles

Ms. Anna S. Fendlason, Hammond, La., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion:

"I recently made a sheer dress with a four-piece flared skirt and wanted a deep hem. When I attempted to turn the hem up, I discovered that the fullness would look most unattractive and bulky. I placed the pattern back on the skirt and cut off the hem to the correct length. Then I sewed the part I had cut off back on the curved edge of the dress, right sides together which created a false hem. Trim the seamline very straight and narrow. There will be some excess fabric on the hem facing that will have to be trimmed to fit each seam. You will find the hem will not fit flat on the garment and still give you the deep hem effect."

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just begun fooling around with sheer tricots trying to make some lingerie. The most frustrating part about it is trying to get started with the machine stitching. When I begin, the tricot seems to immediately draw down into the needle-plate of my machine and cause the bobbin to jam up. No matter how slowly I begin, the same thing happens. I'm so frustrated — I could give up ever working on tricot again.

MRS. J.K.

DEAR MRS. J.K.,

The tricot is so sheer and squiggly, it happens to most of us unless you learn a little secret. Place the needle in your fabric, and lower presser foot. Take both bobbin and top thread together in your hand. Hold firmly until you have stitched far enough to clear the needle-plate. Keep this in mind when working with any sheer fabric.

DEAR EUNICE,

I guess my shoulders slope more han normal because I find the armhole gaps on the bodice of my dresses. I do some sewing and find the same thing happens when I make my clothes. Can I change both my patterns as well as the dresses I buy?

MRS. M.E.K.

DEAR MRS. M.E.K.,

This is a simple adjustment to make when you make your own clothes; it requires more alterations on ready-made clothes. Simply slope the shoulder seam down slightly at the armhole, to fit the contour of your body. When you cut the armhole, you will have to cut it slightly deeper at the underarm so that the armhole will remain the same size.

To alter a ready-made dress, remove the sleeve, curve the shoulder seam slightly and cut the underarm slightly deeper.

And here's a note that is very special to both Sue and "ma": It was written by her older sister, Kathy, on the occasion of Sue's 18th birthday:

DEAR SUE:

Eighteen is a strange age. . .too old for high school, and a little young to be considered college age; old enough to vote and fight, yet too young to drink legally; old enough to hold a job, yet still too young for responsibility in that job; old enough to move out, get married, have a kid, or live with some guy, yet still "Daddy's baby". . .

Eighteen is a year for a lot of growing up and struggle, yet you still have your parents backing you up. It's a time of choosing. . .your job, or college, or lifestyle, or life. It's a time of learning. . .about people and places and you. It's a time of growing, certainly, but also a time of resting. . .before you really have to go out and learn, and choose, and live.

May your good sense and background help you to choose the right path — the one that's right for you. . .and may God always look after you.

Happy Birthday! — KAT

Let's end this "holiday" column with a couple of quotes:

"Courage is not only a balloon for rising but a parachute for falling." — Ludwig Borne.

A reader sends this poem, asking us to identify the author. We aren't sure, but we'll bet someone out there is:

"There's no thrill in easy sailing,
When the sky is clear and blue,
There's no joy in merely doing
Things which anyone can do.
But there is some satisfaction
That is mighty sweet to take,
When you reach a destination
That you thought you couldn't make."

SEW SIMPLE

Easy Way To Fill In Neckline After Dress Is Already Made

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just finished fitting a dress with a deep V neckline. I guess I didn't examine the pattern closely enough, now my husband won't let me out of the house because it is cut so low. Is there anything I can do to save the dress? I spent quite a lot of money on my material.

MRS. N.R.R.

DEAR MRS. N.R.R.,

There is a very simple way to fill in the neckline without having it look like you changed it. In fact, it will have the new, soft look for this year's fashions. You may add a ruffle to the neckline and also tie it in with a ruffle at the lower end of your sleeves if you desire.

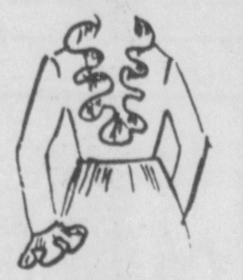
Remove the neckline facing and be sure the neckline has not been stretched. It may be necessary to place a row of machine stitching on the seamline and pull it up slightly before applying the ruffles.

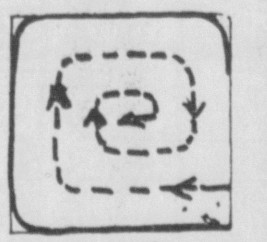
To cut circular ruffles, take a 12-inch square of your fabric and curve the three corners to look almost like a circle. Beginning at the fourth corner (the one you didn't curve), cut a 2-inch continuous strip following the curve at the outside edges until you come all the way to the center. If you need more ruffling, begin with another square and join the two pieces.

There are several ways of finishing the raw edges, you may roll the edges in a machine or hand hem. The raw edges may also be finished in a decorative machine stitch such as a scallop or it may be edged in a narrow braid.

If you wish the ruffles to be faced or double, proceed with the same size strip and pin the outer edges together. Make a very narrow seam and turn to the right side. Baste the two layers together at the unfinished edge and apply to your neckline.

If you desire the ruffles to appear fuller, run a gathering thread at the unfinished edge and pull slightly until you have the desired amount of gathers and then apply to garment.





cut on broken line for ruffles

Many times when you have doctored up a garment, it becomes your very favorite because it has an individual touch the pattern didn't call for. It fools your friends and they'll think you're so clever

Ms. Anna S. Fendlason, Hammond, La., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion:

"I recently made a sheer dress with a four-piece flared skirt and wanted a deep hem. When I attempted to turn the hem up, I discovered that the fullness would look most unattractive and bulky. I placed the pattern back on the skirt and cut off the hem to the correct length. Then I sewed the part I had cut off back on the curved edge of the dress, right sides together which created a false hem. Trim the seamline very straight and narrow. There will be some excess fabric on the hem facing that will have to be trimmed to fit each seam. You will find the hem will not fit flat on the garment and still give you the deep hem effect."

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just begun fooling around with sheer tricots trying to make some lingerie. The most frustrating part about it is trying to get started with the machine stitching. When I begin, the tricot seems to immediately draw down into the needle-plate of my machine and cause the bobbin to jam up. No matter how slowly I begin, the same thing happens. I'm so frustrated — I could give up ever working on tricot again.

MRS. J.K.

DEAR MRS. J.K.,

The tricot is so sheer and squiggly, it happens to most of us unless you learn a little secret. Place the needle in your fabric, and lower presser foot. Take both bobbin and top thread together in your hand. Hold firmly until you have stitched far enough to clear the needle-plate. Keep this in mind when working with any sheer fabric.

DEAR EUNICE,

I guess my shoulders slope more han normal because I find the armhole gaps on the bodice of my dresses. I do some sewing and find the same thing happens when I make my clothes. Can I change both my patterns as well as the dresses I buy?

MRS. M.E.K.

DEAR MRS. M.E.K.,

This is a simple adjustment to make when you make your own clothes; it requires more alterations on ready-made clothes. Simply slope the shoulder seam down slightly at the armhole, to fit the contour of your body. When you cut the armhole, you will have to cut it slightly deeper at the underarm so that the armhole will remain the same size.

To alter a ready-made dress, remove the sleeve, curve the shoulder seam slightly and cut the underarm slightly deeper.

Horse Racing A Lot Better Than Old Job

By JANE SHOEMAKER

GRANTVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — Patty Barton used to earn $1 an hour tending bar. Now she gets up to $500 for an evening's work as the winningest female jockey in the nation.

"I can remember in 1970 standing at an airport with nothing but a foot locker and a bird cage with a dog in it," she said.

"Now I'm driving a new pick-up; I have two house trailers, and I'm starting my own store. The tracks have been good to me."

Miss Barton, 28, of Chester, W.Va., and nine others who competed in an all-women race last week at Penn National Course agreed they were lured into the profession by money. But they admitted there are some drawbacks.

IN 1971, Miss Barton had 110 winners. She led the distaff field in 1972 with over 100 wins.

But her horses have been sluggish lately. She ended up in the middle of the pack when she competed at Penn National.

"All the girls talk about how good they are treated," she said, tugging at a stylish brown suede cap. "Well I know folks are treating me good right now because I'm not doing so well. When you're winning, they won't give you the time of day."

Miss Barton, a divroced mother of three young children, has numerous pulls, strains, and broken bones from her work. But her worst injury came during a post parade.

"My horse was like a monkey at the end of a leash," she said. "We parted company with me going right over her head. I landed on my feet, but it gave me a football knee."

JEANNE MAXWELL, 19, of Elk City, Okla., started out on top. The daughter of a trainer, she won the first race she entered.

"My odds were 29 to one," she said, recalling the race last June in Montreal. "I was in a trance for days."

Miss Maxwell, who trimmed herself from 140 to 112 pounds to ride, now keeps in shape by galloping horses for three hours each morning.

Off the track, she wants to be known as a lady. But on it, she said, "I let everyone know I mean business.

"When you start, you've gotta hustle," she said.

Miss Maxwell and Mary May, a tiny 21-year-old from Boulder, Colo., date their male counterparts. Both of them know the satisfaction of winning against them, too.

"If I've gone out with a jock," Miss May said, "I try even harder to beat him. I know he wouldn't give me one inch.

THE ONLY black woman licensed for riding is Cheryl White, 19, daughter of a Penn National trainer. She grew up on the tracks and now wants to make them her life.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Annual League Fashion Show Spotlights Universal Woman

By MOLLY MARIN

Always an extravaganza the 37th annual Junior League fashion show filled the Grand Ballroom of the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco yesterday with a crowd of nearly 1,200 for lunch.

The show with its lively music, blazing spotlights and fiery solar system screen projections was enhanced with the most wearable spring fashions seen in many seasons.

In keeping with the theme, "In Motion — The Universe — The Universal Woman," the quickly paced show was divided into segments by planets — Mercury, active sportswear; Earth, daytime fashions; Mars, children's apparel; Neptune, beach and out-of-doors fashions; Pluto, furs; Jupiter, teen styles; Saturn, after-five; Venus, formal, and a finale with a moon theme and models romping in a million dollars worth jewels.

Active sportswear, from white exercise shorts and an Hawaiian print shirt worn by Mrs. James E. Munson of Tiburon to the navy and white "board meeting" dress worn by Mrs. John A. Anderson Jr. had an easy, comfortable look. Pants were wide but not outlandishly so, and skirts hit mid-knee.

Also mid-knee was the lively yellow wool coat worn by Mrs. Lee M. Gammill Jr. of Mill Valley. Daytime fashions, many costume suits, were worn with Garbo hats and, also from the '30s, platform shoes, many in bone, a color not seen in San Francisco until recent years. Missing was the layered look, apparently out for spring. Mrs. Charles Raven III of Kentfield carried an umbrella as she modeled a navy and white wool classic dress, and also in navy and white Mrs. Richard J. Love of Belvedere was stunning in a check pleated costume suit. An interesting scarf effect topped the beige linen pantsuit worn by Mrs. James E. Munson of Tiburon. The scarf wrapped around her head, then draped her neck and shoulders. Mrs. Clarence O. Amonette Jr. of Ross wore a cool turquoise wool coat over a stark white skirt and blouse. Her coat was shaped in contrast to the wrap around jacket in peach worn by Mrs. Robert A. McHugh II of Mill Valley.

Martians danced as the young children of league members paraded in an array of fashions, all classic children's looks, from nautical to nightgowns.

Costume jewelry topped many of the vivid pastel playclothes. Halters topped many long dresses, most in flowing styles in floating fabrics. Particular crowd favorites were Mrs. Raven in an electric blue caftan and halter dresses on Mmes. Munson and Gammill.

As a concession to conservationists, furs were short, but Mrs. Amonett in a full length tip dyed sable coat drew the most applause. Other furs were reminiscent of the chubby look, many worn over full pants.

Young Marin models, Brita Dorst, Robin Frederick, Erin Hickey, Courtney Benoist and Dana Belshe and their counterparts from the city and the peninsula seemed to be in fashions a bit too sophisticated for the teen set, with the exception of Dana in a denim and gingham suit with a polka dot backpact.

Cocktail fashions began with a short dress in matte jersey and quickly switched to long — shirtdresses, trousers, caftans, kimonos and pleated skirts. Checks and floral prints in brilliant colors filled the runway.

Evening looks were dominated by elegance and softness. Long again dominated although two short gowns, both in organza, and two tiered gowns were shown.

Dripping in diamonds Mrs. Kirk Frederick of San Rafael and three other models in black body suits presented an extraordinay finale wearing brooches in places you wouldn't expect to see $50,000 jewelry.

Chairman of the show, which was repeated for a sell out dinner crowd last night, was Mrs. Gene M. Edwards of Mill Valley.

The Jewelry Industry Council says the ashion in traditional silver place settings calls for — in each setting — six pieces: knife, fork, salad fork, soup spoon, teaspoon, butter spreader.

However, if economics dictate, the initial silver service can consist of four three-piece place settings consisting of average sized knife, fork and teaspoon.

Greek-Americans Have Lesson For All

ALL ETHNIC minorities could benefit from studying the accomplishments of Marin's Greek-American community.

In little more than a decade, the Greek-Americans of Marin have, in the current idiom, come together and got it altogether.

Never was this more evident than last Sunday night at Corte Madera Recreation Center, when nearly 300 Marinites of Greek ancestry gathered for their annual Mardi Gras.

The record unfolded.

ONLY A FEW short years ago the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin comprised only a handful of families meeting in borrowed space and served by a part-time priest.

Today the church is headed by a fulltime priest, Rev. James T. Adams. It has acquired land on which to build a building. It is accumulating funds for construction. It has outgrown its borrowed space a couple of times. It boasts a choir whose singing of Byzantine religious music is widely respected.

The church has a lively women's group called the Philoptohos Society which has been very effective in fund raising. In fact, Sunday night's Mardi Gras was a fund-raiser which the Philoptohos ladies arranged.

The Mardi Gras dinner featured some Greek specialties as well as plain American roast beef. Some who attended wore traditional Greek costumes. After dinner there were both Greek and U.S. contemporary music and dancing.

The thread through it all was clear. Those among us with Greek names are true Americans on one hand and at the same time true ethnic Greeks on the other. And their pride in both is clearly evident.

MARIN'S GREEK-American community dedicated its Mardi Gras this year to honoring one of its leaders, William Poulopoulos, widely known as a physical therapist in Marin for nearly a quarter of a century. He has turned his practice over to a successor and plans long rest in his native Greece to recover from eye ailments.

Poulopoulos was a founder of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin, its first president, chairman of its building committee, instigator of its choir, and cantor for its first worship services.

He has been politically active, working hard and effectively to line up support for worthy Greek-Americans who sought public office. Poulopoulos has worked hard for those he believed were intelligent, honest, sincere candidates of constructive intent. He was little concerned with their party affiliations.

How much better this is than conducting violent demonstrations in the name of "Greek power"!

HAS THIS APPROACH been successful?

On hand Sunday night to say "thank you" to William Poulopoulos and the Greek-Americans of Marin were former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher, State Sen. Nick Petris, Assemblyman Louis Papan, Marin County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, and County Sheriff Louis Mountanos, all Greek-Americans in the service of all their fellow Americans.

You have to conclude that the Greek-American minority has its rightful share of representation in high places, and then some. This has come about mostly because none of these officials sought office to represent only Greek-Americans. Each ran for office to do a job for all. At the same time, Greek-American campaign support was not aimed at winning power for Greek-Americans. It was based on providing an office-holder who would be good for all Americans.

WILLIAM POULOPOULOS was highly praised by all, as well he should be.

Chairman Arnold Batiste of the Marin County Board of supervisors was present to present a recognition resolution adopted by the supervisors, honoring Poulopoulos.

Father Adams presented a testimonial message from the Greek Orthodox archbishop, primate of North and South America.

Senator Petris and Assemblyman Papan presented a joint resolution adopted by the State Legislature to honor Poulopoulos.

Even Eleftherios Eliopoulos, the consul general of Greece, had words of praise for Poulopoulos.

In a larger sense, each of these resolutions and testimonials constituted recognition of the Greek-American community contribution to the full community.

George Christopher touched on this point briefly when he recalled the words of an early Greek philosopher to the effect that "the greatest contribution to evil is when good men do nothing."

Senator Petris summed it up when he quoted Pericles, "Because I was there, my community is better."

Because Bill Poulopoulos and his fellow Greek-Americans have been active here, we are all better off.

To repeat, all ethnic minorities could benefit from studying the accomplishments of Marin's Greek-American community.

Vitamins Should Not Be Treated As Drugs

The members of my family enjoy the freedom of use of the various vitamins and mineral supplements needed for proper nutrition and good health. The Food and Drug Administration is ordering a ban on 80 per cent of all supplements now available. If the ban is enforced, we would have to get a prescription from the doctor before being allowed to buy the various supplements of our choice. The price would go sky high like other prescription drugs, plus, doctors aren't about to hand out prescriptions for nothing. I can only imagine who decided to exploit the nutrition field and can further envision that if it goes into effect, some foods at the supermarket will eventually be by prescription only because they contain vitamins and minerals . . .

Congress can pass sensible legislation requiring that supplements be regulated separately from prescription drugs. House Resolution 643 amends the FDA act to do just that. The way to stop the ban is to write your congressman NOW and support H.R. 643. The deadline is very soon, March 20, 1973. All the members of my family have written to our congressman: William S. Mailliard, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

If Educators Confident, They Can Be Forthright

Your editorial on "labeling" school courses was excellent. I object strongly to the manner in which so many controversial subjects are presented. If the educators are convinced they're proper, surely they can afford to be honest and forthright. If they have any ability, I'm sure they could find more appropriate paragraphs to illustrate their point than those recently made public.

It's unfortunate that the test was labeled "pornographic" because now that will become the basis for debate. The point is that the vocabulary and grammar are atrocious and cannot be justified for use in an English course.

Once again, you — just by being yourselves — have managed to blow an unimportant and very minor high school conflict into a "controversy" far above and beyond its news value.

If these two parents had charged that the school was doing a poor job in some area, at best you would have put it in a front page bottom corner, probably less. But this, friends, concerns SEX, which makes immeasurably more interesting, exciting, etc. And by slapping "pornography" in a banner across the top of the page, well, maybe some "outraged" parent bought your sheet.

As to how you actually got the news: Just speculating, I would imagine that these two parents "charged" the school with a formal letter and/or verbally. The school, at this point, would not likely inform you (knowing what you would do) but the parents would, and probably did, knowing that you automatically guarantee a "controversy" by which they would have a far better chance of getting someone to listen.

Congressional Power Shortage: Too Much Gas Going To Waste

One of the groups most seriously affected by this winter's power crisis has been the Congress of the United States. While the rest of the country has managed to get by, Capitol Hill seems to be losing the energy battle, and experts predict that if President Nixon pursues his present policies, Congress will be completely out of power by 1974.

Stanford F. Crunch, a Washington power broker, told me: "Congress has been wasting its power for years. It has always thought the Constitution would provide it with ample resources to use power in any way it wanted to. Well, they've discovered that there isn't that much power around and, because the White House has been using so much of it, there's very little left to pump up to the Hill."

"Then you believe that the power shortage in Congress has been caused by White House demands for more power in domestic and foreign affairs?"

"That is correct," Crunch said. "At one time, power was equally divided between the White House and Capitol Hill. No one was concerned because there was enough to go around for everybody. But since the November election, the White House has doubled its power needs and has been draining Congress on the little energy it had."

"WHAT DOES THIS mean to the country?"

"It's obvious that without sufficient power resources Congress will be unable to function anywhere near its capacity. If the power crisis continues for another few months, you may have to close down the Senate and House of Representatives three or four days a week."

"That seems drastic," I said. "Couldn't the White House plug in Congress to some of its power until the crisis is over?"

"The White House has no intention of doing this. It maintains that the health and welfare of the United States depends on the power of the President. It is essential to the national interests of the country that the President be provided with all the power he can grab. If he shared any of the power with Congress his entire administration would be weakened and the American people would suffer."

"ARE THERE ANY new technological breakthroughs in power that could alleviate the congressional shortage?"

"None in the foreseeable future. One f the reasons Congress is suffering so is that it has the most antiquated power plant in the United States. The power came from ancient Senate and House committees which have refused to modernize their methods for 100 years. As long as there was a surplus of power, Congress did nothing to improve the system. But now that their power has been drained away, every legislator is screaming for new ways of getting back the power they've lost."

"Will the cost of power go up because of the shortage?" I asked Crunch.

"The price of power has been rising steadily for many years. The President has already warned Congress that if it wants power next year, it will have to pay dearly for it."

"What would it cost Congress?"

"In return for getting back some of its power, Congress will have to go along with all the President's fiscal programs, as well as his foreign policies."

"THAT IS EXPENSIVE," I said. "Isn't there enough gas up on Capitol Hill to keep its plant going?"

"Yes, gas has been one of the main sources of congressional power. But because there is no concentration of power on the Hill, most of the gas is being wasted on home consumption. If Congress could figure out some way of harnessing the gas that is manufactured at the capitol every day, it would have enough power to light up the city of Chicago."

Dollar Dumping Merely Indicator Of Greater Inflation To Come

WASHINGTON — Jawboning Nixon style is being directed against the current fiscal crisis. Whether it can help the dollar out of the slough of despond, which the President ascribes to the machinations of speculators in the money market, is doubtful.

Mr. Nixon is right when he says the rate of inflation is lower in this country than it is in the European countries where dollars are being dumped. It is the threat of future inflation and the yawning abyss of deficits — budgetary, trade, monetary — that has caused not erely speculators but the central banks and big corporations to unload their dollars.

A large share of the dollars dumped on the market during the past month have come from American multinational corporations. One American motor company with extensive European interests is said to have poured up to $1 billion of excess dollar holdings. No mere speculative venture, this represents the urgent need to protect company stockholders. The German Central Bank holds more than $30 billion in unwanted dollars. In other European capitals comparable hoards have accumulated, and Japan is overflowing with dollars bought with yen as the dollar sank below the ceiling price.

WITH SEVERAL administration voices saying several different things, no one can believe that the official wage increase guideline of 5.5 per cent has any meaning. Privatel, Cost of Living Director John T. Dunlop cautions that if unions with contracts coming up this year get raises of seven to nine per cent it should not be interpreted as breaking the wage guideline of Phase 3. Financial men know where these inspired reports come from, and they are quite capable of adding a big wage boost onto present rising prices to come up with a rate of inflation by midyear well above the present 2.5 or 3 per cent.

The demi-semi-retreat from controls in Phase 3 is only part of the uncertainty. Secy. of Agriculture Earl Butz chooses to chastise the press for pointing out what the upward swing in food prices will mean if it continues at the present rate of 2 to 2.5 per cent a month. He conveniently ignores his own too-little-and-too-late approach with a delay of seven months in opening more land for cattle feeding.

But the nitty gritty is income and outgo, with the likelihood, for all the talk about spending ceilings, of budgetary deficits larger than the administration has yet been willing to face. More red ink on the federal ledger, added to the $100 billion in Nixon deficits already racked up, also means more inflation.

THE PRESIDENT has been playing "pin the tail on the donkey" as he seeks to put all the blame for spending and deficits on the Congress. In Congress the response is to denounce the President for impounding monies voted for welfare and reform programs. In a twilight of divided powers, the end result is drift and uncertainty.

Yet now and then a voice of responsibility is heard. The other day Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., one of the most knowledgeable men in this town on finance, put a resolution before the House Democratic Caucus calling for fiscal responsibility in the government budget. The resolution declared that President Nixon was seeking to achieve fiscal balance by the sole means of cutting important programs rather than by raising additional revenue.

In a voice vote without a single dissent, the caucus commended the ways and means committee "for moving expeditiously" to consider loophole plugging and tax reform legislation. The committee was urged to report to the floor as soon as possible a bill raising maximum revenues without a general tax increase.

PROGRESS ON the loophole bill has been held up by the back trouble of the potentate of the ways and means committee, Wilbur Mills. But Mills is returning to Washington from Arkansas and the prospect is for action. Reuss believes that if a loophole-plugging bill does reach the floor, it will be difficult even for Republican members of the House to vote against it. After all, there is that grand old Republican shibboleth, "fiscal responsibility."

It would be difficult for Mr. Nixon to veto such a bill. Would he thereby be inviting further deficits? Wouldn't a veto mean that the President had thrown his strong right arm around the small minority that can take advantage of the loopholes? For the moment these are academic questions and the road between the ways and means committee and final passage of a bill opposed by powerful interests is full of formidable obstacles.

Road Of Economic Isolationism Led To Depression Of 1930s

In view of the rising clamor in the United States for a return to economic isolationism (higher tariffs, trade quotas, embargoes, and the like), it struck us as advisable to look up the record on what happened the last time this same urge was strong in the American people. We did. The result strikes us as a clear warning of the dreadful dangers lying down that road.

The last time was in 1930 when the Congress passed the highest protective tariffs in American history —the infamous Smoot-Hawley Bill.

WHAT THE RECORD shows is that the "great depression" came only then, after passage of that act and its implementation, not earlier as a result of the dramatic drop in the stock market of October, 1929.

The collapse of the stock market was a shock. But it didn't bring business to a halt or seriously knock down the gross national product. It did expose the fact that something was seriously wrong with the American economic system. What was wrong was the gradual shrinking of mass purchasing power as modern industrial techniques produced more goods with fewer men. People thrown out of work by technological unemployment had no purchasing power at all in those days. They were dependent on charity for food, clothing, and housing. They became an economic liability. And there were some 10 million out of work in a population less than half then what it is now.

This condition of declining purchasing power broke the stock market and the lives and fortunes of a few thousand people who had made paper fortunes out of unrealistic stock prices. But the depression itself didn't get really under way until 1931. The worst year was 1932 after the Smoot-Hawley tariff had set up retaliatory measures in Europe. The result was fragmentation of the greatest trading community in the world —the United States, Canada, and the countries of Western Europe.

LARGELY FORGOTTEN today is the related fact that Franklin Delano Roosevelt took office at the bottom of the depression in 1932 and did precisely the worst possible thing. Instead of moving at once to reopen trade, he scuttled the last best chance of avoiding the plunge into autocracy. As he took office the delegations were getting ready for an economic conference in London. Ha Mr. Roosevelt supported the aims of that conference, trade might have been revived for all concerned. It is even possible that a general economic revival might have come in time to brake the inflation in Germany which led to Adolf Hitler. But Mr. Roosevelt scuttled that conference.

The record is clear. Mr. Roosevelt instituted a lot of measures which softened the depression and got recovery under way, but very slowly. The American economy never really got going again until the build-up for World War II began to prime the industrial pump and cut down unemployment. It took that war to bring the United States out of depression and back into a partnership with overseas friends and allies.

The American story from World War I all the way through to today has one moral stronger than any other: Have friends and allies overseas and be a good trading partner to them.

Greek-Americans Have Lesson For All

ALL ETHNIC minorities could benefit from studying the accomplishments of Marin's Greek-American community.

In little more than a decade, the Greek-Americans of Marin have, in the current idiom, come together and got it altogether.

Never was this more evident than last Sunday night at Corte Madera Recreation Center, when nearly 300 Marinites of Greek ancestry gathered for their annual Mardi Gras.

The record unfolded.

ONLY A FEW short years ago the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin comprised only a handful of families meeting in borrowed space and served by a part-time priest.

Today the church is headed by a fulltime priest, Rev. James T. Adams. It has acquired land on which to build a building. It is accumulating funds for construction. It has outgrown its borrowed space a couple of times. It boasts a choir whose singing of Byzantine religious music is widely respected.

The church has a lively women's group called the Philoptohos Society which has been very effective in fund raising. In fact, Sunday night's Mardi Gras was a fund-raiser which the Philoptohos ladies arranged.

The Mardi Gras dinner featured some Greek specialties as well as plain American roast beef. Some who attended wore traditional Greek costumes. After dinner there were both Greek and U.S. contemporary music and dancing.

The thread through it all was clear. Those among us with Greek names are true Americans on one hand and at the same time true ethnic Greeks on the other. And their pride in both is clearly evident.

MARIN'S GREEK-American community dedicated its Mardi Gras this year to honoring one of its leaders, William Poulopoulos, widely known as a physical therapist in Marin for nearly a quarter of a century. He has turned his practice over to a successor and plans long rest in his native Greece to recover from eye ailments.

Poulopoulos was a founder of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin, its first president, chairman of its building committee, instigator of its choir, and cantor for its first worship services.

He has been politically active, working hard and effectively to line up support for worthy Greek-Americans who sought public office. Poulopoulos has worked hard for those he believed were intelligent, honest, sincere candidates of constructive intent. He was little concerned with their party affiliations.

How much better this is than conducting violent demonstrations in the name of "Greek power"!

HAS THIS APPROACH been successful?

On hand Sunday night to say "thank you" to William Poulopoulos and the Greek-Americans of Marin were former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher, State Sen. Nick Petris, Assemblyman Louis Papan, Marin County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, and County Sheriff Louis Mountanos, all Greek-Americans in the service of all their fellow Americans.

You have to conclude that the Greek-American minority has its rightful share of representation in high places, and then some. This has come about mostly because none of these officials sought office to represent only Greek-Americans. Each ran for office to do a job for all. At the same time, Greek-American campaign support was not aimed at winning power for Greek-Americans. It was based on providing an office-holder who would be good for all Americans.

WILLIAM POULOPOULOS was highly praised by all, as well he should be.

Chairman Arnold Batiste of the Marin County Board of supervisors was present to present a recognition resolution adopted by the supervisors, honoring Poulopoulos.

Father Adams presented a testimonial message from the Greek Orthodox archbishop, primate of North and South America.

Senator Petris and Assemblyman Papan presented a joint resolution adopted by the State Legislature to honor Poulopoulos.

Even Eleftherios Eliopoulos, the consul general of Greece, had words of praise for Poulopoulos.

In a larger sense, each of these resolutions and testimonials constituted recognition of the Greek-American community contribution to the full community.

George Christopher touched on this point briefly when he recalled the words of an early Greek philosopher to the effect that "the greatest contribution to evil is when good men do nothing."

Senator Petris summed it up when he quoted Pericles, "Because I was there, my community is better."

Because Bill Poulopoulos and his fellow Greek-Americans have been active here, we are all better off.

To repeat, all ethnic minorities could benefit from studying the accomplishments of Marin's Greek-American community.

Instead of moving at once to reopen trade, he scuttled the last best chance of avoiding the plunge into autocracy. As he took office the delegations were getting ready for an economic conference in London. Ha Mr. Roosevelt supported the aims of that conference, trade might have been revived for all concerned. It is even possible that a general economic revival might have come in time to brake the inflation in Germany which led to Adolf Hitler. But Mr. Roosevelt scuttled that conference.

The record is clear. Mr. Roosevelt instituted a lot of measures which softened the depression and got recovery under way, but very slowly. The American economy never really got going again until the build-up for World War II began to prime the industrial pump and cut down unemployment. It took that war to bring the United States out of depression and back into a partnership with overseas friends and allies.

The American story from World War I all the way through to today has one moral stronger than any other: Have friends and allies overseas and be a good trading partner to them.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

March 10, 1963

A firebug started fires at three markets in Fairfax.

A total of 108,371 Marinites turned out for type III polio immunization sugar cubes at clinics held at schools throughout the county.

March 10, 1953

Reversing a stand of two years earlier, the Marin County Board of Supervisors endorsed a proposed state study of the Reber Plan for an earthfill barrier across the bay.

Long drought ended with rain throughout Marin. Nearly an inch fell at the Throckmorton Ridge county fire station.

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

If man's best friend is the dog, a woman's best friend is her hair stylist.

Only a woman knows what a hairdo does.

Going to the beauty shop to have her locks curled doesn't prevent a gal from returning there the following week to get her hair straightened.

A man's inability to understand women is matched only by his difficulty in recognizing them when they emerge from the beauty parlor.

The woman who says she has nothing to wear wouldn't dream of wearing it without a matching hairdo.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Readers Ask A Holiday From Problems; Request Granted

DEAR RAP:

We like your change-of-pace columns where you take a holiday from problems. How about another? — READERS

READERS:

Happy to oblige — we like problemless days too:

DEAR RAP:

This is a memo to our friends and neighbors, and to all parents of adolescent offspring: Yes, we did go to Florida for a week and, yes, we did leave our two teen-age daughters alone. This is what happened:

ITEM 1: When we arrived at our Florida hotel, I found a note tucked in my makeup case, which read: "Hey, you guys: Have a ball in the sun. You deserve a rest. Don't worry about a thing —we can take care of each other and the house. See you in a week. Love, The Gals."

ITEM 2: Yes, they did have a party while we were gone. They used the lasagna I had left in the freezer for that purpose. No gloomy reports from up or down the block that decorum was abandoned.

ITEM 3: It's true, they were a few minutes late in meeting our plane. They had been vacuuming the house, changing bed linen and washing the two cars they drove to their separate schools. And they welcomed us with what we like to believe was gladness!

There's bound to be a generation gap, but the bridge to span it is built with confidence and trust. — A GRATEFUL CALIFORNIA MOM

And here's a note that is very special to both Sue and "ma": It was written by her older sister, Kathy, on the occasion of Sue's 18th birthday:

DEAR SUE:

Eighteen is a strange age. . .too old for high school, and a little young to be considered college age; old enough to vote and fight, yet too young to drink legally; old enough to hold a job, yet still too young for responsibility in that job; old enough to move out, get married, have a kid, or live with some guy, yet still "Daddy's baby". . .

Eighteen is a year for a lot of growing up and struggle, yet you still have your parents backing you up. It's a time of choosing. . .your job, or college, or lifestyle, or life. It's a time of learning. . .about people and places and you. It's a time of growing, certainly, but also a time of resting. . .before you really have to go out and learn, and choose, and live.

May your good sense and background help you to choose the right path — the one that's right for you. . .and may God always look after you.

Happy Birthday! — KAT

Let's end this "holiday" column with a couple of quotes:

"Courage is not only a balloon for rising but a parachute for falling." — Ludwig Borne.

A reader sends this poem, asking us to identify the author. We aren't sure, but we'll bet someone out there is:

"There's no thrill in easy sailing,
When the sky is clear and blue,
There's no joy in merely doing
Things which anyone can do.
But there is some satisfaction
That is mighty sweet to take,
When you reach a destination
That you thought you couldn't make."

SEW SIMPLE

Easy Way To Fill In Neckline After Dress Is Already Made

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just finished fitting a dress with a deep V neckline. I guess I didn't examine the pattern closely enough, now my husband won't let me out of the house because it is cut so low. Is there anything I can do to save the dress? I spent quite a lot of money on my material.

MRS. N.R.R.

DEAR MRS. N.R.R.,

There is a very simple way to fill in the neckline without having it look like you changed it. In fact, it will have the new, soft look for this year's fashions. You may add a ruffle to the neckline and also tie it in with a ruffle at the lower end of your sleeves if you desire.

Remove the neckline facing and be sure the neckline has not been stretched. It may be necessary to place a row of machine stitching on the seamline and pull it up slightly before applying the ruffles.

To cut circular ruffles, take a 12-inch square of your fabric and curve the three corners to look almost like a circle. Beginning at the fourth corner (the one you didn't curve), cut a 2-inch continuous strip following the curve at the outside edges until you come all the way to the center. If you need more ruffling, begin with another square and join the two pieces.

There are several ways of finishing the raw edges, you may roll the edges in a machine or hand hem. The raw edges may also be finished in a decorative machine stitch such as a scallop or it may be edged in a narrow braid.

If you wish the ruffles to be faced or double, proceed with the same size strip and pin the outer edges together. Make a very narrow seam and turn to the right side. Baste the two layers together at the unfinished edge and apply to your neckline.

If you desire the ruffles to appear fuller, run a gathering thread at the unfinished edge and pull slightly until you have the desired amount of gathers and then apply to garment.

Many times when you have doctored up a garment, it becomes your very favorite because it has an individual touch the pattern didn't call for. It fools your friends and they'll think you're so clever cut on broken line for ruffles

Ms. Anna S. Fendlason, Hammond, La., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion:

"I recently made a sheer dress with a four-piece flared skirt and wanted a deep hem. When I attempted to turn the hem up, I discovered that the fullness would look most unattractive and bulky. I placed the pattern back on the skirt and cut off the hem to the correct length. Then I sewed the part I had cut off back on the curved edge of the dress, right sides together which created a false hem. Trim the seamline very straight and narrow. There will be some excess fabric on the hem facing that will have to be trimmed to fit each seam. You will find the hem will not fit flat on the garment and still give you the deep hem effect."

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just begun fooling around with sheer tricots trying to make some lingerie. The most frustrating part about it is trying to get started with the machine stitching. When I begin, the tricot seems to immediately draw down into the needle-plate of my machine and cause the bobbin to jam up. No matter how slowly I begin, the same thing happens. I'm so frustrated — I could give up ever working on tricot again.

MRS. J.K.

DEAR MRS. J.K.,

The tricot is so sheer and squiggly, it happens to most of us unless you learn a little secret. Place the needle in your fabric, and lower presser foot. Take both bobbin and top thread together in your hand. Hold firmly until you have stitched far enough to clear the needle-plate. Keep this in mind when working with any sheer fabric.

DEAR EUNICE,

I guess my shoulders slope more han normal because I find the armhole gaps on the bodice of my dresses. I do some sewing and find the same thing happens when I make my clothes. Can I change both my patterns as well as the dresses I buy?

MRS. M.E.K.

DEAR MRS. M.E.K.,

This is a simple adjustment to make when you make your own clothes; it requires more alterations on ready-made clothes. Simply slope the shoulder seam down slightly at the armhole, to fit the contour of your body. When you cut the armhole, you will have to cut it slightly deeper at the underarm so that the armhole will remain the same size.

To alter a ready-made dress, remove the sleeve, curve the shoulder seam slightly and cut the underarm slightly deeper.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Market In Black At End Of Action

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market closed in the black this week, primarily because of investor optimism the current monetary crisis will be resolved on a positive note for the United States.

But the picture was not without its dark spots, as a burst in the wholesale price index renewed investor worries about inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue chip industrial stocks added 10.91 to 972.23. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a broader based indicator than the Dow, gained 1.51 to 113.79 and the New York Stock Exchange index picked up 0.85 to 61.02. Advances led declines, 1,109 to 644, among 1,963 issues traded.

Turnover totaled 79,911,243 shares, compared with 85,877,410 shares the week before and with 106,102,420 shares a year earlier.

The market picked up Monday where it left off the week before and scratched out a respectable gain. The weekly moratorium on trading in European monetary markets was in its first day and investors were hopeful the dollar would be better for the rest.

Signs of strength in the economy then began to appear as the government announced a surge in January factory orders and a private financial survey forecast a "boom in corporate capital expenditures."

The stock market demonstrated some zest. At one point during mid-session Monday, buying trickled off and it began to seem as though the indicators were about to take the fall in an all too familiar pattern. Instead, activity picked up in late afternoon and analysts and brokers were puzzled by the developments in a most pleasant way.

Wednesday's session was highlighted by President Nixon's announcement price controls would be mandatory for a number of petroleum industry products.

The market has been in an almost continuous decline since

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Market In Black At End Of Action

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market closed in the black this week, primarily because of investor optimism the current monetary crisis will be resolved on a positive note for the United States.

But the picture was not without its dark spots, as a burst in the wholesale price index renewed investor worries about inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue chip industrial stocks added 10.91 to 972.23. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a broader based indicator than the Dow, gained 1.51 to 113.79 and the New York Stock Exchange index picked up 0.85 to 61.02. Advances led declines, 1,109 to 644, among 1,963 issues traded.

Turnover totaled 79,911,243 shares, compared with 85,877,410 shares the week before and with 106,102,420 shares a year earlier.

The market picked up Monday where it left off the week before and scratched out a respectable gain. The weekly moratorium on trading in European monetary markets was in its first day and investors were hopeful the dollar would be better for the rest.

Signs of strength in the economy then began to appear as the government announced a surge in January factory orders and a private financial survey forecast a "boom in corporate capital expenditures."

The stock market demonstrated some zest. At one point during mid-session Monday, buying trickled off and it began to seem as though the indicators were about to take the fall in an all too familiar pattern. Instead, activity picked up in late afternoon and analysts and brokers were puzzled by the developments in a most pleasant way.

Wednesday's session was highlighted by President Nixon's announcement price controls would be mandatory for a number of petroleum industry products.

The market has been in an almost continuous decline since

Greek-Americans Have Lesson For All

ALL ETHNIC minorities could benefit from studying the accomplishments of Marin's Greek-American community.

In little more than a decade, the Greek-Americans of Marin have, in the current idiom, come together and got it altogether.

Never was this more evident than last Sunday night at Corte Madera Recreation Center, when nearly 300 Marinites of Greek ancestry gathered for their annual Mardi Gras.

The record unfolded.

ONLY A FEW short years ago the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin comprised only a handful of families meeting in borrowed space and served by a part-time priest.

Today the church is headed by a fulltime priest, Rev. James T. Adams. It has acquired land on which to build a building. It is accumulating funds for construction. It has outgrown its borrowed space a couple of times. It boasts a choir whose singing of Byzantine religious music is widely respected.

The church has a lively women's group called the Philoptohos Society which has been very effective in fund raising. In fact, Sunday night's Mardi Gras was a fund-raiser which the Philoptohos ladies arranged.

The Mardi Gras dinner featured some Greek specialties as well as plain American roast beef. Some who attended wore traditional Greek costumes. After dinner there were both Greek and U.S. contemporary music and dancing.

The thread through it all was clear. Those among us with Greek names are true Americans on one hand and at the same time true ethnic Greeks on the other. And their pride in both is clearly evident.

MARIN'S GREEK-American community dedicated its Mardi Gras this year to honoring one of its leaders, William Poulopoulos, widely known as a physical therapist in Marin for nearly a quarter of a century. He has turned his practice over to a successor and plans long rest in his native Greece to recover from eye ailments.

Poulopoulos was a founder of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin, its first president, chairman of its building committee, instigator of its choir, and cantor for its first worship services.

He has been politically active, working hard and effectively to line up support for worthy Greek-Americans who sought public office. Poulopoulos has worked hard for those he believed were intelligent, honest, sincere candidates of constructive intent. He was little concerned with their party affiliations.

How much better this is than conducting violent demonstrations in the name of "Greek power"!

HAS THIS APPROACH been successful?

On hand Sunday night to say "thank you" to William Poulopoulos and the Greek-Americans of Marin were former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher, State Sen. Nick Petris, Assemblyman Louis Papan, Marin County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, and County Sheriff Louis Mountanos, all Greek-Americans in the service of all their fellow Americans.

You have to conclude that the Greek-American minority has its rightful share of representation in high places, and then some. This has come about mostly because none of these officials sought office to represent only Greek-Americans. Each ran for office to do a job for all. At the same time, Greek-American campaign support was not aimed at winning power for Greek-Americans. It was based on providing an office-holder who would be good for all Americans.

WILLIAM POULOPOULOS was highly praised by all, as well he should be.

Chairman Arnold Batiste of the Marin County Board of supervisors was present to present a recognition resolution adopted by the supervisors, honoring Poulopoulos.

Father Adams presented a testimonial message from the Greek Orthodox archbishop, primate of North and South America.

Senator Petris and Assemblyman Papan presented a joint resolution adopted by the State Legislature to honor Poulopoulos.

Even Eleftherios Eliopoulos, the consul general of Greece, had words of praise for Poulopoulos.

In a larger sense, each of these resolutions and testimonials constituted recognition of the Greek-American community contribution to the full community.

George Christopher touched on this point briefly when he recalled the words of an early Greek philosopher to the effect that "the greatest contribution to evil is when good men do nothing."

Senator Petris summed it up when he quoted Pericles, "Because I was there, my community is better."

Because Bill Poulopoulos and his fellow Greek-Americans have been active here, we are all better off.

To repeat, all ethnic minorities could benefit from studying the accomplishments of Marin's Greek-American community.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to the other four members of the Marin County Board of Supervisors for rejecting chairman Arnold M. Baptiste's proposal that no appeals be permitted from planning commission decisions on variances, design review and lot splits. Citizens are entitled to appeal to their elected representatives.

But BRICKBATS to the supervisors for voting to spend nearly a half million dollars on county fairgrounds and Civic Center site improvements under contract with the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation after a junket to Taliesen by Michael Wornum and Peter R. Arrigoni —without consulting the fair manager first as to what is needed.

BOUQUET to the Sonoma State College basketball team for bringing the school its first Far Western Conference championship.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Vitamins Should Not Be Treated As Drugs

The members of my family enjoy the freedom of use of the various vitamins and mineral supplements needed for proper nutrition and good health. The Food and Drug Administration is ordering a ban on 80 per cent of all supplements now available. If the ban is enforced, we would have to get a prescription from the doctor before being allowed to buy the various supplements of our choice. The price would go sky high like other prescription drugs, plus, doctors aren't about to hand out prescriptions for nothing. I can only imagine who decided to exploit the nutrition field and can further envision that if it goes into effect, some foods at the supermarket will eventually be by prescription only because they contain vitamins and minerals . . .

Congress can pass sensible legislation requiring that supplements be regulated separately from prescription drugs. House Resolution 643 amends the FDA act to do just that. The way to stop the ban is to write your congressman NOW and support H.R. 643. The deadline is very soon, March 20, 1973. All the members of my family have written to our congressman: William S. Mailliard, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

If Educators Confident, They Can Be Forthright

Your editorial on "labeling" school courses was excellent. I object strongly to the manner in which so many controversial subjects are presented. If the educators are convinced they're proper, surely they can afford to be honest and forthright. If they have any ability, I'm sure they could find more appropriate paragraphs to illustrate their point than those recently made public.

It's unfortunate that the test was labeled "pornographic" because now that will become the basis for debate. The point is that the vocabulary and grammar are atrocious and cannot be justified for use in an English course.

Let me add "bouquets" to the Marin General Hospital emergency room personnel. On two recent occasions I saw exceptional service. The staff was efficient, courteous and friendly, and we should all appreciate having such a fine service available.

Drake High Examination Complaint Overblown

Once again, you — just by being yourselves — have managed to blow an unimportant and very minor high school conflict into a "controversy" far above and beyond its news value.

If these two parents had charged that the school was doing a poor job in some area, at best you would have put it in a front page bottom corner, probably less. But this, friends, concerns SEX, which makes immeasurably more interesting, exciting, etc. And by slapping "pornography" in a banner across the top of the page, well, maybe some "outraged" parent bought your sheet.

As to how you actually got the news: Just speculating, I would imagine that these two parents "charged" the school with a formal letter and/or verbally. The school, at this point, would not likely inform you (knowing what you would do) but the parents would, and probably did, knowing that you automatically guarantee a "controversy" by which they would have a far better chance of getting someone to listen.

You performed their duty.

Congressional Power Shortage: Too Much Gas Going To Waste

One of the groups most seriously affected by this winter's power crisis has been the Congress of the United States. While the rest of the country has managed to get by, Capitol Hill seems to be losing the energy battle, and experts predict that if President Nixon pursues his present policies, Congress will be completely out of power by 1974.

Stanford F. Crunch, a Washington power broker, told me: "Congress has been wasting its power for years. It has always thought the Constitution would provide it with ample resources to use power in any way it wanted to. Well, they've discovered that there isn't that much power around and, because the White House has been using so much of it, there's very little left to pump up to the Hill."

"Then you believe that the power shortage in Congress has been caused by White House demands for more power in domestic and foreign affairs?"

"That is correct," Crunch said. "At one time, power was equally divided between the White House and Capitol Hill. No one was concerned because there was enough to go around for everybody. But since the November election, the White House has doubled its power needs and has been draining Congress on the little energy it had."

"WHAT DOES THIS mean to the country?"

"It's obvious that without sufficient power resources Congress will be unable to function anywhere near its capacity. If the power crisis continues for another few months, you may have to close down the Senate and House of Representatives three or four days a week."

"That seems drastic," I said. "Couldn't the White House plug in Congress to some of its power until the crisis is over?"

"The White House has no intention of doing this. It maintains that the health and welfare of the United States depends on the power of the President. It is essential to the national interests of the country that the President be provided with all the power he can grab. If he shared any of the power with Congress his entire administration would be weakened and the American people would suffer."

"ARE THERE ANY new technological breakthroughs in power that could alleviate the congressional shortage?"

"None in the foreseeable future. One f the reasons Congress is suffering so is that it has the most antiquated power plant in the United States. The power came from ancient Senate and House committees which have refused to modernize their methods for 100 years. As long as there was a surplus of power, Congress did nothing to improve the system. But now that their power has been drained away, every legislator is screaming for new ways of getting back the power they've lost."

"Will the cost of power go up because of the shortage?" I asked Crunch.

"The price of power has been rising steadily for many years. The President has already warned Congress that if it wants power next year, it will have to pay dearly for it."

"What would it cost Congress?"

"In return for getting back some of its power, Congress will have to go along with all the President's fiscal programs, as well as his foreign policies."

"THAT IS EXPENSIVE," I said. "Isn't there enough gas up on Capitol Hill to keep its plant going?"

"Yes, gas has been one of the main sources of congressional power. But because there is no concentration of power on the Hill, most of the gas is being wasted on home consumption. If Congress could figure out some way of harnessing the gas that is manufactured at the capitol every day, it would have enough power to light up the city of Chicago."

Dollar Dumping Merely Indicator Of Greater Inflation To Come

WASHINGTON — Jawboning Nixon style is being directed against the current fiscal crisis. Whether it can help the dollar out of the slough of despond, which the President ascribes to the machinations of speculators in the money market, is doubtful.

Mr. Nixon is right when he says the rate of inflation is lower in this country than it is in the European countries where dollars are being dumped. It is the threat of future inflation and the yawning abyss of deficits — budgetary, trade, monetary — that has caused not erely speculators but the central banks and big corporations to unload their dollars.

A large share of the dollars dumped on the market during the past month have come from American multinational corporations. One American motor company with extensive European interests is said to have poured up to $1 billion of excess dollar holdings. No mere speculative venture, this represents the urgent need to protect company stockholders. The German Central Bank holds more than $30 billion in unwanted dollars. In other European capitals comparable hoards have accumulated, and Japan is overflowing with dollars bought with yen as the dollar sank below the ceiling price.

WITH SEVERAL administration voices saying several different things, no one can believe that the official wage increase guideline of 5.5 per cent has any meaning. Privatel, Cost of Living Director John T. Dunlop cautions that if unions with contracts coming up this year get raises of seven to nine per cent it should not be interpreted as breaking the wage guideline of Phase 3. Financial men know where these inspired reports come from, and they are quite capable of adding a big wage boost onto present rising prices to come up with a rate of inflation by midyear well above the present 2.5 or 3 per cent.

The demi-semi-retreat from controls in Phase 3 is only part of the uncertainty. Secy. of Agriculture Earl Butz chooses to chastise the press for pointing out what the upward swing in food prices will mean if it continues at the present rate of 2 to 2.5 per cent a month. He conveniently ignores his own too-little-and-too-late approach with a delay of seven months in opening more land for cattle feeding.

But the nitty gritty is income and outgo, with the likelihood, for all the talk about spending ceilings, of budgetary deficits larger than the administration has yet been willing to face. More red ink on the federal ledger, added to the $100 billion in Nixon deficits already racked up, also means more inflation.

THE PRESIDENT has been playing "pin the tail on the donkey" as he seeks to put all the blame for spending and deficits on the Congress. In Congress the response is to denounce the President for impounding monies voted for welfare and reform programs. In a twilight of divided powers, the end result is drift and uncertainty.

Yet now and then a voice of responsibility is heard. The other day Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., one of the most knowledgeable men in this town on finance, put a resolution before the House Democratic Caucus calling for fiscal responsibility in the government budget. The resolution declared that President Nixon was seeking to achieve fiscal balance by the sole means of cutting important programs rather than by raising additional revenue.

In a voice vote without a single dissent, the caucus commended the ways and means committee "for moving expeditiously" to consider loophole plugging and tax reform legislation. The committee was urged to report to the floor as soon as possible a bill raising maximum revenues without a general tax increase.

PROGRESS ON the loophole bill has been held up by the back trouble of the potentate of the ways and means committee, Wilbur Mills. But Mills is returning to Washington from Arkansas and the prospect is for action. Reuss believes that if a loophole-plugging bill does reach the floor, it will be difficult even for Republican members of the House to vote against it. After all, there is that grand old Republican shibboleth, "fiscal responsibility."

It would be difficult for Mr. Nixon to veto such a bill. Would he thereby be inviting further deficits? Wouldn't a veto mean that the President had thrown his strong right arm around the small minority that can take advantage of the loopholes? For the moment these are academic questions and the road between the ways and means committee and final passage of a bill opposed by powerful interests is full of formidable obstacles.

Road Of Economic Isolationism Led To Depression Of 1930s

In view of the rising clamor in the United States for a return to economic isolationism (higher tariffs, trade quotas, embargoes, and the like), it struck us as advisable to look up the record on what happened the last time this same urge was strong in the American people. We did. The result strikes us as a clear warning of the dreadful dangers lying down that road.

The last time was in 1930 when the Congress passed the highest protective tariffs in American history —the infamous Smoot-Hawley Bill.

WHAT THE RECORD shows is that the "great depression" came only then, after passage of that act and its implementation, not earlier as a result of the dramatic drop in the stock market of October, 1929.

The collapse of the stock market was a shock. But it didn't bring business to a halt or seriously knock down the gross national product. It did expose the fact that something was seriously wrong with the American economic system. What was wrong was the gradual shrinking of mass purchasing power as modern industrial techniques produced more goods with fewer men. People thrown out of work by technological unemployment had no purchasing power at all in those days. They were dependent on charity for food, clothing, and housing. They became an economic liability. And there were some 10 million out of work in a population less than half then what it is now.

This condition of declining purchasing power broke the stock market and the lives and fortunes of a few thousand people who had made paper fortunes out of unrealistic stock prices. But the depression itself didn't get really under way until 1931. The worst year was 1932 after the Smoot-Hawley tariff had set up retaliatory measures in Europe. The result was fragmentation of the greatest trading community in the world —the United States, Canada, and the countries of Western Europe.

LARGELY FORGOTTEN today is the related fact that Franklin Delano Roosevelt took office at the bottom of the depression in 1932 and did precisely the worst possible thing. Instead of moving at once to reopen trade, he scuttled the last best chance of avoiding the plunge into autocracy. As he took office the delegations were getting ready for an economic conference in London. Ha Mr. Roosevelt supported the aims of that conference, trade might have been revived for all concerned. It is even possible that a general economic revival might have come in time to brake the inflation in Germany which led to Adolf Hitler. But Mr. Roosevelt scuttled that conference.

The record is clear. Mr. Roosevelt instituted a lot of measures which softened the depression and got recovery under way, but very slowly. The American economy never really got going again until the build-up for World War II began to prime the industrial pump and cut down unemployment. It took that war to bring the United States out of depression and back into a partnership with overseas friends and allies.

The American story from World War I all the way through to today has one moral stronger than any other: Have friends and allies overseas and be a good trading partner to them.

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

If man's best friend is the dog, a woman's best friend is her hair stylist.

Only a woman knows what a hairdo does.

Going to the beauty shop to have her locks curled doesn't prevent a gal from returning there the following week to get her hair straightened.

A man's inability to understand women is matched only by his difficulty in recognizing them when they emerge from the beauty parlor.

The woman who says she has nothing to wear wouldn't dream of wearing it without a matching hairdo.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

mid-January, when Nixon announced economic Phase III. Investors have been concerned the program lacked sufficient clout to curb inflation. They were, therefore, pleased to see the administration use "the stick in the closet" to ascertain guidelines were followed.

Price direction turned around Thursday, however, with announcement of February's 19.2 per cent spurt in the wholesale price index on an annual basis.

The loss carried through Friday as investors generally sat on the sidelines in hopes of good news from the 15 nation conference of international finance ministers in Paris. The market suffered as much from inactivity as anything, although news the rate of unemployment inclined to 5.1 per cent in February from 5 per cent the month before didn't help matters.

Pamida led the actives with a loss of 6 ½ to 7 ⅝ on turnover of 1,560,200 shares. Monday when it fell 5 ⅝, the company said it expected to show a slight improvement in net for the year ended January.

Mattel followed with a gain of 1 ½ to 8 ⅛ on turnover of 915,000 shares. The company's stock has been active and rebounding from heavy selling pressure two weeks ago after announcement a substantial operating loss is expected for fiscal 1973.

Hughes Tool dropped 1 ⅞ to 47 ½ on volume of 762,300 shares. The stock gained early in the week following a Monday announcement of higher 1972 net and the fact the U.S. Supreme Court declined to reconsider its judgment dismissing a massive decision against Hughes, previously awarded to TWA. Later, however, the issue fell victim to the President's imposition of controls on petroleum products since it makes drilling equipment for the oil industry.

Electronics and computers were mixed, with Burroughs gaining 14 ⅛, Texas Instruments 10 ¼, General Electric 4 ¾, Zenith 3 and Motorola 1 ¾. IBM declined 2 ½ and Control Data 1 ⅞.

Glamors also were mixed as Polaroid added 4 ⅞, Xerox 4 ⅛, Corning Glass 4 ¾ and Walt Disney 4 ¼. Wrigley dropped 2 ¾ and Loew's Corp 2 ⅜.

Rails, motors and aircrafts also traded in a mixed pattern with Burlington Northern and General Dynamics adding 1 ½ apiece, Southern Pacific and Norfolk and Western picking up 1 ¼ each and General Motors gaining 1.

Airlines generally gained. Delta added 3 ¾, Flying Tiger 3 ¼, Northwest 2 ½ and TWA 2 ⅛.

Oils managed to close mixed on the week, despite heavy pressure because of re-imposition of price controls. Superior dumped 7 ½, Getty 3 ¾ and Texaco 2. Natomas added 2 ⅝ and Mountain Fuel Supply 2 ½.

Chemicals were mostly higher despite a 1 ½ loss by DuPont. Eastman Kodak added 3 ¾, Monstanto 2 ⅛ and Dow 1 ⅝.

Steels were mostly higher in fractions.

Redwood Bancorp Reports Income

Redwood Bancorp, parent company of Redwood Bank, had a net income of $402,088 in 1972, which represents a per share income of $1.30 as compared with $1.16 for the previous year. This is a 12.1 per cent increase in net income.

Redwood Bancorp's total resources rose from $48,351,540 in 1971 to $60,313,967 in 1972, an increase of 24.7 per cent.

These figures are included in the corporation's annual report for 1972 just released by president Byron W. Leydecker. The bank's objectives for 1973, said Leydecker, is to increase net income to $459,500, earnings per share to $1.48, and total resources to $67,735,000.

PG&E Is Asking Another Rate Hike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pacific Gas & Electric Co., Thursday requested a $55 million a year rate boost in order to pay for increased costs for fuel used to provide electric power to consumers.

The company told the California Public Utilities Commission that the rate adjustments were needed in accordance with a February order by the PUC permitting revisions to reflect the increased costs of low sulfur oil and natural gas used as steam-electric plant fuel.

mid-January, when Nixon announced economic Phase III. Investors have been concerned the program lacked sufficient clout to curb inflation. They were, therefore, pleased to see the administration use "the stick in the closet" to ascertain guidelines were followed.

Price direction turned around Thursday, however, with announcement of February's 19.2 per cent spurt in the wholesale price index on an annual basis.

The loss carried through Friday as investors generally sat on the sidelines in hopes of good news from the 15 nation conference of international finance ministers in Paris. The market suffered as much from inactivity as anything, although news the rate of unemployment inclined to 5.1 per cent in February from 5 per cent the month before didn't help matters.

Pamida led the actives with a loss of 6 ½ to 7 ⅝ on turnover of 1,560,200 shares. Monday when it fell 5 ⅝, the company said it expected to show a slight improvement in net for the year ended January.

Mattel followed with a gain of 1 ½ to 8 ⅛ on turnover of 915,000 shares. The company's stock has been active and rebounding from heavy selling pressure two weeks ago after announcement a substantial operating loss is expected for fiscal 1973.

Hughes Tool dropped 1 ⅞ to 47 ½ on volume of 762,300 shares. The stock gained early in the week following a Monday announcement of higher 1972 net and the fact the U.S. Supreme Court declined to reconsider its judgment dismissing a massive decision against Hughes, previously awarded to TWA. Later, however, the issue fell victim to the President's imposition of controls on petroleum products since it makes drilling equipment for the oil industry.

Electronics and computers were mixed, with Burroughs gaining 14 ⅛, Texas Instruments 10 ¼, General Electric 4 ¾, Zenith 3 and Motorola 1 ¾. IBM declined 2 ½ and Control Data 1 ⅞.

Glamors also were mixed as Polaroid added 4 ⅞, Xerox 4 ⅛, Corning Glass 4 ¾ and Walt Disney 4 ¼. Wrigley dropped 2 ¾ and Loew's Corp 2 ⅜.

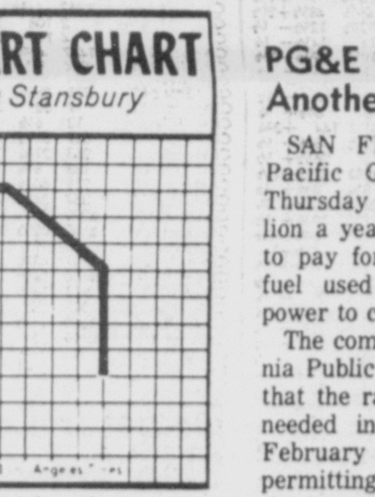
Rails, motors and aircrafts also traded in a mixed pattern with Burlington Northern and General Dynamics adding 1 ½ apiece, Southern Pacific and Norfolk and Western picking up 1 ¼ each and General Motors gaining 1.

Airlines generally gained. Delta added 3 ¾, Flying Tiger 3 ¼, Northwest 2 ½ and TWA 2 ⅛.

Oils managed to close mixed on the week, despite heavy pressure because of re-imposition of price controls. Superior dumped 7 ½, Getty 3 ¾ and Texaco 2. Natomas added 2 ⅝ and Mountain Fuel Supply 2 ½.

Chemicals were mostly higher despite a 1 ½ loss by DuPont. Eastman Kodak added 3 ¾. Monstanto 2 ⅛ and Dow 1 ⅝.

Steels were mostly higher in fractions.



"A stupid policy was compounded by worse execution."

Redwood Bancorp Reports Income

Redwood Bancorp, parent company of Redwood Bank, had a net income of $402,088 in 1972, which represents a per share income of $1.30 as compared with $1.16 for the previous year. This is a 12.1 per cent increase in net income.

Redwood Bancorp's total resources rose from $48,351,540 in 1971 to $60,313,967 in 1972, an increase of 24.7 per cent.

These figures are included in the corporation's annual report for 1972 just released by president Byron W. Leydecker. The bank's objectives for 1973, said Leydecker, is to increase net income to $459,500, earnings per share to $1.48, and total resources to $67,735,000.

PG&E Is Asking Another Rate Hike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pacific Gas & Electric Co., Thursday requested a $55 million a year rate boost in order to pay for increased costs for fuel used to provide electric power to consumers.

The company told the California Public Utilities Commission that the rate adjustments were needed in accordance with a February order by the PUC permitting revisions to reflect the increased costs of low sulfur oil and natural gas used as steam-electric plant fuel.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Market In Black At End Of Action

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market closed in the black this week, primarily because of investor optimism the current monetary crisis will be resolved on a positive note for the United States.

But the picture was not without its dark spots, as a burst in the wholesale price index renewed investor worries about inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue chip industrial stocks added 10.91 to 972.23. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a broader based indicator than the Dow, gained 1.51 to 113.79 and the New York Stock Exchange index picked up 0.85 to 61.02. Advances led declines, 1,109 to 644, among 1,963 issues traded.

Turnover totaled 79,911,243 shares, compared with 85,877,410 shares the week before and with 106,102,420 shares a year earlier.

The market picked up Monday where it left off the week before and scratched out a respectable gain. The weekly moratorium on trading in European monetary markets was in its first day and investors were hopeful the dollar would be better for the rest.

Signs of strength in the economy then began to appear as the government announced a surge in January factory orders and a private financial survey forecast a "boom in corporate capital expenditures."

The stock market demonstrated some zest. At one point during mid-session Monday, buying trickled off and it began to seem as though the indicators were about to take the fall in an all too familiar pattern. Instead, activity picked up in late afternoon and analysts and brokers were puzzled by the developments in a most pleasant way.

Wednesday's session was highlighted by President Nixon's announcement price controls would be mandatory for a number of petroleum industry products.

The market has been in an almost continuous decline since

Reagan Is Studying Ranch Land Switch

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan said today he is considering selling part of his undeveloped ranch property in Riverside County and buying an existing ranch somewhere in Southern California.

Reagan told newsmen one of the ranches under consideration is in Santa Barbara County, but he declined to identify it.

"That's just one of the areas we're looking at," he stated.

The governor owns 778 acres near Temecula, which he purchased in 1968. The county assessor places the value of the land now at $417,500, compared to an appraisal of $240,500 in 1968.

The Riverside County Planning Commission last month approved Reagan's request to subdivide the land into 33 parcels for resale.

Reagan declined to tell newsmen how much of the land he planned to dispose of.

According to a report in the Riverside Press-Enterprise, Reagan plans to sell most of his present ranchland to finance the purchase of a fully developed, 686-acre ranch in Santa Barbara County.

Sources told the newspaper Reagan wanted to swap his Riverside County land for the Santa Barbara property but the owner of the land wanted cash.

The governor said he wants to dispose of the present property because of delays in bringing power and water.

"So we have been looking at some ranches that are already underway where you could move in and start enjoying and using them," Reagan declared.

He said he is mainly interested in Southern California property "in proximity" to his home in Pacfic Palisades.

Burglaries Are Denied By Youth

An 18-year-old said to have escaped from the California Youth Authority has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to three felony counts of burglarizing two San Rafael homes and a school.

Preliminary hearing for Thomas Edward McCarter of no known address was set for March 20.

He was arrested Tuesday after being trapped in a tool shed by homeowners who saw him running through their back yards, then turned over to police.

Police think he broke into the Rita F. Mueller home at 790 Tamarack Drive and took rings valued at $1,000 and $50 cash minutes before his arrest.

McCarter, who escaped from a state camp last month, led police to a hillside where they found items taken from the Mueller home.

Police said they linked the youth to six other burglaries in the preceding two weeks, but he is charged only with breaking into the Mueller home, Don Timoteo School on Feb. 25 and the Catherine R. Castro home at 638 Tamarack Monday.

Redevelop Law Suits Due Study

The San Rafael City Council will meet in closed session at 7:30 p.m. Monday to consider law suits filed by the county over the city's redevelopment plan.

The county three weeks ago offered to withdraw two suits in connection with the city's controversial project in return for some veto power over what kinds of redevelopment projects are permissible. The city has declined to accept the agreement and instead is expected to offer a counter-proposal.

The council will meet in public session at 8 p.m. for a hearing on a landslide that looms above Lindenwood Court. The city, county and landowner New York-Cal Industrial Corp. have all declined to accept responsibility for the slide, which homeowners say may be triggered by the next heavy rainfall.

First Announced '73 Nuclear Test

YUCCA FLATS, Nev. (UPI) — The first announced underground nuclear weapons test this year was detonated 1,966 feet below the desert floor Thursday, jiggling the upper floors of high rise hotels in Las Vegas 70 miles away.

The Atomic Energy Commission said the test, code named "Miera," employed a nuclear explosive yielding between 20 and 200 kilotons, a maximum force equal to the detonation of 200,000 tons of TNT.

Hearing Set On Heroin Sale Charge

A preliminary hearing for a 28-year-old San Rafael man charged with selling heroin has been set for Tuesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Ordered to appear on that date was Elzie Johnson, who was arrested Monday on a warrant by a Marin sheriff's inspector.

The warrant was obtained after Johnson allegedly sold $75 worth of heroin to a state agent at a San Rafael auto body shop March 1.

Johnson, who lives in a home at 372 Mountain View Avenue, was the subject of a drug raid Dec. 12.

Agents said that by the time they gained entry through the barred doors and windows, Johnson was flushing a toilet and no drugs could be found. However, he was arrested and charged with being a felon in possession of a pistol.

That charge is pending in superior court.

Disaster Label Plea Rejected

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A California request to declare a disaster area 25 counties suffering freeze damage to crops, including Marin, has been denied by Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz.

Director H. R. Temple Jr. of the state Office of Emergency Services said Butz turned down the request because he said there are insufficient federal funds to cover the current emergency loan program.

The state requested the disaster designation January 19 for counties where freezing temperatures caused an estimated $210 million loss to farmers in December. Temple said Butz informed him that if farmers are unable to obtain credit, the Farmers Home Administration may make loans to family-size farmers affected by the freeze.

Rezonings Of Property Approved

The Cotati Planning Commission has approved rezonings of property on East Cotati Avenue to allow a mixture of commercial and apartment development.

The plan approved was similar to that discussed Wednesday at a joint meeting of the city council and commission. City Mgr. Paul W. Salfen said the only change was to add two acres of industrial zoning on the southside of the avenue where land is already in industrial use.

The plan calls for commercial development to be centered on East Cotati Avenue at La Salle Avenue. Codding Enterprises is planning a movie theater and other businesses for the property.

Salfen said the plan was accepted unanimously. Commissioner Sharalyn McClendon, who has opposed it in the past, was absent.

He said the plan will be considered again at the next Thursday's city council meeting.

Bing Will Take Nonsinging Role

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sir Rudolf Bing, former manager of the Metropolitan Opera will apppear this spring with the New York City Opera in a nonsinging role.

New York City Opera Director Julius Rudel said he was looking for a distinguished looking man of the world with a slightly sardonic air for the role and thought of Sir Rudolf for the part in a new production of Hans Werner Henze's "The Young Lord."

Bias Appeal Rejected By Board

The Marin County Personnel Commission has rejected an appeal that a position at the public health laboratory be left vacant until charges of employment discrimination are settled.

The commission's unanimous denial of the appeal came Thursday after lengthy testimony by Joseph A. Valu, the laboratory's acting director, who has been seeking permanent appointment to the position for months.

Several months ago, Valu, a native of India, filed charges with state and federal fair employment agencies, alleging discrimination as the reason he was passed over for appointment as permanent laboratory director.

Valu acknowledged, however, that he had refused to take an examination to qualify for permanent appointment.

About 20 others did take the examination and four have been recommended by the personnel office for appointment.

Commissioner Robert McCreadie appeared to sum up the commission's position when he told Valu the best way to have proven discrimination was to have taken the examination and then been rejected.

As it stands, McCreadie said, Valu is simply assuming he would be discriminated against.

Pot Case Is Under Study

Two Novato youths, charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana, have been referred to the district attorney's office for a report on whether they are eligible for diversion from criminal to educational or treatment programs.

Under consideration are Richard Clarence Dunagan, 18, and Roderick David Wells, 21. The district attorney is to report Wednesday on whether they are eligible under a state law which permits suspension of prosecution in some cases.

The two were arrested Feb. 22 by Novato police, who said they had a plastic bag of pot.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

mid-January, when Nixon announced economic Phase III. Investors have been concerned the program lacked sufficient clout to curb inflation. They were, therefore, pleased to see the administration use "the stick in the closet" to ascertain guidelines were followed.

Price direction turned around Thursday, however, with announcement of February's 19.2 per cent spurt in the wholesale price index on an annual basis.

The loss carried through Friday as investors generally sat on the sidelines in hopes of good news from the 15 nation conference of international finance ministers in Paris. The market suffered as much from inactivity as anything, although news the rate of unemployment inclined to 5.1 per cent in February from 5 per cent the month before didn't help matters.

Pamida led the actives with a loss of 6 ½ to 7 ⅝ on turnover of 1,560,200 shares. Monday when it fell 5 ⅝, the company said it expected to show a slight improvement in net for the year ended January.

Mattel followed with a gain of 1 ½ to 8 ⅛ on turnover of 915,000 shares. The company's stock has been active and rebounding from heavy selling pressure two weeks ago after announcement a substantial operating loss is expected for fiscal 1973.

Hughes Tool dropped 1 ⅞ to 47 ½ on volume of 762,300 shares. The stock gained early in the week following a Monday announcement of higher 1972 net and the fact the U.S. Supreme Court declined to reconsider its judgment dismissing a massive decision against Hughes, previously awarded to TWA. Later, however, the issue fell victim to the President's imposition of controls on petroleum products since it makes drilling equipment for the oil industry.

Electronics and computers were mixed, with Burroughs gaining 14 ⅛, Texas Instruments 10 ¼, General Electric 4 ¾, Zenith 3 and Motorola 1 ¾. IBM declined 2 ½ and Control Data 1 ⅞.

Glamors also were mixed as Polaroid added 4 ⅞, Xerox 4 ⅛, Corning Glass 4 ¾ and Walt Disney 4 ¼. Wrigley dropped 2 ¾ and Loew's Corp 2 ⅜.

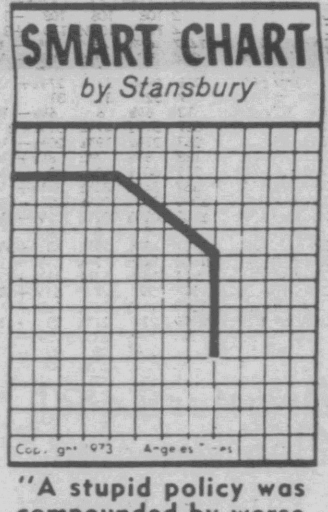
Rails, motors and aircrafts also traded in a mixed pattern with Burlington Northern and General Dynamics adding 1 ½ apiece, Southern Pacific and Norfolk and Western picking up 1 ¼ each and General Motors gaining 1.

Airlines generally gained. Delta added 3 ¾, Flying Tiger 3 ¼, Northwest 2 ½ and TWA 2 ⅛.

Oils managed to close mixed on the week, despite heavy pressure because of re-imposition of price controls. Superior dumped 7 ½, Getty 3 ¾ and Texaco 2. Natomas added 2 ⅝ and Mountain Fuel Supply 2 ½.

Chemicals were mostly higher despite a 1 ½ loss by DuPont. Eastman Kodak added 3 ¾, Monstanto 2 ⅛ and Dow 1 ⅝.

Steels were mostly higher in fractions.



"A stupid policy was compounded by worse execution."

Redwood Bancorp Reports Income

Redwood Bancorp, parent company of Redwood Bank, had a net income of $402,088 in 1972, which represents a per share income of $1.30 as compared with $1.16 for the previous year. This is a 12.1 per cent increase in net income.

Redwood Bancorp's total resources rose from $48,351,540 in 1971 to $60,313,967 in 1972, an increase of 24.7 per cent.

These figures are included in the corporation's annual report for 1972 just released by president Byron W. Leydecker. The bank's objectives for 1973, said Leydecker, is to increase net income to $459,500, earnings per share to $1.48, and total resources to $67,735,000.

PG&E Is Asking Another Rate Hike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pacific Gas & Electric Co., Thursday requested a $55 million a year rate boost in order to pay for increased costs for fuel used to provide electric power to consumers.

The company told the California Public Utilities Commission that the rate adjustments were needed in accordance with a February order by the PUC permitting revisions to reflect the increased costs of low sulfur oil and natural gas used as steam-electric plant fuel.

Reagan Is Studying Ranch Land Switch

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan said today he is considering selling part of his undeveloped ranch property in Riverside County and buying an existing ranch somewhere in Southern California.

Reagan told newsmen one of the ranches under consideration is in Santa Barbara County, but he declined to identify it.

"That's just one of the areas we're looking at," he stated.

The governor owns 778 acres near Temecula, which he purchased in 1968. The county assessor places the value of the land now at $417,500, compared to an appraisal of $240,500 in 1968.

The Riverside County Planning Commission last month approved Reagan's request to subdivide the land into 33 parcels for resale.

Reagan declined to tell newsmen how much of the land he planned to dispose of.

According to a report in the Riverside Press-Enterprise, Reagan plans to sell most of his present ranchland to finance the purchase of a fully developed, 686-acre ranch in Santa Barbara County.

Sources told the newspaper Reagan wanted to swap his Riverside County land for the Santa Barbara property but the owner of the land wanted cash.

The governor said he wants to dispose of the present property because of delays in bringing power and water.

"So we have been looking at some ranches that are already underway where you could move in and start enjoying and using them," Reagan declared.

He said he is mainly interested in Southern California property "in proximity" to his home in Pacfic Palisades.

Burglaries Are Denied By Youth

An 18-year-old said to have escaped from the California Youth Authority has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to three felony counts of burglarizing two San Rafael homes and a school.

Preliminary hearing for Thomas Edward McCarter of no known address was set for March 20.

He was arrested Tuesday after being trapped in a tool shed by homeowners who saw him running through their back yards, then turned over to police.

Police think he broke into the Rita F. Mueller home at 790 Tamarack Drive and took rings valued at $1,000 and $50 cash minutes before his arrest.

McCarter, who escaped from a state camp last month, led police to a hillside where they found items taken from the Mueller home.

Police said they linked the youth to six other burglaries in the preceding two weeks, but he is charged only with breaking into the Mueller home, Don Timoteo School on Feb. 25 and the Catherine R. Castro home at 638 Tamarack Monday.

Redevelop Law Suits Due Study

The San Rafael City Council will meet in closed session at 7:30 p.m. Monday to consider law suits filed by the county over the city's redevelopment plan.

The county three weeks ago offered to withdraw two suits in connection with the city's controversial project in return for some veto power over what kinds of redevelopment projects are permissible. The city has declined to accept the agreement and instead is expected to offer a counter-proposal.

The council will meet in public session at 8 p.m. for a hearing on a landslide that looms above Lindenwood Court. The city, county and landowner New York-Cal Industrial Corp. have all declined to accept responsibility for the slide, which homeowners say may be triggered by the next heavy rainfall.

First Announced '73 Nuclear Test

YUCCA FLATS, Nev. (UPI) — The first announced underground nuclear weapons test this year was detonated 1,966 feet below the desert floor Thursday, jiggling the upper floors of high rise hotels in Las Vegas 70 miles away.

The Atomic Energy Commission said the test, code named "Miera," employed a nuclear explosive yielding between 20 and 200 kilotons, a maximum force equal to the detonation of 200,000 tons of TNT.

Hearing Set On Heroin Sale Charge

A preliminary hearing for a 28-year-old San Rafael man charged with selling heroin has been set for Tuesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Ordered to appear on that date was Elzie Johnson, who was arrested Monday on a warrant by a Marin sheriff's inspector.

The warrant was obtained after Johnson allegedly sold $75 worth of heroin to a state agent at a San Rafael auto body shop March 1.

Johnson, who lives in a home at 372 Mountain View Avenue, was the subject of a drug raid Dec. 12.

Agents said that by the time they gained entry through the barred doors and windows, Johnson was flushing a toilet and no drugs could be found. However, he was arrested and charged with being a felon in possession of a pistol.

That charge is pending in superior court.

Disaster Label Plea Rejected

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A California request to declare a disaster area 25 counties suffering freeze damage to crops, including Marin, has been denied by Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz.

Director H. R. Temple Jr. of the state Office of Emergency Services said Butz turned down the request because he said there are insufficient federal funds to cover the current emergency loan program.

The state requested the disaster designation January 19 for counties where freezing temperatures caused an estimated $210 million loss to farmers in December. Temple said Butz informed him that if farmers are unable to obtain credit, the Farmers Home Administration may make loans to family-size farmers affected by the freeze.

Rezonings Of Property Approved

The Cotati Planning Commission has approved rezonings of property on East Cotati Avenue to allow a mixture of commercial and apartment development.

The plan approved was similar to that discussed Wednesday at a joint meeting of the city council and commission. City Mgr. Paul W. Salfen said the only change was to add two acres of industrial zoning on the southside of the avenue where land is already in industrial use.

The plan calls for commercial development to be centered on East Cotati Avenue at La Salle Avenue. Codding Enterprises is planning a movie theater and other businesses for the property.

Salfen said the plan was accepted unanimously. Commissioner Sharalyn McClendon, who has opposed it in the past, was absent.

He said the plan will be considered again at the next Thursday's city council meeting.

Bing Will Take Nonsinging Role

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sir Rudolf Bing, former manager of the Metropolitan Opera will apppear this spring with the New York City Opera in a nonsinging role.

New York City Opera Director Julius Rudel said he was looking for a distinguished looking man of the world with a slightly sardonic air for the role and thought of Sir Rudolf for the part in a new production of Hans Werner Henze's "The Young Lord."

Bias Appeal Rejected By Board

The Marin County Personnel Commission has rejected an appeal that a position at the public health laboratory be left vacant until charges of employment discrimination are settled.

The commission's unanimous denial of the appeal came Thursday after lengthy testimony by Joseph A. Valu, the laboratory's acting director, who has been seeking permanent appointment to the position for months.

Several months ago, Valu, a native of India, filed charges with state and federal fair employment agencies, alleging discrimination as the reason he was passed over for appointment as permanent laboratory director.

Valu acknowledged, however, that he had refused to take an examination to qualify for permanent appointment.

About 20 others did take the examination and four have been recommended by the personnel office for appointment.

Commissioner Robert McCreadie appeared to sum up the commission's position when he told Valu the best way to have proven discrimination was to have taken the examination and then been rejected.

As it stands, McCreadie said, Valu is simply assuming he would be discriminated against.

Drob Schedule

Harold Drob, candidate for the Mill Valley School District board, has scheduled two campaign events next week — a coffee at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Joe Allen Home, 581 Marin Avenue, Tamalpais Valley and one at 8 p.m. Friday at the Drob home, 559 Marin Avenue.

Pot Case Is Under Study

Two Novato youths, charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana, have been referred to the district attorney's office for a report on whether they are eligible for diversion from criminal to educational or treatment programs.

Under consideration are Richard Clarence Dunagan, 18, and Roderick David Wells, 21. The district attorney is to report Wednesday on whether they are eligible under a state law which permits suspension of prosecution in some cases.

The two were arrested Feb. 22 by Novato police, who said they had a plastic bag of pot.

A Late Start For A Big Year

Marinites Are Eager To Get To Work In Their Gardens

By WAT TAKESHITA

Gardening in Marin got off to a late start this year because of the devastating frosts of last December followed by prolonged rain that threatens to break all precipitation records.

However, once the rains are over, Marin nurserymen look to a record business year because of the continued interest in ecology, home gardening and the need to replace plants and trees destroyed or damaged by the Big Freeze.

But before you start digging up those "dead" plants in your backyard indiscriminately, here are some timely tips from Donald Brittsan, Marin County farm advisor and 4-H youth adviser.

THE WORD IS "continue to wait a bit longer." Put away the pruning shears and endure the dead foliage for another couple of weeks, Brittsan advised. You may yet find buds emerging from the lower parts of the plant. Deciduous trees, such as fruit trees, and others which lose their leaves in winter should not have been hurt by the cold weather. These should be pruned and otherwise cared for as in a normal year. You may even see these trees blossoming a little earlier than usual.

Will Marin gardens get a "fringe benefit" from the freeze in the way of reduction of insects this spring?

Not likely, says Brittsan. Any noticeable decrease in insect numbers due to the frost is rather slim. Mother nature usually prepares her insect species for conditions much colder than Marin's ordinarily mild winters.

ON THE OTHER hand, the mild wet spring which appears in the offing may provide good conditions for the spread of fungal and bacterial problems. Brown rote of stone fruits, mildew in roses, fireblight of pears and ornamentals and anthocnose in Modesto Ash are examples of these. Excess leaves and plant debris should be cleaned up at this time.

For the would-be "dirt farmer" who plans a vegetable garden this year, the Marin County farm adviser urged that organic matter be incorporated into the garden soil.

"It really doesn't matter too much what you use as organic material so long as you remember that the organisms which break down this organic stuff tie up the available nitrogen for a time," said Brittsan. Sweet corn plants, for example, planted in soil heavy in organic matter may become quite yellow, a typical nitrogen symptom.

A general recommendation is to add an additional source of nitrogen such as ammonium nitrate, ammonium phosphate, urea, and fish oil emulsions.

IT IS IMPORTANT for the backyard gardneers as well as for farmers to READ ALL of the label of a pesticide or herbicide and to follow these directions to the letter. The adage that "if a little is good, a lot is better" does not hold in these case of these chemicals. Exhaustive research has been conducted on these products before they are released to the general public.

"Dispose of empty containers as directed and treat all of these products as potentially dangerous," said Brittsan.

Brittsan encouraged those interested in horticulture to join or attend the classes offered at College of Marin on the subject.

"IF REGULARLY scheduled classes are not your thing, many garden clubs have been formed to meet specific needs of Marin gardeners," he pointed out. "Marin Men's Garden Club is a group of men who meet monthly to discuss items of interest to gardeners.

College of Marin, with the cooperation of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service, will sponsor a Frost Symposium Wednesday afternoon, March 14, at the College's Olney Hall in Kentfield. Experts from the University of California at Davis will discuss frost damage and methods of combatting frost damage.

MARIN COUNTY Agricultural Commissioner R. Allan Ballard and Assistant Philip Economon estimated that frost damage to retail and wholesale nurseries in the county exceeded a million dollars. Among the hardest hit were heather growers in West Marin, whose crops were virtually wiped out. Some of the growers were trying to get freeze disaster loans, similar to the disaster loans of flood victims.

Economon said all the warm weather plants such as succulents were hard hit by the freeze, as well as some trees such as Australian eucalyptus.

The agricultural commissioner also urged home gardeners not to be too hasty about digging up their plants. "Wait until warmer weather because new growth will be coming out from the bases of seemingly dead plants," said Economon.

MARIN NURSERYMEN report that the home gardener will be looking toward hardier plants like escalonias.

Citrus trees were hard hit by the frost, but they continue to be among the favorites because of the trend toward fruits and other edibles.

Nurseries also expect a rush for summer annuals such as petunias, marigolds, ageratum and alyssum.

"We got off to a slow start because of the frost and the rains, but once the rains stop, this can be the biggest year every because people will be replacing their damaged plants," said a nurseryman and the interest in ecology continues unabated.

THE COVER

IT IS THAT time of the year again, when Marinites are anxious to once again get out into the garden and feel the soil in their hands. And once again, the Independent-Journal presents the annual spring gardening edition of its Marin Magazine. The pages that follow are devoted largely to gardening advice — what to grow, how to grow it and what to do with it once it is grown. And the supplies and equipment you will need to do the job. Artwork for the cover of this magazine is by Ron Davis, the photograph by Bob Hax.

THE FREEZE, AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT NOW

The December freeze and what to do about frost damage.

That will be the general topic of discussion at a Frost Symposium to be held at the College of Marin's Olney Hall next Wednesday from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The symposium, geared to professional nurserymen and open to the public free of charge, is sponsored by the College of Marin, UC Agricultural Extension Service, and the nursery industry. Moderator is John J. Smith, farm adviser on ornamentals, University of California Agricultural Extension Service. Here is the symposium schedule:

1:30 p.m.—Managing freeze-damaged woody plants. Speaker William B. Davis, Agricultural Extension specialist, University of California at Davis.

2:15 p.m.—Use of wilt suppressant and growth hormones. Speaker Dr. Roy Sachs, plant pathologist, U.C. Davis.

3:20 p.m.—Panel discussion on hardy plants in Marin County by climate and region. Moderator Ernest Wertheim, landscape architect from San Francisco. Panelists Mary Wohlers, instructor in landscape management at College of Marin; Michael Smith, Santa Rosa nurseryman; Hugh Owens, Marin landscape contractor; and Otto Quast, plant propagator at Point Reyes Station.

Examples of frost-damaged plants will be on display during the symposium.

ARE YOU READY?

NOW IS THE TIME (if you haven't Already done so) to get those garden and yard tools ready for the busy seasons ahead. Particularly important is that you check larger equipment, such as this tractor, to make certain parts are well lubricated and in top operating order. Mowers should be cleaned thoroughly with wire brush and steel wool, rust should be removed and exposed metal parts given a light coating of oil. On power mowers, oil all bearings. Encrusted dirt should be scraped from spades, rakes and other hand tools, and the steel wool used to remove rust. A fine-toothed file will suffice for sharpening digging tools. And a rubdown with an oily cloth is a final recommended touch. Time spent now will avert more precious time lost during the spring and summer rush.

Marinites Are Eager To Get To Work In Their Gardens

By WAT TAKESHITA

Gardening in Marin got off to a late start this year because of the devastating frosts of last December followed by prolonged rain that threatens to break all precipitation records.

However, once the rains are over, Marin nurserymen look to a record business year because of the continued interest in ecology, home gardening and the need to replace plants and trees destroyed or damaged by the Big Freeze.

But before you start digging up those "dead" plants in your backyard indiscriminately, here are some timely tips from Donald Brittsan, Marin County farm advisor and 4-H youth adviser.

THE WORD IS "continue to wait a bit longer." Put away the pruning shears and endure the dead foliage for another couple of weeks, Brittsan advised. You may yet find buds emerging from the lower parts of the plant. Deciduous trees, such as fruit trees, and others which lose their leaves in winter should not have been hurt by the cold weather. These should be pruned and otherwise cared for as in a normal year. You may even see these trees blossoming a little earlier than usual.

Will Marin gardens get a "fringe benefit" from the freeze in the way of reduction of insects this spring?

Not likely, says Brittsan. Any noticeable decrease in insect numbers due to the frost is rather slim. Mother nature usually prepares her insect species for conditions much colder than Marin's ordinarily mild winters.

ON THE OTHER hand, the mild wet spring which appears in the offing may provide good conditions for the spread of fungal and bacterial problems. Brown rote of stone fruits, mildew in roses, fireblight of pears and ornamentals and anthocnose in Modesto Ash are examples of these. Excess leaves and plant debris should be cleaned up at this time.

For the would-be "dirt farmer" who plans a vegetable garden this year, the Marin County farm adviser urged that organic matter be incorporated into the garden soil.

"It really doesn't matter too much what you use as organic material so long as you remember that the organisms which break down this organic stuff tie up the available nitrogen for a time," said Brittsan. Sweet corn plants, for example, planted in soil heavy in organic matter may become quite yellow, a typical nitrogen symptom.

A general recommendation is to add an additional source of nitrogen such as ammonium nitrate, ammonium phosphate, urea, and fish oil emulsions.

IT IS IMPORTANT for the backyard gardneers as well as for farmers to READ ALL of the label of a pesticide or herbicide and to follow these directions to the letter. The adage that "if a little is good, a lot is better" does not hold in these case of these chemicals. Exhaustive research has been conducted on these products before they are released to the general public.

"Dispose of empty containers as directed and treat all of these products as potentially dangerous," said Brittsan.

Brittsan encouraged those interested in horticulture to join or attend the classes offered at College of Marin on the subject.

"IF REGULARLY scheduled classes are not your thing, many garden clubs have been formed to meet specific needs of Marin gardeners," he pointed out. "Marin Men's Garden Club is a group of men who meet monthly to discuss items of interest to gardeners.

College of Marin, with the cooperation of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service, will sponsor a Frost Symposium Wednesday afternoon, March 14, at the College's Olney Hall in Kentfield. Experts from the University of California at Davis will discuss frost damage and methods of combatting frost damage.

MARIN COUNTY Agricultural Commissioner R. Allan Ballard and Assistant Philip Economon estimated that frost damage to retail and wholesale nurseries in the county exceeded a million dollars. Among the hardest hit were heather growers in West Marin, whose crops were virtually wiped out. Some of the growers were trying to get freeze disaster loans, similar to the disaster loans of flood victims.

Economon said all the warm weather plants such as succulents were hard hit by the freeze, as well as some trees such as Australian eucalyptus.

The agricultural commissioner also urged home gardeners not to be too hasty about digging up their plants. "Wait until warmer weather because new growth will be coming out from the bases of seemingly dead plants," said Economon.

MARIN NURSERYMEN report that the home gardener will be looking toward hardier plants like escalonias.

Citrus trees were hard hit by the frost, but they continue to be among the favorites because of the trend toward fruits and other edibles.

Nurseries also expect a rush for summer annuals such as petunias, marigolds, ageratum and alyssum.

"We got off to a slow start because of the frost and the rains, but once the rains stop, this can be the biggest year every because people will be replacing their damaged plants," said a nurseryman and the interest in ecology continues unabated.

THE COVER

IT IS THAT time of the year again, when Marinites are anxious to once again get out into the garden and feel the soil in their hands. And once again, the Independent-Journal presents the annual spring gardening edition of its Marin Magazine. The pages that follow are devoted largely to gardening advice — what to grow, how to grow it and what to do with it once it is grown. And the supplies and equipment you will need to do the job. Artwork for the cover of this magazine is by Ron Davis, the photograph by Bob Hax.

ARE YOU READY?

NOW IS THE TIME (if you haven't Already done so) to get those garden and yard tools ready for the busy seasons ahead. Particularly important is that you check larger equipment, such as this tractor, to make certain parts are well lubricated and in top operating order. Mowers should be cleaned thoroughly with wire brush and steel wool, rust should be removed and exposed metal parts given a light coating of oil. On power mowers, oil all bearings. Encrusted dirt should be scraped from spades, rakes and other hand tools, and the steel wool used to remove rust. A fine-toothed file will suffice for sharpening digging tools. And a rubdown with an oily cloth is a final recommended touch. Time spent now will avert more precious time lost during the spring and summer rush.

Moderator is John J. Smith, farm adviser on ornamentals, University of California Agricultural Extension Service. Here is the symposium schedule:

1:30 p.m.—Managing freeze-damaged woody plants. Speaker William B. Davis, Agricultural Extension specialist, University of California at Davis.

2:15 p.m.—Use of wilt suppressant and growth hormones. Speaker Dr. Roy Sachs, plant pathologist, U.C. Davis.

3:20 p.m.—Panel discussion on hardy plants in Marin County by climate and region. Moderator Ernest Wertheim, landscape architect from San Francisco. Panelists Mary Wohlers, instructor in landscape management at College of Marin; Michael Smith, Santa Rosa nurseryman; Hugh Owens, Marin landscape contractor; and Otto Quast, plant propagator at Point Reyes Station.

Examples of frost-damaged plants will be on display during the symposium.

The Perennials — Both Colorful And Practical

Perennial flowers provide the gardener with some of his most colorful garden material. And, in that they are permanent, blooming year after year, perennials are also highly practical.

A recommended planting time for perennials is autumn, but quicker results can be obtained by planting established perennial clumps from nursery containers in spring. Thus, the gardener is a year ahead of the fall-planted seedlings.

NURSERIES generally have now, or will have soon, sturdy clumps of Delphinium that can be brought into bloom in a matter of a few weeks. Primroses are full of bloom right now and need only to be transferred to the garden; Shasta Daisies will give glorious results this summer as will Transvaal Daisies (Gerberas).

Delphiniums give a tremendous performance in the Golden State. They bloom first in late spring or early summer and again, if you cut them back, in late summer. Some gardeners coax a third flush of bloom from these favorites, though the California Assn. of Nurserymen points out this could result in a shorter life for this perennial by overtaxing its capacity for growth and bloom.

Plant Delphiniums in a sunny, well-ventilated location. The blue, lavender, purple, white and pink-hued colors are eye-appealing and add a tall, refreshing touch to border plantings and flower beds at the far reaches of the garden.

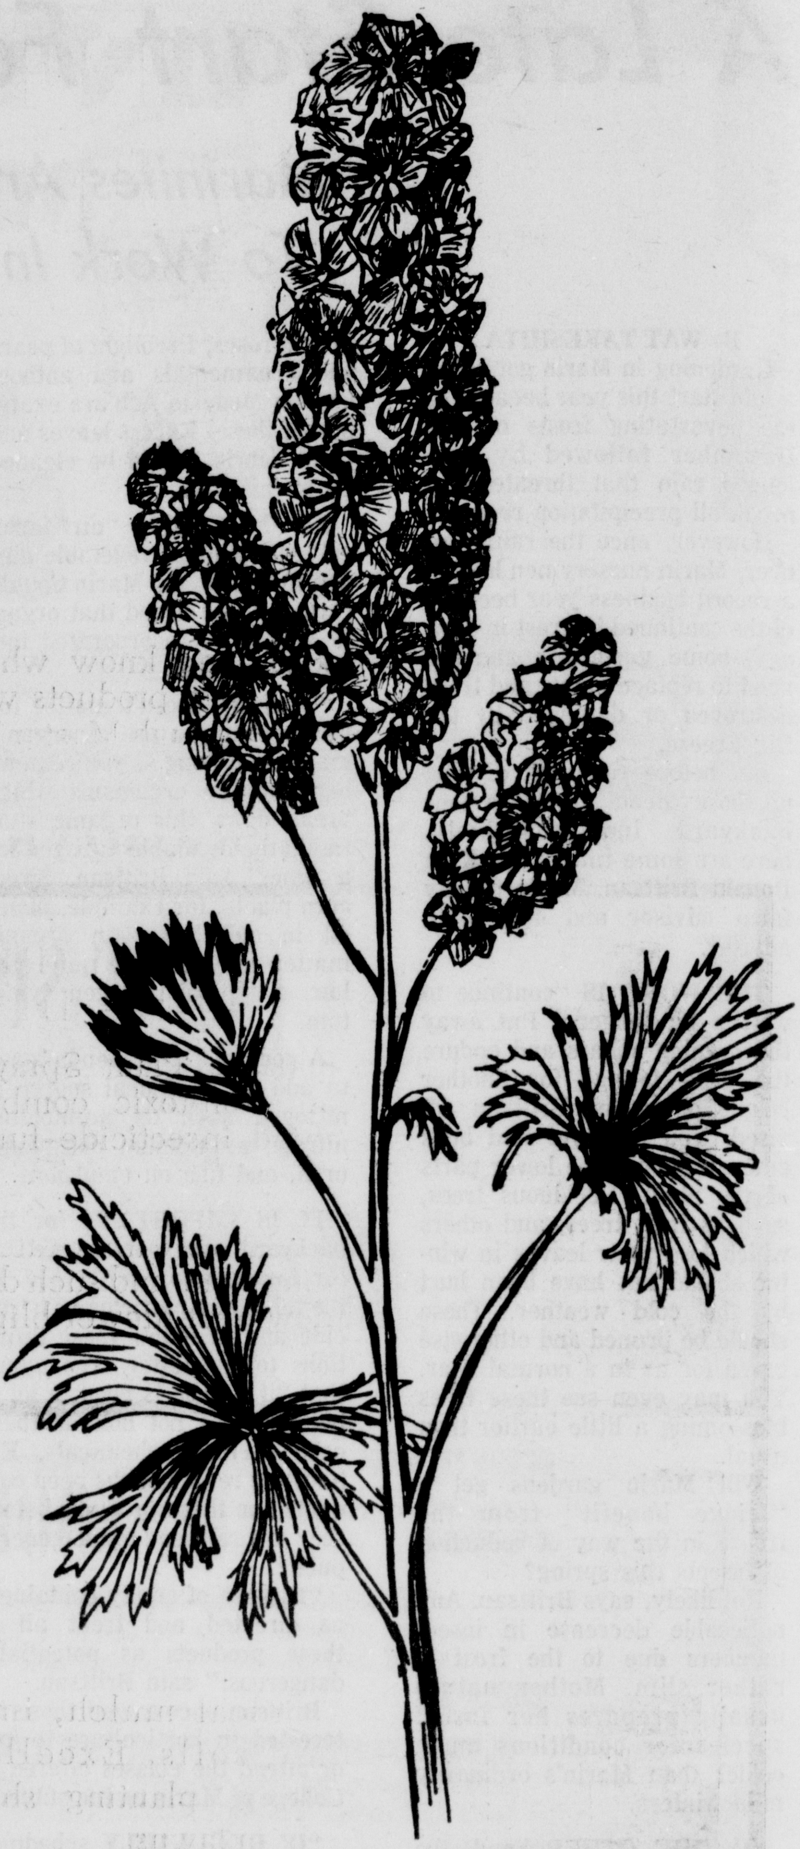
PRIMROSES like a shadier spot with a well-drained soil and plenty of peat moss or leaf mold around their roots. Given this, they will bloom longer and the plants will be sturdier. Clumps may be divided every two years.

The spectacular Shasta Daisies and the Transvaal Daisies like sun. The latter are more particular about drainage and definitely resent wet feet. Set the plants high in the soil — with the crown exposed. If in doubt, ask your nurseryman.

The hybrid forms produce single and double flowers whose colors are so intense and vivid, that it seems a shame for any gardener to be without them.

Grounded Glory

Morning glories can be grown flat on the ground as well as up a fence or other support. If you have an unsightly area that you want to hide, this vine grows rapidly and soon will shield it from view.



THE DELPHINIUM provides plenteous garden color in spectacular fashion. Nurseries have seedlings in nursery flats and older, field-grown clumps of hybrid Delphinium available for planting now. The clumps can be brought into bloom in a matter of a few weeks, and if you cut them back a second bloom can be enjoyed in the later summer. The spire-like flowers come in varying shades of blues, lavenders, purple, pinks and white. (California Assn. of Nurserymen)

THE DELPHINIUM provides plenteous garden color in spectacular fashion. Nurseries have seedlings in nursery flats and older, field-grown clumps of hybrid Delphinium available for planting now. The clumps can be brought into bloom in a matter of a few weeks, and if you cut them back a second bloom can be enjoyed in the later summer. The spire-like flowers come in varying shades of blues, lavenders, purple, pinks and white. (California Assn. of Nurserymen)

Plant 'Bedders' Now For Later Color

Bedding plants are to the garden what accessories are to the wardrobe — they make the difference between a mediocre impression and one that draws attention.

In the summer months that lie ahead, when garden color is especially enjoyed and desired, bedding plants will help create a scintillating effect. That is, if you plant the free-flowering beauties in the spring.

Local nurseries will have countless bedding plants available this month and next, all of which will provide bloom into Fall — especially flowering annuals such as Petunias, Zinnias, Asters, Dianthus, Periwinkle, Ageratum, Marigolds, Alyssum and a host of other color bearers.

THE PETUNIA family is a varied one, and members of this popular clan come in shades of pinks, reds, lavender and blues, plus white. There are variegations of colors highlighted by awesome markings on the blooms. You can choose from singles and doubles, some varieties boast immense blossoms, others are adorned by bright small flowers. Certain Petunias have blooms which resemble carnations.

In the garden, Petunias are logical choices for borders and mass plantings. You can grow Petunias in pots, and even enjoy them in hanging baskets.

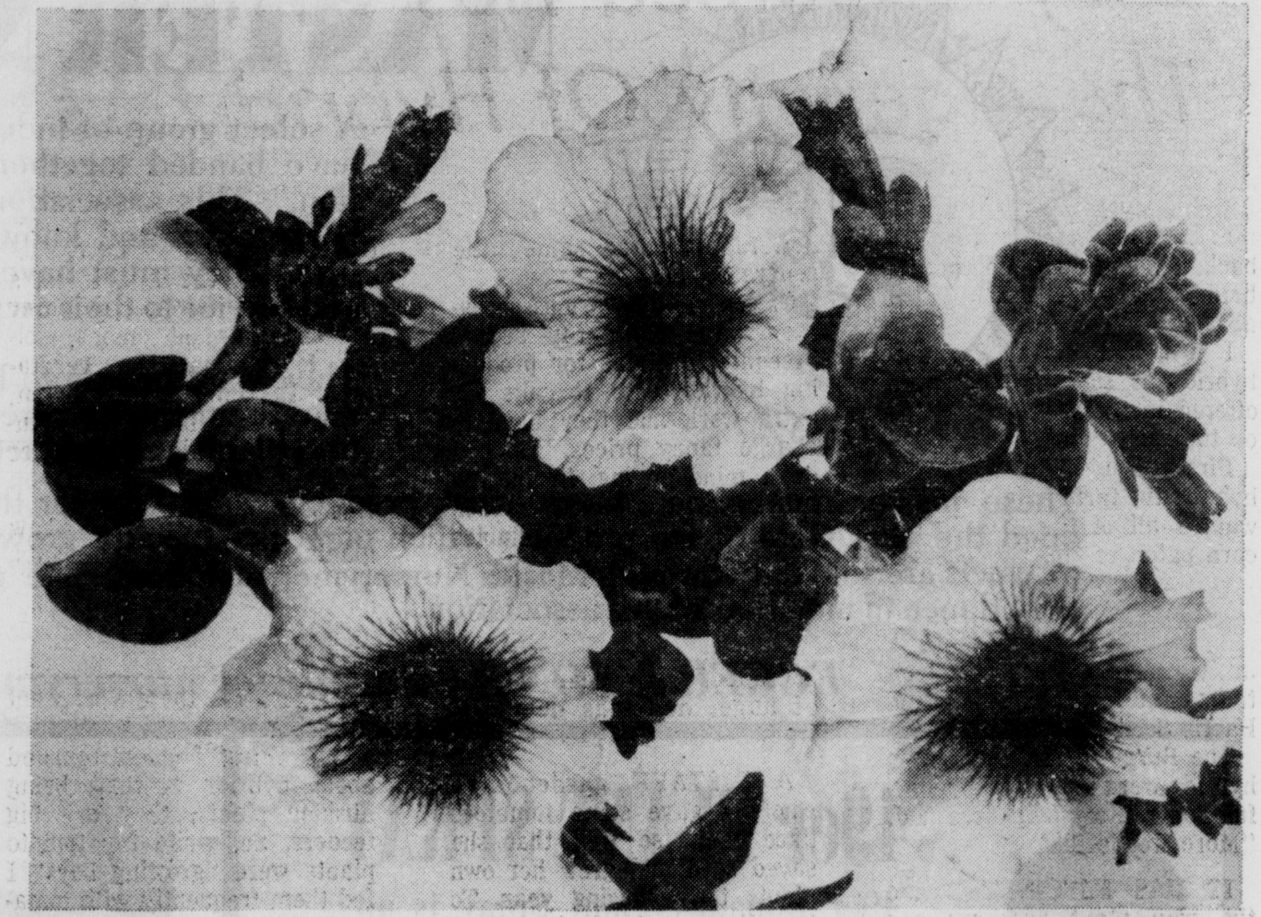
While Zinnias and Marigolds differ in appearance, they share one thing in common — both have great landscape potential, in addition to the abundance of flowers produced.

THERE ARE varieties of Zinnias and Marigolds which are dwarf, for edgings; intermediate-growers for borders and massed effect; and tall varieties for background plantings and magnificent displays.

Other tall growers are Asters, which are a favorite summertime flower, and nurseries have a selection of varieties whose blooms are sure to please.

Small bedders include time honored Alyssum in white, violet and pink; blue Ageratum; and blue or purple Lobelia. All create mounds of color and are ideal for garden accents or filling-in areas. They all are superb as edgings, and because of their colors go nicely with other flowering plants.

IN-BETWEEN growers fill many needs in the garden, and the choices are plentiful. Periwinkles (vinca) are included in this group — the individual varieties boast lavender-pink blooms, all white, or white with a red eye. Add to these the Dianthus "Queen of Hearts," a Scarlet red bloomer; Dwarf Dahlias, Phlox and Cockscomb, and you get the idea that there's no lack of beauty to highlight your summer garden and outdoor living area.



THE PETUNIA IS as reliable as it is beautiful, one of those annuals that, planted now, never seems to stop blooming, producing a marathon display of color through the spring and summer. Furthermore, it is one of gardening's most varied flowers, coming in a seemingly endless array of solid and mixed colors. And it requires very little attention from its grower.

While the aforementioned flowering plants are basically for sunnier locations, Fibrous Begonias will take partial shade — and bloom continuously until the first frost.

In shady areas where it is difficult to grow flowering plants, Impatiens (Sultanas) will perform admirably. They are available in many brilliant colors and bloom until frost.

Let your nurseryman introduce these and other summer color-bearers — and plant now to assure yourself of a bright, beautiful spring and summer.

The Bareroot Season Is Fast Drawing To A Close

Don't look now, but the bareroot planting season is hurriedly drawing to a close throughout the Golden State. In just a matter of days most California nurserymen will have planted their bare root stock into containers.

This wouldn't be worth mentioning, except for a simple economic fact:

That you can save by planting deciduous trees and shrubs now, before the close of the 1973 bareroot season, and before the cost of potting-up the plants becomes a factor.

TOPPING THE list are bareroot roses, and you are still certain of finding a large selection of varieties in nurseries. Besides shopping for the '73 All-Americans — Gypsy, Medallion and Electron — look for recent and New Year introductions which will provide beauty for years to come.

With all the interest in home orchards today, the bareroot season is a prime opportunity to select from a big inventory of different varieties which thrive in your particular climate — whether it's Peaches, Plums, Cherries, Apricots, Apples or Figs.

This is a good time to select fruit trees, especially if you have the room to accommodate several different kinds — while the choices and price are highly attractive. If you lack space to grow the standard-sized fruit trees, nurseries will have dwarf and semi-dwarf fruit tree varieties which are best-suited for our area. These can be planted in the garden or grown in tubs or other containers.

THERE ARE also flowering fruit trees available bareroot — which may or may not produce edible fruit. The seasonal show of color they produce, their modest growth and attractive foliage make them favorites in Marin.

Shade trees?

A host of deciduous trees can be found during the bareroot season and now, in early March, nurseries will have a half dozen, or more, varieties available bareroot. Plus a wide selection of deciduous and evergreen trees in nursery containers, that are easily transplanted into the garden.

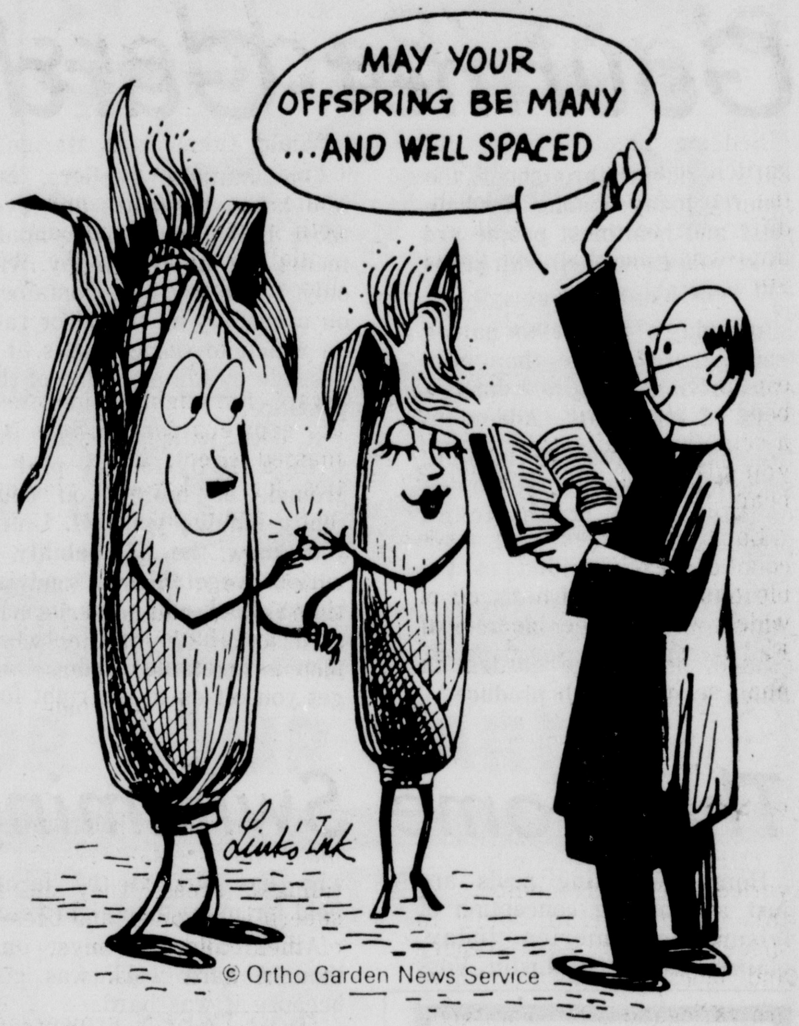
Only Sweetpea Has Defied The Ingenuity Of Hybridizers



MAY YOUR OFFSPRING BE MANY ...AND WELL SPACED

By FRANK J. TAYLOR

When hybrid corn hit the market about three decades back, I hopped aboard the hybrid bandwagon. I'm still aboard.

I just had to try the new hybrids as soon as they were offered in the seed catalogs or on the seed racks.

First corn — but not the hybrids the farmers grew. They wanted all of the ears in the corn patch to ripen at once; I was looking for a hybrid whose ears ripened over the longest possible harvest time. I found it in "Wonderful," which lived up to its name, bred by the Joseph Harris Seed Co.

The Burpee and Ferry-Morse hybrids were almost as wonderful. Some of my neighbors said, "More wonderful."

IT HAS FASCINATED me the way plant breeders can cross varieties until they get just the right parents for their hybrids. After inbreeding until they grow runts, they cross the runt parents and somehow set off an explosion of hybrid vigor. That's what I want in our garden — a burst of pep that makes the hybrid plant yield a double crop of vegetables or flowers from the same little square of soil.

Of course, the various seedsmen have their top secret breeding formulas for producing hybrid seed. It calls for extra work and they have to charge fancy prices, which I don't mind paying, fir the hybrid seed. I get my money back in more and larger vegetables and in superduper posies.

One of my favorite hybrids is a tomato called "Supersonic." It also lives up to its name. The seven-foot vines bear clusters of huge, delicious deep red fruit.

A DISTAFF gardener to whom I gave some tomatoes liked them so well that she saved seed and grew her own plants the following year. To her dismay, she had a "bust up," as the seedsmen call it, in her tomato patch. The saved-seed Supersonics reverted to their forebears, a motley array.

"What did I do wrong?" she asked.

"You saved seed," I told her. "Next year buy a packet from the seedsman."

One by one, the popular vegetables and flowers have succumbed to the hybridizer's magic. Tomatoes, summer squash, egg plant, onions, melons, to mention a few vegetables. In the flower garden, snaps, zinnias, marigolds, petunias, pansies give us bumper yields of color.

I DON'T HAVE to grow giants if I don't want giants. The seed wizards have worked both ways from the middle, building midgets for gardeners who want compact plants, superdupers for those who want them big.

One thing I soon learned about hybrids is that, being huskier plants, they are big feeders. So, while my tomato plants were "growing boys" I fed them frequently with tomato food pellets. Same with the zinnias, snaps and marigolds.

Some stubborn plants still balk at playing the hybridizer's game. Or they are so complicated in structure that cross pollinating by hand is too costly. A few popular posies such as marigolds and zinnias are whole clusters of flowers in a single blossom. Ingenious Mr. Burpee solved that impossible pollinating problem by hiring a million bees to do the huge chore.

BEE LABOR worked fine on the marigold and zinnia seed farms, but not with sweet peas, in which the bees' tongues couldn't reach the nectar.

"No nectar or pollen, no work," is the slogan of the bee union.

Which is why I can't buy hybrid sweetpea seed.

Gourmet Gardener — Happy, Healthy

It's evident throughout the country today: Among the happiest and healthiest people are those who grow their own herbs and vegetables.

In today's return to nature trend, more people than ever are deriving pleasure from this form of gardening. Adding to the satisfaction of making something grow is the joy of cooking with fresh-picked produce.

PEOPLE ARE also discovering one needn't have an acre of ground, or a large garden, in which to grow such produce.

Condominium dwellers, mobile home residents and even those living in high-rise apartments are involved today. With only a window box, containers on a balcony or an indoor rack on which to suspend pots, it is possible to sample some of this pleasure.

It does without saying that with a 10-by-15-foot plot of ground, or more, you could really indulge yourself. Unless you know the adaptability of various vegetables, it's advisable to check with your nurseryman and have him help you plan a vegetable garden —and get you off on to the right foot.

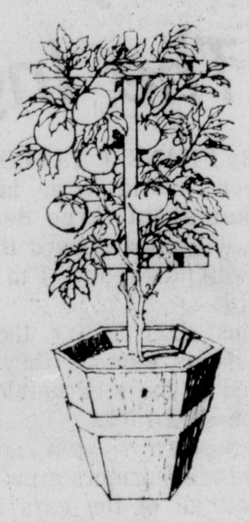
SOME VEGETABLES, such as radishes, corn, turnips, squash, beets, carrots and beans, are best grown from seed.

Certain vegetables are often found in nurseries as seedling transplants; tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, parsley, cabbage, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, and celery.

Lettuce is often available; onions may be started from seed or onion sets. Seed is less expensive, sets are more convenient.

AS FOR HERBS, most of the favorite varieties are available in nursery containers. A basic list of herbs should include basil, rosemary, thyme, oregano, marjoram, sage and chives. This basic list is a good start for the gourmet chef — or newlywed cook.

For convenience, the herb garden should be as close as possible to the kitchen, enabling you to take a pinch of this or that while cooking. Herbs take up little space, so this presents no problem. They can be featured in pots or grown near the kitchen door. Use them as edgings in flower beds for a functional and unique combination planting.



The Home Swimming Pool — A Leisure Time Saver

Home swimming pools are just a changing conception of leisure in America today, claims economist Justin Voss who has studied the leisure field for more than eight years.

Americans, he says, once thought hard work was good because it was hard.

"Now, people are beginning to see that unnecessary hard work is bad because it deprives them of great opportunities for fun and relaxation, the essence of leisure."

PART AND PARCEL of this change in attitude "in a society in which over-weight is replacing overwork as a national problem," says Voss, "is an understanding that, as consumers, we all have two economic resources or budgets from which to spend: Money and time."

Most economists and businessmen have looked for a "boom" in the leisure industries because of increased consumer affluence.

But Voss maintains that this is only partially true.

"Time and money are virtually inseparable as economic resources. We can make more money, but not more time and are, therefore, limited in what we may buy and use."

ACCORDING TO Voss, we can now spend our two economic resources in four different ways:

Spend money, but not time (buy a swimming pool instead of traveling to the beach).

Spend both time and money (join and frequent a swim club or community pool or buy and swim in your own pool).

Spend time, but not money (go for a swim in your neighbor's pool).

Spend money to gain time (buy automatic pool cleaning and chemical feeding equipment or hire a pool service firm to do the entire job).

It is this last category that is mot fascinating.

VOSS SAYS THAT automatic pool cleaning systems don't just make the life easier, but "create leisure time by reducing the amount of time previously required to do the job."

Self-cleaning ovens, TV dinners and central home vacuum systems also fit into the category of what the economist calls "time-goods."

"In a study recently conducted for the National Swimming Pool Institute, I was surprised to discover that the pool itself is considered by owners to be part of this new class of products," he says.

Voss maintains that too frequently we don't have the time to take advantage of our newfound affluence and the things — foreign vacation trips, vacation homes, boats and such — that the affluence would allow us to purchase.

"LESURE TIME is consumed by getting to these distant things, both in terms of actual miles and in terms of time spent waiting in long lines at airports — or in the skies above them, driving on clogged super highways and participating at overcrowded public and private recreational and resort facilities.

"This 'aggravation affect' is, to a considerable degree, offsetting the technological progress we have made in automobiles and highways and jet transportation."

Voss found in the pool industry study that owners often "viewed other expenditures — like boats and cottages — as too expensive in terms of time available to pack up, get to, use and return from.

"On the other hand, the pool was always there and provided the means for maximizing leisure time. It also created more leisure time by allowing the conversion of 'what-do-I-do-now, Mom?' time into 'spur-of-the-moment' swimming fun and exercise."

Don't Drown Your Plants

If you have a large house plant growing in a big pot, beware of overwatering.

A surface check of the soil in a large pot is not adequate, say the editors of Better Homes and Gardens "House Plant" book.

Dig down two or three inches into the soil at the outer edge of the pot. If it's moist, the soil at the center of the pot is damp enough to feed the roots. But if the outer soil is dry, then it's time to water the plant.

ONE OF THE BEST uses the outdoor lover can make of his yard space is the swimming pool — a cool spot for recreation and relaxtion. And an excellent means, studies have shown, of keeping the kids at home and the family together! It can also be a landscaping asset, when properly planned and coordinated.

WIZARDS WITH SEEDS

Only Sweetpea Has Defied The Ingenuity Of Hybridizers

By FRANK J. TAYLOR

When hybrid corn hit the market about three decades back, I hopped aboard the hybrid bandwagon. I'm still aboard.

I just had to try the new hybrids as soon as they were offered in the seed catalogs or on the seed racks.

First corn — but not the hybrids the farmers grew. They wanted all of the ears in the corn patch to ripen at once; I was looking for a hybrid whose ears ripened over the longest possible harvest time. I found it in "Wonderful," which lived up to its name, bred by the Joseph Harris Seed Co.

The Burpee and Ferry-Morse hybrids were almost as wonderful. Some of my neighbors said, "More wonderful."

IT HAS FASCINATED me the way plant breeders can cross varieties until they get just the right parents for their hybrids. After inbreeding until they grow runts, they cross the runt parents and somehow set off an explosion of hybrid vigor. That's what I want in our garden — a burst of pep that makes the hybrid plant yield a double crop of vegetables or flowers from the same little square of soil.

Of course, the various seedsmen have their top secret breeding formulas for producing hybrid seed. It calls for extra work and they have to charge fancy prices, which I don't mind paying, fir the hybrid seed. I get my money back in more and larger vegetables and in superduper posies.

One of my favorite hybrids is a tomato called "Supersonic." It also lives up to its name. The seven-foot vines bear clusters of huge, delicious deep red fruit.

A DISTAFF gardener to whom I gave some tomatoes liked them so well that she saved seed and grew her own plants the following year. To her dismay, she had a "bust up," as the seedsmen call it, in her tomato patch. The saved-seed Supersonics reverted to their forebears, a motley array.

"What did I do wrong?" she asked.

"You saved seed," I told her. "Next year buy a packet from the seedsman."

One by one, the popular vegetables and flowers have succumbed to the hybridizer's magic. Tomatoes, summer squash, egg plant, onions, melons, to mention a few vegetables. In the flower garden, snaps, zinnias, marigolds, petunias, pansies give us bumper yields of color.

I DON'T HAVE to grow giants if I don't want giants. The seed wizards have worked both ways from the middle, building midgets for gardeners who want compact plants, superdupers for those who want them big.

One thing I soon learned about hybrids is that, being huskier plants, they are big feeders. So, while my tomato plants were "growing boys" I fed them frequently with tomato food pellets. Same with the zinnias, snaps and marigolds.

Some stubborn plants still balk at playing the hybridizer's game. Or they are so complicated in structure that cross pollinating by hand is too costly. A few popular posies such as marigolds and zinnias are whole clusters of flowers in a single blossom. Ingenious Mr. Burpee solved that impossible pollinating problem by hiring a million bees to do the huge chore.

BEE LABOR worked fine on the marigold and zinnia seed farms, but not with sweet peas, in which the bees' tongues couldn't reach the nectar.

"No nectar or pollen, no work," is the slogan of the bee union.

Which is why I can't buy hybrid sweetpea seed.

The Home Swimming Pool — A Leisure Time Saver

Home swimming pools are just a changing conception of leisure in America today, claims economist Justin Voss who has studied the leisure field for more than eight years.

Americans, he says, once thought hard work was good because it was hard.

"Now, people are beginning to see that unnecessary hard work is bad because it deprives them of great opportunities for fun and relaxation, the essence of leisure."

PART AND PARCEL of this change in attitude "in a society in which over-weight is replacing overwork as a national problem," says Voss, "is an understanding that, as consumers, we all have two economic resources or budgets from which to spend: Money and time."

Most economists and businessmen have looked for a "boom" in the leisure industries because of increased consumer affluence.

But Voss maintains that this is only partially true.

"Time and money are virtually inseparable as economic resources. We can make more money, but not more time and are, therefore, limited in what we may buy and use."

ACCORDING TO Voss, we can now spend our two economic resources in four different ways:

Spend money, but not time (buy a swimming pool instead of traveling to the beach).

Spend both time and money (join and frequent a swim club or community pool or buy and swim in your own pool).

Spend time, but not money (go for a swim in your neighbor's pool).

Spend money to gain time (buy automatic pool cleaning and chemical feeding equipment or hire a pool service firm to do the entire job).

It is this last category that is mot fascinating.

VOSS SAYS THAT automatic pool cleaning systems don't just make the life easier, but "create leisure time by reducing the amount of time previously required to do the job."

Self-cleaning ovens, TV dinners and central home vacuum systems also fit into the category of what the economist calls "time-goods."

"In a study recently conducted for the National Swimming Pool Institute, I was surprised to discover that the pool itself is considered by owners to be part of this new class of products," he says.

Voss maintains that too frequently we don't have the time to take advantage of our newfound affluence and the things — foreign vacation trips, vacation homes, boats and such — that the affluence would allow us to purchase.

"LESURE TIME is consumed by getting to these distant things, both in terms of actual miles and in terms of time spent waiting in long lines at airports — or in the skies above them, driving on clogged super highways and participating at overcrowded public and private recreational and resort facilities.

"This 'aggravation affect' is, to a considerable degree, offsetting the technological progress we have made in automobiles and highways and jet transportation."

Voss found in the pool industry study that owners often "viewed other expenditures — like boats and cottages — as too expensive in terms of time available to pack up, get to, use and return from.

"On the other hand, the pool was always there and provided the means for maximizing leisure time. It also created more leisure time by allowing the conversion of 'what-do-I-do-now, Mom?' time into 'spur-of-the-moment' swimming fun and exercise."

ONE OF THE BEST uses the outdoor lover can make of his yard space is the swimming pool — a cool spot for recreation and relaxtion. And an excellent means, studies have shown, of keeping the kids at home and the family together. It can also be a landscaping asset, when properly planned and coordinated.

CRUMBLY SOIL IS GOOD GARDENING SOIL

Digging one's hands into the soil of Luther Burbank's garden in Santa Rosa may be a no-no for a California historical monument, but it is a delightful experience for a home gardener.

As the soil sifts through the open fingers, its crumbly texture illustrates the key to success in gardening in the Golden State.

ONE OF THE best climates in the world supports one of the widest ranges of plant materials, suitable for use in home gardens. The other critical environmental influence is soil.

There are different types of soils in which Californians garden. Some gardeners are blessed with soils which support and promote growth in luxuriant fashion. Other soils are deficient and obviously need to be improved. In Marin, the latter is usually the case.

Californians can improve such problem soils as part of the planting process. When planting, humus is added to the soil in which the plants' roots must grow. Peat moss, leaf mold, composted redwood shavings and certain wood bark products, in light, sandy soils help retain moisture and nutrients. Humus helps breakdown heavy soils — improving water and air penetration and releasing locked-up soil nutrients.

NURSERIES HAVE a wide range of organic materials, as well as ready-to-use packaged planter mixes, which can be incorporated with existing garden soil. Nurserymen can recommend the best material for the type soil — and planting situations — which confronts gardeners throughout particular areas of the community.

Now that more than generous winter rains have loosened soils, their improvement is simplified. Dig-in generous quantities of humus — enough to form one-fourth to one-half of the amended soil. Spread evenly and mixed thoroughly, with existing soil, this will do as much as the July sun, to produce the biggest tomatoes in the neighborhood.

Or, to encourage fast and sturdy growth on the newly-planted shade tree.

RAISED BED gardening is an effective procedure where soil drainage is a problem. Redwood lumber, logs, railroad ties, brick or stone are popular items used to form a retaining wall. Add soil, incorporating organic material, as you fill-in the planting area to the desired height.

Not only does this enhance drainage, but produces a planter-type fixture in which the gardener can demonstrate a creative flair.

A MEDIEVAL ART

Espaliering Brings A Touch Of Royal Splendor To Yard

"Fruit trees don't have ears, but they take directions beautifully."

That's the observation of Paul Stark Jr., vice-president of the 157-year-old Stark Bro's Nurseries of Louisiana, Mo., who recommends espaliered trees to add a touch of the English and European manor garden to modern backyards.

Espaliering is the medieval art of training young tree branches to grow in certain directions, thus shaping up into a mature tree of rare and elaborate artistic design.

"IT'S A SIMPLE process," says Stark, "in which unwanted shoots are pruned away and the branches kept are tied to grow in chosen directions. The tieing is to a trellis, wall, or other flat surface — figuratively, to a "shoulder," that being the meaning of the Italian word "spalla" from which the term "espalier" comes. Pears and other fruit trees are ideal for espaliering. And since the less tall the tree, the better it can be espaliered, the dwarf varieties are especially sought."

At one time the espaliered tree was characteristic only of the castle and manor grounds of kings and lords who had gardeners to attend to the then-long, once-tedious work. On the one hand, trees then took longer to mature and it was difficult to see, quickly, the result of the espaliering, and on the other hand there were no dwarf trees at the time and it was a problem to hold to the best size for espaliering a tree that normally grew twenty feet tall.

"BUT NOW," Stark says, "there not only are dwarf varieties but fast-growing ones — pears, apples, peaches that reach full eight to 10 feet size in about five years, and bear fruit when they're only two years old. Now it's possible for almost any homeowner to bring a royal touch of Camelot to his backyard — or frontyard, or patio.

"These new varieties may not have ears, but when it comes to espaliering, they take directions beautifully."

Light Can Scorch An Evergreen

Intense light can scorch your evergreens. So don't plant them too close to white or light-colored houses where bouncing sunlight will practically cook them. The plant often will die, sometimes two or three years after being planted.

Least tolerant of intense light are yew and rhododendron. Azalea and Japanese ilex don't suffer quite as much.

Keep south-side foundation plantings at least three or four feet from a building life if exposed to full sunlight, advises tree expert Robert Bartless.

In summer, all plants on southern and southwestern exposures need more water than those on the north side. A high organic plant food will help plants if they are not too seriously damaged.

Weeding Essential

Even the best garden needs constant weeding. Don't neglect it.

The Prevention And Cure Of Power Mower Ailments

If you're the kind of guy who takes his power mower to a servicing dealer to have the height adjustment levers moved from one and a half to two inches, then you're beyond hope.

If you're one step above that, this article is for you. If you're an ex-GI you're in even better shape.

First, just apply the first rule of "police call." For those that don't know what "police call" is, it is cleaning up any given ground area by hand. Translated into mower maintenance, do the same with the area you're about to mow. You'd be surprised at how many damaged rotary blades, broken crankshafts and jammed reels this can eliminate.

The result? Less costly maintenance.

THE SECOND rule of "police call" is "if it moves, pick it up". If you can't pick it up . . . paint it. In mower maintenance, this translates into "if it moves, lubricate it."

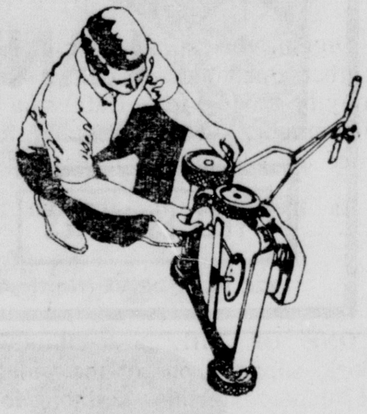
That's right. Get yourself a can of household oil and starting at the mower control levers, give a squirt to every metal part that moves against every other metal part This includes every screw, nut and bolt on the mower . . . every place where the control wires attach to the engine . . . where the grass bag hooks onto the mower deck . . . where the wheels rotate on the axle and where the axle attaches to the deck.

Get a cloth and wipe off all excess oil because that excess catches dirt and grass clippings. It's the oil you can't see after you put it on that's working for you. And that oil will keep those parts operating smoothly against each other and lessen the chance of serious troubles occurring because of jamming.

LUBRICATING the screws, nuts and bolts protects them against rusting and jamming, when and if they have to be removed or tightened. They're certain to lower the tab at your servicing dealer because of the time he saves in dismantling the mower, when and if it is called for.

If you know how to use a screwdriver, you'll be wise to start every season by tightening every screw on the mower you can reach. With a wrench do the same to bolts and nuts. This will keep your mower in line and limit the stress on it. It will also eliminate excessive vibration from loose parts. Vibration means more than noise. It means screw and bolt-holes are being widened by bouncing against the loose screws and bolts. This can lead to serious trouble and major service charges.

The engine maintenance should be left to a qualified servicing dealer. In fact, a good idea is to have your mower looked over by a servicing dealer either just before or just after the end of the mowing season.



You can end carburetor adjustments by such advances as a carburetor which is preadjusted at the factory and never has to be adjusted again. It's programmed forever for fast sure first pull starts. In short, with nothing to adjust, it's an unhandy man's dream.

The Exotic Fern Is Also Hardy

Ferns can be both hardy and exotic.

If you walk through your local nursery, you'll get new ideas on size and texture. A few ferns are finicky, but your nurseryman can put you on to the sturdy ones.

One home gardener writes, "Our entire north wall of the greenhouse is covered with fern pots. These were surprise plants. We had ordered some baby orchid plants from Hawaii and the ferns sprouted from spores that were in the potting mix with the orchids. We were delighted.

"We wired the fern pots to the wall and watched five different kinds of ferns develop. If we had space, these ferns would make stylish, easy-to-care for decorations in the living room.

"We spoke to the nurseryman about ferns. He says that they are becoming more and more popular. Most ferns are easy to cultivate. You can mix textures and various greens, high and low for interesting effects.

"Our ferns were fed once a month, using a liquid plant food with a deodorized fish base, and have very luxuriant growth. Once they are growing well, there is very little you need to do for them except water them with a diluted plant food."

Out in the yard, ferns can be used as groundcover under trees. Natives can be used along walkways, or on the shady side of the house where light is less.

When you cut back the old fern fronds for a tidy appearance, it seems to generate luxuriant growth.

A Window Filled With Salad Makings

You don't need a vegetable garden to grow mustard and cress.

A shady window will allow you to grow them indoors with ease. Just sprinkle the seeds on a paper napkin and keep moist. Within 24 hours the seed coats will split, and within 10 days the cress will be high enough to cut for adding a zesty flavor to sandwiches, salads and egg dishes.

As the soil sifts through the open fingers, its crumbly texture illustrates the key to success in gardening in the Golden State.

ONE OF THE best climates in the world supports one of the widest ranges of plant materials, suitable for use in home gardens. The other critical environmental influence is soil.

There are different types of soils in which Californians garden. Some gardeners are blessed with soils which support and promote growth in luxuriant fashion. Other soils are deficient and obviously need to be improved. In Marin, the latter is usually the case.

Californians can improve such problem soils as part of the planting process. When planting, humus is added to the soil in which the plants' roots must grow. Peat moss, leaf mold, composted redwood shavings and certain wood bark products, in light, sandy soils help retain moisture and nutrients. Humus helps breakdown heavy soils — improving water and air penetration and releasing locked-up soil nutrients.

NURSERIES HAVE a wide range of organic materials, as well as ready-to-use packaged planter mixes, which can be incorporated with existing garden soil. Nurserymen can recommend the best material for the type soil — and planting situations — which confronts gardeners throughout particular areas of the community.

Now that more than generous winter rains have loosened soils, their improvement is simplified. Dig-in generous quantities of humus — enough to form one-fourth to one-half of the amended soil. Spread evenly and mixed thoroughly, with existing soil, this will do as much as the July sun, to produce the biggest tomatoes in the neighborhood.

Or, to encourage fast and sturdy growth on the newly-planted shade tree.

RAISED BED gardening is an effective procedure where soil drainage is a problem. Redwood lumber, logs, railroad ties, brick or stone are popular items used to form a retaining wall. Add soil, incorporating organic material, as you fill-in the planting area to the desired height.

Not only does this enhance drainage, but produces a planter-type fixture in which the gardener can demonstrate a creative flair.

A MEDIEVAL ART

Espaliering Brings A Touch Of Royal Splendor To Yard

"Fruit trees don't have ears, but they take directions beautifully."

That's the observation of Paul Stark Jr., vice-president of the 157-year-old Stark Bro's Nurseries of Louisiana, Mo., who recommends espaliered trees to add a touch of the English and European manor garden to modern backyards.

Espaliering is the medieval art of training young tree branches to grow in certain directions, thus shaping up into a mature tree of rare and elaborate artistic design.

"IT'S A SIMPLE process," says Stark, "in which unwanted shoots are pruned away and the branches kept are tied to grow in chosen directions. The tieing is to a trellis, wall, or other flat surface — figuratively, to a "shoulder," that being the meaning of the Italian word "spalla" from which the term "espalier" comes. Pears and other fruit trees are ideal for espaliering. And since the less tall the tree, the better it can be espaliered, the dwarf varieties are especially sought."

At one time the espaliered tree was characteristic only of the castle and manor grounds of kings and lords who had gardeners to attend to the then-long, once-tedious work. On the one hand, trees then took longer to mature and it was difficult to see, quickly, the result of the espaliering, and on the other hand there were no dwarf trees at the time and it was a problem to hold to the best size for espaliering a tree that normally grew twenty feet tall.

"BUT NOW," Stark says, "there not only are dwarf varieties but fast-growing ones — pears, apples, peaches that reach full eight to 10 feet size in about five years, and bear fruit when they're only two years old. Now it's possible for almost any homeowner to bring a royal touch of Camelot to his backyard — or frontyard, or patio.

"These new varieties may not have ears, but when it comes to espaliering, they take directions beautifully."

Light Can Scorch An Evergreen

Intense light can scorch your evergreens. So don't plant them too close to white or light-colored houses where bouncing sunlight will practically cook them. The plant often will die, sometimes two or three years after being planted.

Least tolerant of intense light are yew and rhododendron. Azalea and Japanese ilex don't suffer quite as much.

Keep south-side foundation plantings at least three or four feet from a building life if exposed to full sunlight, advises tree expert Robert Bartless.

In summer, all plants on southern and southwestern exposures need more water than those on the north side. A high organic plant food will help plants if they are not too seriously damaged.

Weeding Essential

Even the best garden needs constant weeding. Don't neglect it.

For Color Through The Cool Season, Look To The Camellia

It's a real thrill to own a new home.

Chances are, though, that many of the newest homes haven't been landscaped as yet — and certain other homeowners are in the process of remodeling their existing gardens.

Consider the Camellia. This colorful evergreen plant will thrill everyone with beautiful blossom forms in many colors and shades that brighten the scene throughout the cool season.

What finer plant can be found for lending winter color to a new home — or refurbished garden?

THE EXQUISITE flowers of the Camellias bloom in every shade variation of red and pink. Many varieties are bi-colored or are marked with white. One of the most exciting of the newer Camellias is Corter's Sunburst. It produces a huge peony-type flower which is medium pink — sensationally streaked with deeper pink.

Perfectly white is early-blooming Alba Plena, which features formal flowers. A mid- to late-blooming newcomer is Snow White — a sure-to-please white formal.

Shell pink in color, Debutante is known as the perfect corsage flower. The peony-type Camellia is a vigorous upright grower, and an excellent landscape choice.

DONATION IS an orchid-pink of semi-double flower proportions; Pearl Maxwell has large formal double flowers of the softest of pinks. There are a host of pink shades — and this is the case when it comes to reds and others in the Camellia clan.

Kramer's Supreme produces big, slightly fragrant, deep red flowers in peony form; Mathotiana is a favorite which boasts plenty of large, double rose flowers in a scarlet shade. On the double formal side is Colonel Firey, whose dark red blooms liven-up the garden in mid-to-late season.

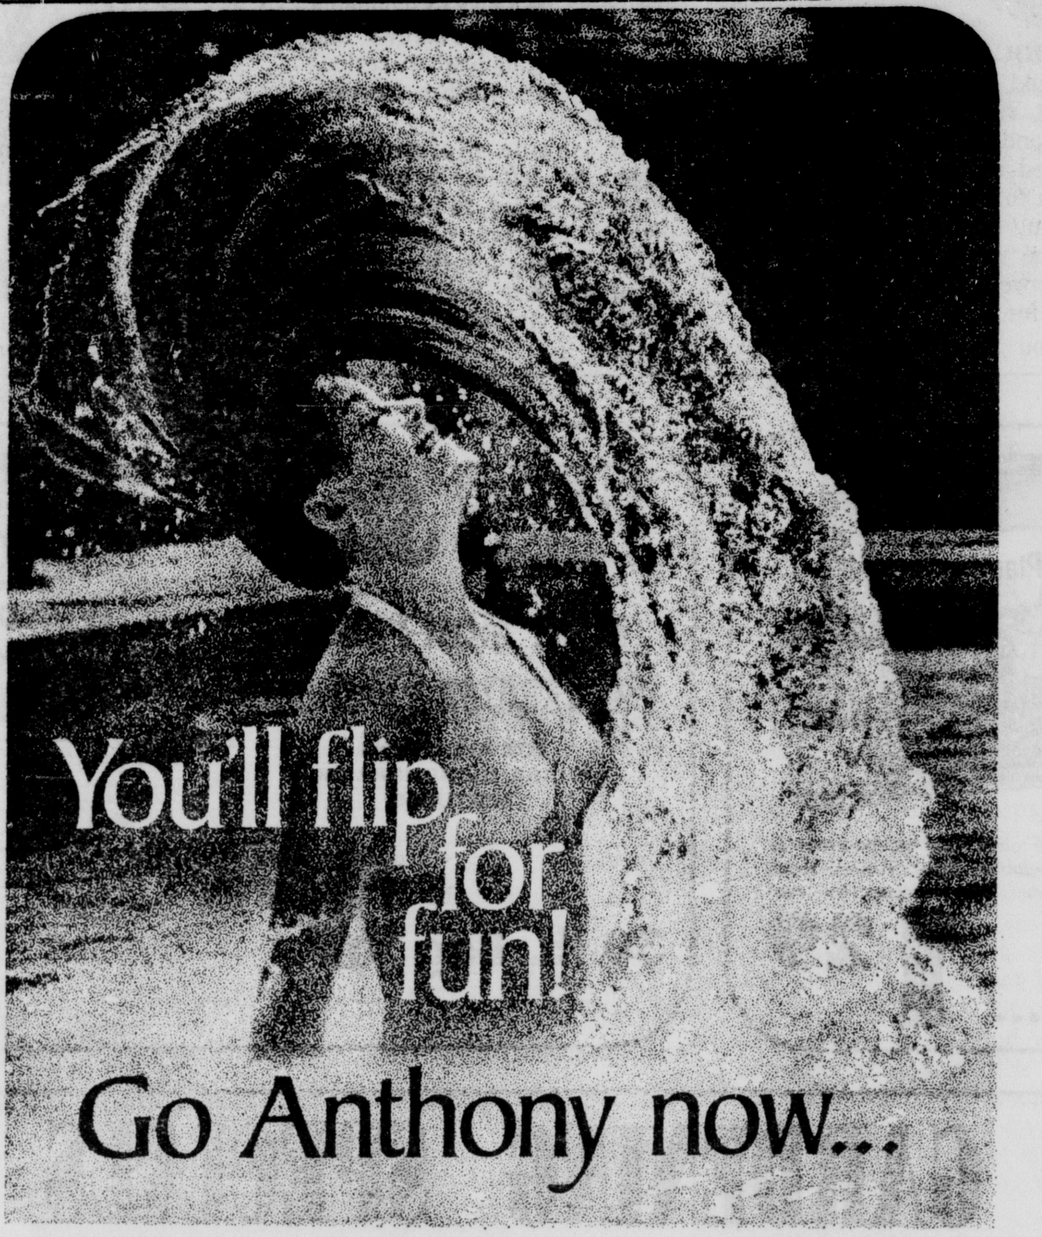
Description of Camellia blooms could go on and on — there are books available on the subject — for there are scores of varieties in beautiful and pleasing shades of color. Best bet is to visit your nursery. Nurseries generally have their largest selection of varieties available now. Shopping for the various flower forms and colors is a fun experience.

Judicious selection (here's where your nurseryman can help) of early, mid-season and late-flowering Camellia varieties will be a huge step towards providing a succession of wintertime color in your new home, or garden.

Wisteria Requires A Strong Support

Although wisteria requires nothing special except sun and good drainage to do its beautiful best, it does need a strong support.

To promote blooming at an early age, do most of your pruning by pinching the first year or so. Don't cut back heavily until it has developed a strong blooming habit. To train wisteria along the top of a fence, for instance, allow one "string" to grow without pruning. You can, in fact, grow the string around corners.



You'll flip for fun!

The Prevention And Cure Of Power Mower Ailments

If you're the kind of guy who takes his power mower to a servicing dealer to have the height adjustment levers moved from one and a half to two inches, then you're beyond hope.

If you're one step above that, this article is for you. If you're an ex-GI you're in even better shape.

First, just apply the first rule of "police call." For those that don't know what "police call" is, it is cleaning up any given ground area by hand. Translated into mower maintenance, do the same with the area you're about to mow. You'd be surprised at how many damaged rotary blades, broken crankshafts and jammed reels this can eliminate.

The result? Less costly maintenance.

THE SECOND rule of "police call" is "if it moves, pick it up". If you can't pick it up . . . paint it. In mower maintenance, this translates into "if it moves, lubricate it."

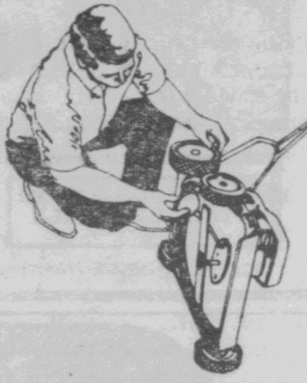
That's right. Get yourself a can of household oil and starting at the mower control levers, give a squirt to every metal part that moves against every other metal part This includes every screw, nut and bolt on the mower . . . every place where the control wires attach to the engine . . . where the grass bag hooks onto the mower deck . . . where the wheels rotate on the axle and where the axle attaches to the deck.

Get a cloth and wipe off all excess oil because that excess catches dirt and grass clippings. It's the oil you can't see after you put it on that's working for you. And that oil will keep those parts operating smoothly against each other and lessen the chance of serious troubles occurring because of jamming.

LUBRICATING the screws, nuts and bolts protects them against rusting and jamming, when and if they have to be removed or tightened. They're certain to lower the tab at your servicing dealer because of the time he saves in dismantling the mower, when and if it is called for.

If you know how to use a screwdriver, you'll be wise to start every season by tightening every screw on the mower you can reach. With a wrench do the same to bolts and nuts. This will keep your mower in line and limit the stress on it. It will also eliminate excessive vibration from loose parts. Vibration means more than noise. It means screw and bolt-holes are being widened by bouncing against the loose screws and bolts. This can lead to serious trouble and major service charges.

The engine maintenance should be left to a qualified servicing dealer. In fact, a good idea is to have your mower looked over by a servicing dealer either just before or just after the end of the mowing season.



You can end carburetor adjustments by such advances as a carburetor which is preadjusted at the factory and never has to be adjusted again. It's programmed forever for fast sure first pull starts. In short, with nothing to adjust, it's an unhandy man's dream.

The Exotic Fern Is Also Hardy

Ferns can be both hardy and exotic.

If you walk through your local nursery, you'll get new ideas on size and texture. A few ferns are finicky, but your nurseryman can put you on to the sturdy ones.

One home gardener writes, "Our entire north wall of the greenhouse is covered with fern pots. These were surprise plants. We had ordered some baby orchid plants from Hawaii and the ferns sprouted from spores that were in the potting mix with the orchids. We were delighted.

"We wired the fern pots to the wall and watched five different kinds of ferns develop. If we had space, these ferns would make stylish, easy-to-care for decorations in the living room.

"We spoke to the nurseryman about ferns. He says that they are becoming more and more popular. Most ferns are easy to cultivate. You can mix textures and various greens, high and low for interesting effects.

"Our ferns were fed once a month, using a liquid plant food with a deodorized fish base, and have very luxuriant growth. Once they are growing well, there is very little you need to do for them except water them with a diluted plant food."

Out in the yard, ferns can be used as groundcover under trees. Natives can be used along walkways, or on the shady side of the house where light is less.

When you cut back the old fern fronds for a tidy appearance, it seems to generate luxuriant growth.

A Window Filled With Salad Makings

You don't need a vegetable garden to grow mustard and cress.

A shady window will allow you to grow them indoors with ease. Just sprinkle the seeds on a paper napkin and keep moist. Within 24 hours the seed coats will split, and within 10 days the cress will be high enough to cut for adding a zesty flavor to sandwiches, salads and egg dishes.

When The Earth Warms, It's Dahlia Planting Time

As soon as the soil becomes warm in spring it is time to plant Dahlias, one of the favorite sources for summer flowers.

Nurseries have tubers (bulbs) on display now with color illustrations of the color and form of the flowers which will brighten the summer-fall garden.

Though there are many types of Dahlias — ranging from dwarf forms to the large exhibition varieties which produce flowers 10 and 12 inches across — the most popular ones are decoratives, cactus-types and pompons.

THE DECORATIVE class of Dahlias grow large flowers that can be formally perfect, or informally loose and "shaggy" in appearance. The olors range from pure white through yellow, orange, pink, red, violet and striking bi-colors. Plant the robust decorative Dahlias three to four feet apart in a sunny location.

Cactus Dahlias have slender petals, and smaller flowers. The general flower appearance is a loose arrangement of petals, but a popular group boasts blooms with a semi-formal look. Colors include yellow, apricot, red and white. The bicolor forms add much focal interest to the garden.

Small, formal ball-shaped flowers adorn the pompon Dahlias, which are medium-height growers. The well-branched plants carry a profusion of flowers in shades of pink, yellow, red, blue and white — excellent for table arrangements.

DAHLIAS ARE cherished by flower arrangers. The blooms are easily made into pleasing arrangements and are long-lasting if a bit of attention is given by the gardener.

Cut mature Dahlia flowers in the evening —a day or two after irrigation. Crush or cut the ends of the stems in several places and plunge into deep water overnight. They will be in excellent condition for arranging in the morning.

Your nurseryman can outline simple planting instructions, which will include a reminder to stake the plants. Do this as you plant the tubers. Place a four-foot stake in the hole and lay the tuber horizontally with the "eye" adjacent to the stake.

Be sure to keep the stalk attached to the stake and increase the watering schedule as the plant grows larger and the weather gets warmer.

For Quick Color

Bedding plants will give you quick color in the garden. Asters, ageratum, marigolds, petunias, periwinkle, and zinnias are among the annuals available in nurseries for fast bloom. On especially warm days, the young transplants should be shaded from direct, hot sun. Use burlap on stakes, or shade each plant with a shingle stuck in the ground.

For Color Through The Cool Season, Look To The Camellia

It's a real thrill to own a new home.

Chances are, though, that many of the newest homes haven't been landscaped as yet — and certain other homeowners are in the process of remodeling their existing gardens.

Consider the Camellia. This colorful evergreen plant will thrill everyone with beautiful blossom forms in many colors and shades that brighten the scene throughout the cool season.

What finer plant can be found for lending winter color to a new home — or refurbished garden?

THE EXQUISITE flowers of the Camellias bloom in every shade variation of red and pink. Many varieties are bi-colored or are marked with white. One of the most exciting of the newer Camellias is Corter's Sunburst. It produces a huge peony-type flower which is medium pink — sensationally streaked with deeper pink.

Perfectly white is early-blooming Alba Plena, which features formal flowers. A mid- to late-blooming newcomer is Snow White — a sure-to-please white formal.

Shell pink in color, Debutante is known as the perfect corsage flower. The peony-type Camellia is a vigorous upright grower, and an excellent landscape choice.

DONATION IS an orchid-pink of semi-double flower proportions; Pearl Maxwell has large formal double flowers of the softest of pinks. There are a host of pink shades — and this is the case when it comes to reds and others in the Camellia clan.

Kramer's Supreme produces big, slightly fragrant, deep red flowers in peony form; Mathotiana is a favorite which boasts plenty of large, double rose flowers in a scarlet shade. On the double formal side is Colonel Firey, whose dark red blooms liven-up the garden in mid-to-late season.

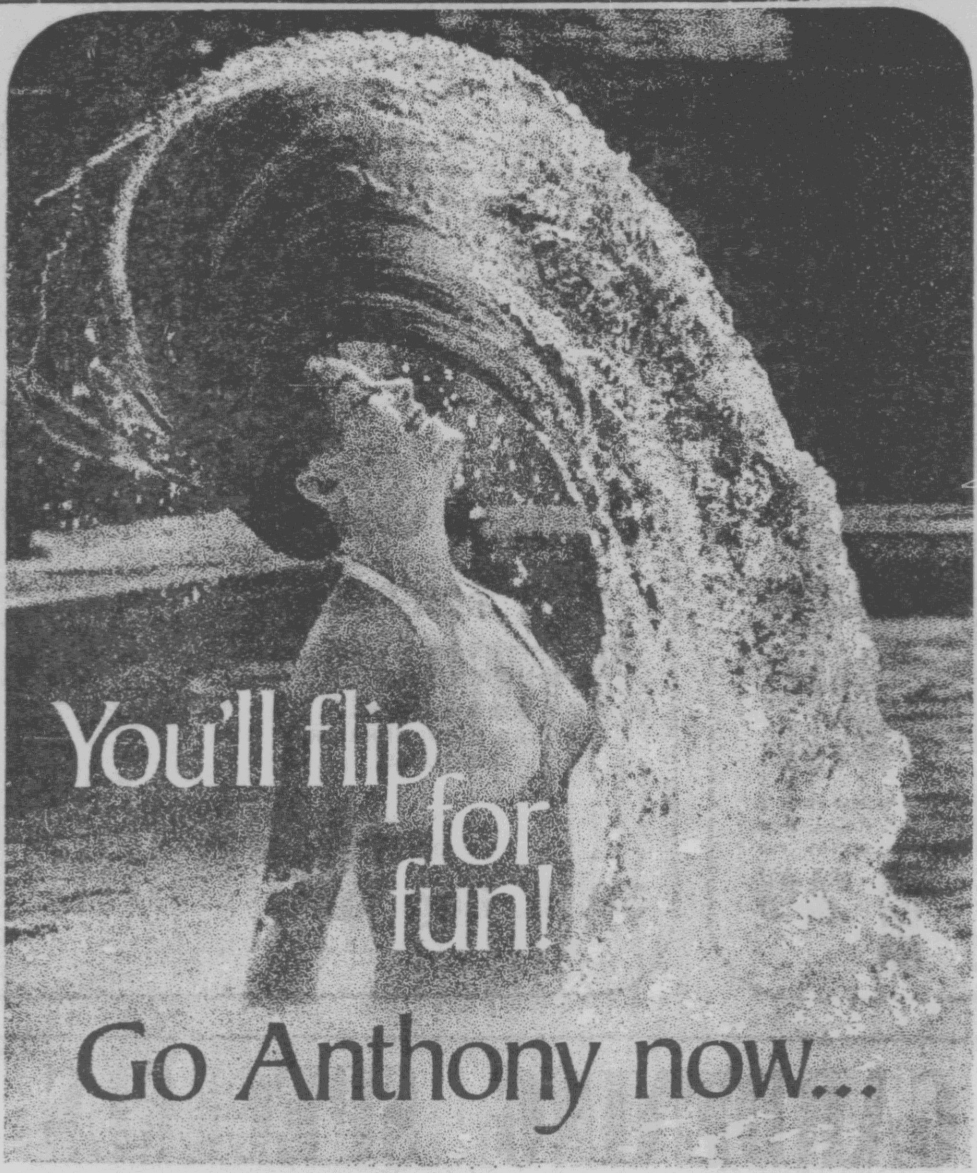
Description of Camellia blooms could go on and on — there are books available on the subject — for there are scores of varieties in beautiful and pleasing shades of color. Best bet is to visit your nursery. Nurseries generally have their largest selection of varieties available now. Shopping for the various flower forms and colors is a fun experience.

Judicious selection (here's where your nurseryman can help) of early, mid-season and late-flowering Camellia varieties will be a huge step towards providing a succession of wintertime color in your new home, or garden.

Wisteria Requires A Strong Support

Although wisteria requires nothing special except sun and good drainage to do its beautiful best, it does need a strong support.

To promote blooming at an early age, do most of your pruning by pinching the first year or so. Don't cut back heavily until it has developed a strong blooming habit. To train wisteria along the top of a fence, for instance, allow one "string" to grow without pruning. You can, in fact, grow the string around corners.



You'll flip for fun!

Plants To Enjoy Indoors Or Outside

There's nothing like a flowering plant to brighten-up indoor rooms.

One of the most exciting arrivals on the plant scene is the Rieger Begonia, just now becoming available in most of California. It performs admirably indoors and can be treated as a houseplant.

ATTRACTIVE foliage is decorated by slightly-cupped, silver-dollar size flowers; this promising plant blooms heaviest in the winter months. It comes in red, salmon, pink and cream colors.

Though frost-tender, Rieger's begonia can be planted in the summer shade garden, where its color show will add cheer to the surroundings. Indoors, provide plenty of light — as is a requirement for any indoor foliage plant. Keep moist, but not standing in water.

Light monthly feedings will be appreciated by the plant. Your nurseryman can recommend a specially-formulated plant food to use.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS are always available in bloom in California — and with such a wide range of colors, matching your decor is a joy instead of a chore.

The thrifty gardener will use the five plants in the 'mum pot to provide color in the fall garden — after the flowers are spent indoors. Cut back each plant to about six inches and plant them in sunny locations.

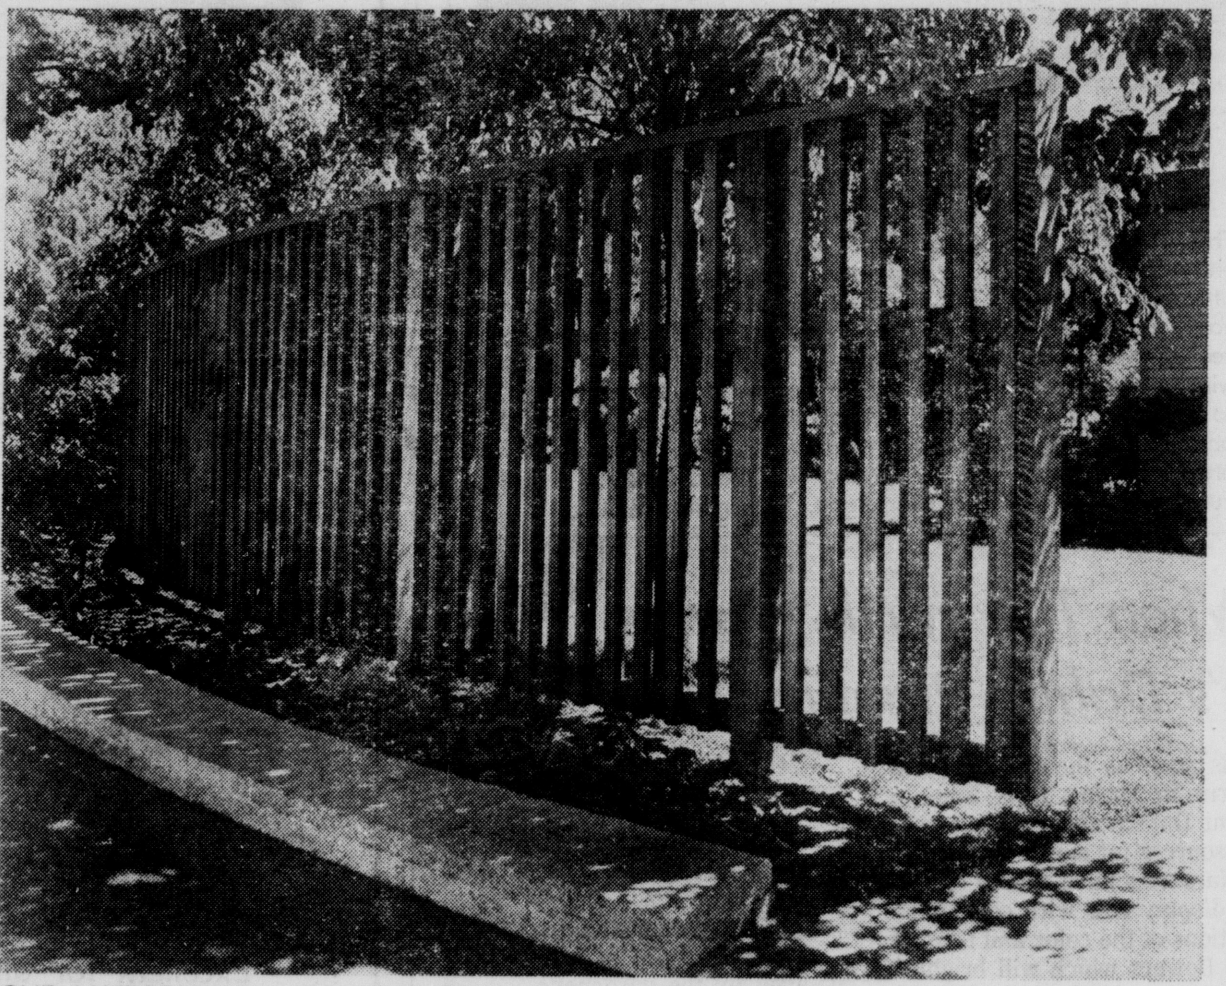
Winter days can be blessed by the bright flowers of Cyclamen, which are available in various sizes of nursery containers. Many nurseries have pots of Cyclamen already in flower — the blooms resemble butterflies, rising above the noticeable rounded leaves. They provide a succession of color, for weeks.

IN THE PROTECTED shade garden they are a cool season sensation.

Nurseries also have an abundance of Azaleas in full bloom. The colors range from the purest of white through shades of pink and red — and lavender and orchid — and variegations of colors. Enjoy the seasonal color indoors, then transplant the Azaleas into the shaded areas of the garden.

Your nurseryman can outline simple planting procedures.

A COOL KIND OF PRIVACY



ONE LANDSCAPING problem arises when the householder wants a fence that affords a degree of privacy — yet doesn't shut off cooling breezes. Here's a solution — a slightly curving redwood screen that permits a flow of air while partially obscuring the yard inside. Screen members are one-by-two construction-common grade redwood, the posts construction-heart. The screen lends a note of cohesion to the garden.

IT'S LILACS AND VIOLETS TO RECAPTURE THE PAST

Nostalgia is sweeping the nation, with an unprecedented interest being shown in America's past.

Memories are being shared and re-lived in many ways. With this wave of nostalgia, why not an old-fashioned garden?

There's a world of memories to be found in the growing of plants — especially those plants which might be deemed old-fashioned.

A Lilac in bloom, for instance, is remindful of some long-forgotten garden. Or, the scent of Violets fills the mind with memories of Grandma's garden. Such impressions are worth striving for.

Why not plant a memory here and there — a favorite plant that you grew up with and left behind at your parents' house or even one or two that were features of your grandparents' garden?

Violets without question — along with Lilacs — will provoke a remembrance of some place from the past. If you've forgotten the pleasures of having these in the garden, it's time to re-discover them, and at the same time meet some of the new hybrids.

Present-day Pansies and Violas aren't much different than those of yesteryear. They may be larger and more prolific, but they still exude old-fashioned charm.

There are countless shrubs for the old-fashioned garden. Christmas Rose, Daphne, Scotch Heather and Dianthus are sure to evoke memories, and who can whiff English Lavender without being moved? Spring is an excellent time to plant shrubs.

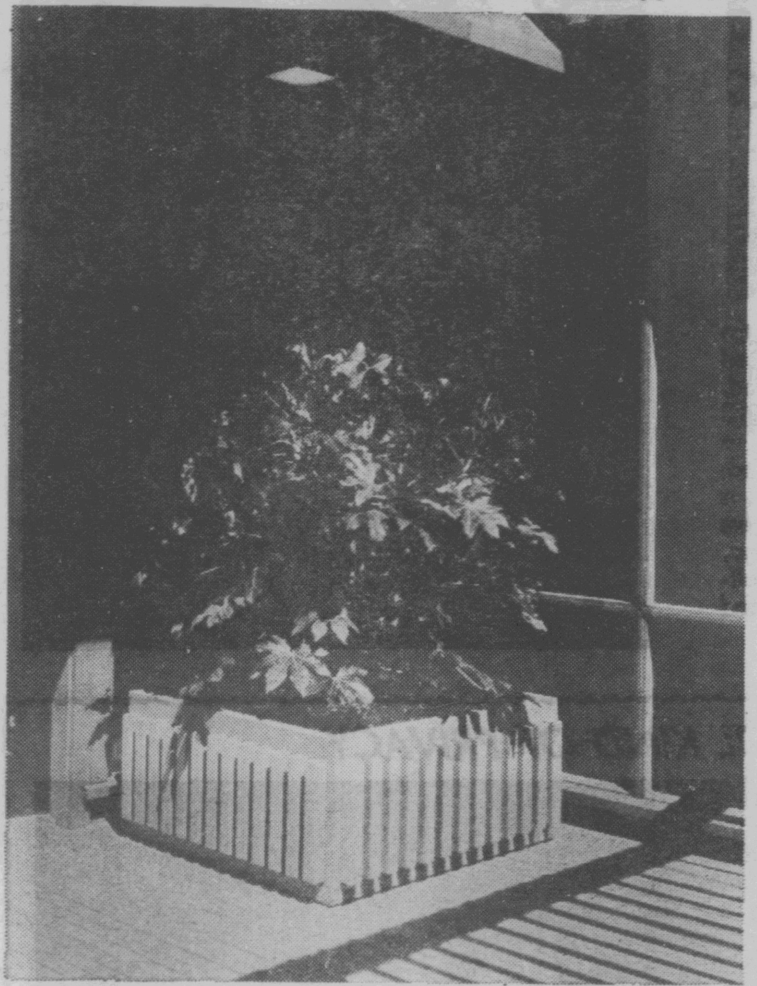
SHOWCASING YOUR PLANT



THE FOLIAGE OF a handsome plant on the patio, deck or entryway becomes all the more effective when it is enclosed in an attractive container. This three-foot-square box was constructed easily of two-by-eight and two-by-10-inch Douglas fir or western cedar, with two-by-twos adding a vertical accent. It can be lined with a 24-gauge metal pan, or the wood can be pressure treated to serve the same purpose. Illustrations showing how to build the box plus other landscaping ideas are shown in a full-color brochure available free by writing the Wood Products Industry Fund, Box 4447, 875 Mahler Road, Burlingame, 94010.

When The Earth Warms, It's Dahlia Planting Time

As soon as the soil becomes warm in spring it is time to plant Dahlias, one of the favorite sources for summer flowers.

Nurseries have tubers (bulbs) on display now with color illustrations of the color and form of the flowers which will brighten the summer-fall garden.

Though there are many types of Dahlias — ranging from dwarf forms to the large exhibition varieties which produce flowers 10 and 12 inches across — the most popular ones are decoratives, cactus-types and pompons.

THE DECORATIVE class of Dahlias grow large flowers that can be formally perfect, or informally loose and "shaggy" in appearance. The olors range from pure white through yellow, orange, pink, red, violet and striking bi-colors. Plant the robust decorative Dahlias three to four feet apart in a sunny location.

Cactus Dahlias have slender petals, and smaller flowers. The general flower appearance is a loose arrangement of petals, but a popular group boasts blooms with a semi-formal look. Colors include yellow, apricot, red and white. The bi-color forms add much focal interest to the garden.

Small, formal ball-shaped flowers adorn the pompon Dahlias, which are medium-height growers. The well-branched plants carry a profusion of flowers in shades of pink, yellow, red, blue and white — excellent for table arrangements.

DAHLIAS ARE cherished by flower arrangers. The blooms are easily made into pleasing arrangements and are long-lasting if a bit of attention is given by the gardener.

Cut mature Dahlia flowers in the evening —a day or two after irrigation. Crush or cut the ends of the stems in several places and plunge into deep water overnight. They will be in excellent condition for arranging in the morning.

Your nurseryman can outline simple planting instructions, which will include a reminder to stake the plants. Do this as you plant the tubers. Place a four-foot stake in the hole and lay the tuber horizontally with the "eye" adjacent to the stake.

Be sure to keep the stalk attached to the stake and increase the watering schedule as the plant grows larger and the weather gets warmer.

For Quick Color

Bedding plants will give you quick color in the garden. Asters, ageratum, marigolds, petunias, periwinkle, and zinnias are among the annuals available in nurseries for fast bloom. On especially warm days, the young transplants should be shaded from direct, hot sun. Use burlap on stakes, or shade each plant with a shingle stuck in the ground.

Putting Bees To Work In Greenhouse

A new discovery about bees has researchers at the University of Arizona buzzing with excitement. What they have found could change the eating habits of millions of Americans.

Horticulturists here have discovered — almost by accident — that bees will work busily and do a thorough job of pollination of plants in a greenhouse made of polyethylene.

What's so unusual about this is that bees normally drag their feet and work only reluctantly in a greenhouse of any kind. If it's made of clear glass, they will batter themselves against it trying to escape. If it is fiberglass, they will cluster in a corner and pay slight attention to blossoms.

So pollination of most vegetables grown in greenhouses is done tediously and expensively by hand — greatly increasing the cost of greenhouse produce.

Dr. Merel Jensen, horticulturist at the Environmental Research Laboratory, and Dr. L. N. Standifer, director of the United States Bee Culture Laboratory here in Tucson, are agreed that if bees can be induced to do pollinating, it will be a tremendous stimulus to the greenhouse industry. Far more, far cheaper, off-season melons and vegetables can be on millions of tables.

Those Microscopic Mites Can Be Mighty Annoying

By EARL ARONSON

The miticide you use against some insects may lose its effectiveness because the mites build up resistance to it.

Switch to a different miticide that has not been used on the same tree or bush before, and switch back to the other in a couple of years.

HOT WEATHER helps increase the mite population. These insects are nearly microscopic in size. They suck juices from plants. The leaves become brown or dusty in color. Oak, sycamore, hickory, elm, maple, birch and fruit trees are among their favorite haunts.

Mini-Garden

If you have only a window box for a garden, let your children sow radish seeds in part of it and learn the joy of producing something from seeds.

Evergreens may suffer even more. Especially common on privet, spruce, hemlock, boxwood, arborvitae, azalea and andromeda are the red spider mite and the two-spotted mite.

Researchers report that a miticide may kill 98 per cent of a strain but the 2 per cent that survive produce a strain that over four or five generations builds up a population that ignores a particular miticide.

THREE OR four generations of mites may be produced in a growing season. One female mite can bring forth 13,000 mites in a single month when the temperature is about 70; at 80 in a greenhouse a single female has been known to send forth 13 million mites.

These insects are so small that 500 can gather on a single leaf. After heavy infestations there is twig and branch dieback.

IT'S LILACS AND VIOLETS TO RECAPTURE THE PAST

Nostalgia is sweeping the nation, with an unprecedented interest being shown in America's past.

Memories are being shared and re-lived in many ways. With this wave of nostalgia, why not an old-fashioned garden?

There's a world of memories to be found in the growing of plants — especially those plants which might be deemed old-fashioned.

A Lilac in bloom, for instance, is remindful of some long-forgotten garden. Or, the scent of Violets fills the mind with memories of Grandma's garden. Such impressions are worth striving for.

Why not plant a memory here and there — a favorite plant that you grew up with and left behind at your parents' house or even one or two that were features of your grandparents' garden?

Violets without question — along with Lilacs — will provoke a remembrance of some place from the past. If you've forgotten the pleasures of having these in the garden, it's time to re-discover them, and at the same time meet some of the new hybrids.

Present-day Pansies and Violas aren't much different than those of yesteryear. They may be larger and more prolific, but they still exude old-fashioned charm.

There are countless shrubs for the old-fashioned garden. Christmas Rose, Daphne, Scotch Heather and Dianthus are sure to evoke memories, and who can whiff English Lavender without being moved? Spring is an excellent time to plant shrubs.

TREES, that provide cooling shade in summer, foliage in spring and autumn, and then shed their leaves to let warm sunlight through in winter, are also nature's most effective dust traps and sound barriers. Most modern homes are served best by medium-sized trees with a maximum height of 30 to 40 feet, and a total spread of about the same dimensions. But when space is more limited, there are smaller, equally handsome species. For maximum shade and cooling, a tree should be separated form the house by a distance of approximately half its spread.

Arbor Day Observance Better Late Than Never

Arbor Day has come and gone, but if you didn't get into the tree-planting festivities, there is no reason why you should not sill stage your own belated observance.

There are lots of fine trees available for planting in Marin, and plenty of reasons for planting them. They provide shade and temperature control, they frame the view of both the outside world and of the home itself. They provide protection from the wind, reduce noise, afford privacy, and offer an aesthetic treat with their silhouette against the sky. They contribute, too, to the campaign against pollution, manufacturing the oxygen essential to man's well-being.

SPACE, HOWEVER, can be a factor that will thwart even the most devoted admirer of the tree. If there is no place to plant the tree, it doesn't get planted.

However, one should not overlook the fact that there are many, many small ornamental trees that require very little space and are ideally suited to the small garden or yard.

Local nurseries have an excellent selection of trees which thrive in our area. The best approach is to discuss your tree needs, or objective, with your nurseryman. The number of choices he can recommend will surprise and please you.

IF YOU'RE landscaping an estate, that's one thing. But, when you "tree-scape" the smaller gardens in today's cities, it's judicious to seek professional advice.

Right now, there are deciduous flowering and shade trees to plant bareroot. Such decorative delights as European White Birch, Purple Leaf Plum and Flowering Peaches are readily available.

Some small trees are really large shrubs and such is the case with heat-loving Crape Myrtle, which puts on a warm season carnival of color — in many shades. Evergreen Elm is a graceful, pendulous-type tree which fits small landscapes throughout the state.

THE DOGWOODS should not be neglected in any list of favorite small trees. Once the pride of the South, these trees are now grown everywhere. The showy Nuttall's Dogwood with its five-petaled white or pinkish bracts, for instance, grows from British Columbia all the way down the Pacific Coast.

Flowering crabs, plums and cherries, magnolias, the hawthorn, the Japanese Red Maple and the birch are other possibilities.

All take up a minimum of room and produce a maximum of beauty and environmental utility.

"Growing Plants Is Easy and Profitable" by Francis A. O'Hagan, retired nurseryman with a degree in ornamental horticulture, is a $7.95 book published by Nagaho Publishing Co. of Box 493, Miller Place, New York, 11764.

The book, says its publishers, is aimed at both the hobbyist and the gardener interested in developing a second source of income, and covers subjects ranging from propagation and cultivation of plants to advertising and sales.

The book will be available in some bookstores, or can be ordered directly from the publisher, $7.95, postpaid.

Putting Bees To Work In Greenhouse

A new discovery about bees has researchers at the University of Arizona buzzing with excitement. What they have found could change the eating habits of millions of Americans.

Horticulturists here have discovered — almost by accident — that bees will work busily and do a thorough job of pollination of plants in a greenhouse made of polyethylene.

What's so unusual about this is that bees normally drag their feet and work only reluctantly in a greenhouse of any kind. If it's made of clear glass, they will batter themselves against it trying to escape. If it is fiberglass, they will cluster in a corner and pay slight attention to blossoms.

So pollination of most vegetables grown in greenhouses is done tediously and expensively by hand — greatly increasing the cost of greenhouse produce.

Dr. Merel Jensen, horticulturist at the Environmental Research Laboratory, and Dr. L. N. Standifer, director of the United States Bee Culture Laboratory here in Tucson, are agreed that if bees can be induced to do pollinating, it will be a tremendous stimulus to the greenhouse industry. Far more, far cheaper, off-season melons and vegetables can be on millions of tables.

Those Microscopic Mites Can Be Mighty Annoying

By EARL ARONSON

The miticide you use against some insects may lose its effectiveness because the mites build up resistance to it.

Switch to a different miticide that has not been used on the same tree or bush before, and switch back to the other in a couple of years.

HOT WEATHER helps increase the mite population. These insects are nearly microscopic in size. They suck juices from plants. The leaves become brown or dusty in color. Oak, sycamore, hickory, elm, maple, birch and fruit trees are among their favorite haunts.

Evergreens may suffer even more. Especially common on privet, spruce, hemlock, boxwood, arborvitae, azalea and andromeda are the red spider mite and the two-spotted mite.

Researchers report that a miticide may kill 98 per cent of a strain but the 2 per cent that survive produce a strain that over four or five generations builds up a population that ignores a particular miticide.

THREE OR four generations of mites may be produced in a growing season. One female mite can bring forth 13,000 mites in a single month when the temperature is about 70; at 80 in a greenhouse a single female has been known to send forth 13 million mites.

These insects are so small that 500 can gather on a single leaf. After heavy infestations there is twig and branch dieback.

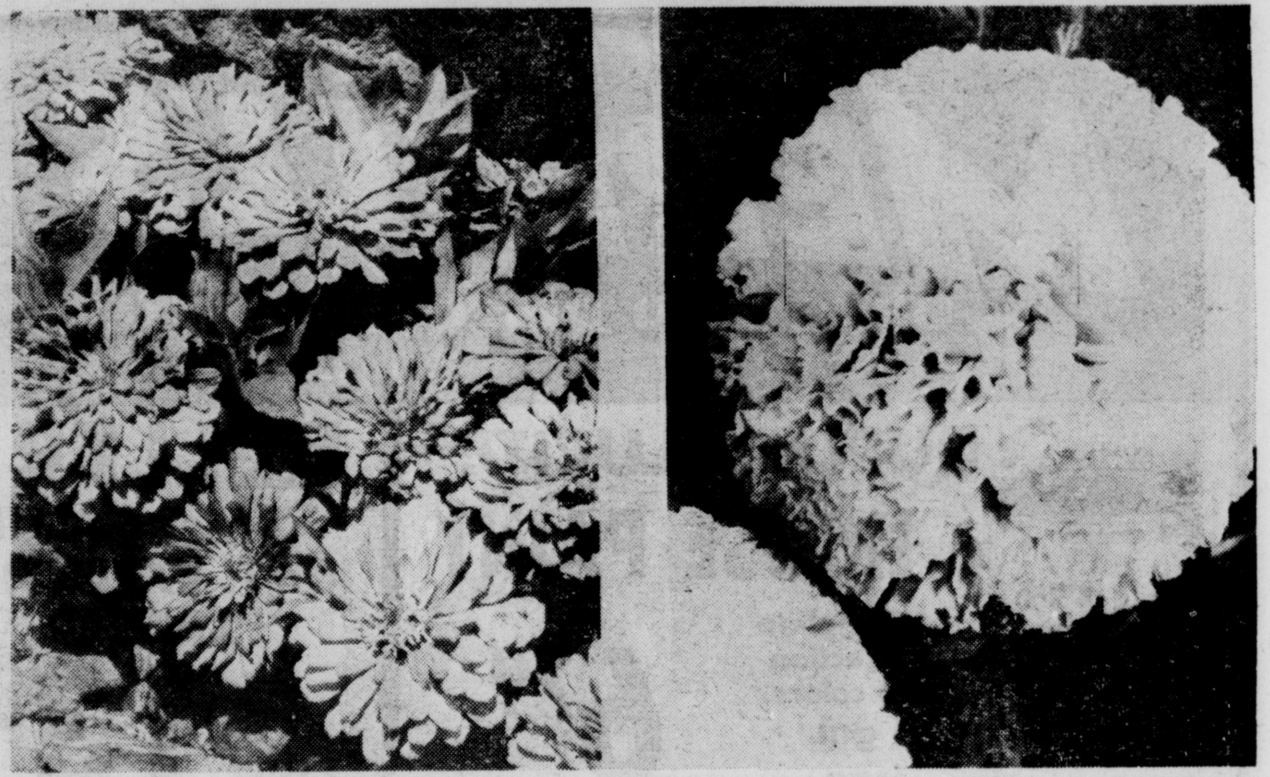
Zinnia And Marigold Top The '73 List Of Garden Flowers



THE TWO NEW garden flowers honored with All-America Selections recognition for 1973 are the Peter Pan Scarlet Zinnia, left, a silver medal award winner, and Happy Face Marigold, a bronze medal recipient.

Zinnias and marigolds now top all other garden flowers as the most popular among home gardeners in America, and for 1973 both these important classes are represented among the All-American Selections.

The two '73 All-American winners are Peter Pan Scarlet Zinnia, a magnificent new color in this unique class of large-flowered dwarf border hybrid zinnias, and Happy Face Marigold, a prolific deep golden yellow "hedge" type marigold.

PETER PAN Scarlet Zinnia, a silver medal award winner, is a beautiful addition to the Peter Pan series of hybrid zinnias, and only the third color to be introduced in this unusual new class. The other two Peter Pans are Plum and Pink - both winners of All-American gold medal awards in 1971, when they scored higher than any other entries in the 40 years of judging thousands of flowers and vegetables.

Peter Pan Scarlet Zinnia, the 1973 All-American winner, combines attractive large flower size with dwarf plant habit - a combination that more and more home gardeners are demanding.

Individual flowers are well-doubled and measure three to four inches across. Seldom growing more than a foot high, the first flowers appear when the plants reach six inches. They remain neat and compact, tolerate rough weather with ease, and cover themselves with blooms. They are superb in a landscape or border planting where they will remain neat and showy all summer.

HAPPY FACE Marigold, a bronze medal winner, belongs to a class of hybrid marigolds popularly known as "hedging" marigolds owing to their neat, uniform habit of growth. Happy Face has deep golden yellow fully-double flowers measuring up to four inches across on 26-inch plants.

Earlier than the Jubilees, more double than Apollo and Moonshot, it stays colorful from the end of July until frost, branching and rebranching with fresh blooms. At its best in a border, Happy Face is also useful as a container plant and as a patio accent.

Both Peter Pan Scarlet Zinnia and Happy Face Marigold are easy to grow from seed.

IN ADDITION to the new 1973 All-American Winners, the 1972 and 1971 selections have proved their popularity among home gardeners.

All-American Selections for 1972 were Carved Ivory Zinnia, an ivory-colored giant hybrid zinnia; Gold Galore Marigold, a sensational semi-dwarf golden yellow hybrid combining dwarf plant habit with large flower size; Circus hybrid petunia, a lovely salmon and white grandiflora double petunia, and Summer Carnival Hollyhocks, a vigorous large-flowered double hollyhocks in a beautiful mixture of colors.

All-America Selections for 1971 presented a magnificent array of flowers that awakened the public's interest in some lesser known classes.

Southern Belle, a giant hybrid hibiscus, is so large and so spectacular it has to be seen to be believed. A perennial that flowers the first year from seed (even in the north), it has white, rose and crimson blooms measuring a fantastic 10 inches across. Another delightful surprise among the award winners was Dianthus "Queen of Hearts," an everblooming radiant red with early-flowering characteristics. Silver Puffs Hollyhocks, a dwarf light pink hollyhocks, and Little Darling Snapdragon, a semi-dwarf butterfly type snapdragon, rounded off an outstanding year that proves flower breeders and hybridizers are more than ever alert to the needs of home gardeners.

BEFORE All-America Selections was organized in 1932 to make awards for outstanding new flowers and vegetables, gardeners had no way of knowing which flowers introduced each year were the best.

Today, All-American Selections has 30 trial gardens in the United States, Canada and Mexico, with a different judge at each location responsible for judging the flowers on the basis of performance in his own trials. Each flower variety submitted for trial is known only by a code number so the judges have no way of telling which breeder submitted the trial. Points are given to each flower and the totals counted to determine those which qualify for Bronze, Silver and Gold Medals.

One Apple Gives You One Pie

An apple so big that just one makes a whole pie.

An apple so unusual that the owner of the tree gets a registered certificate of its pedigree.

An apple that usually weighs in at two pounds and measures about five inches in diameter, and tastes great.

That's a quick description of the new Jumbo apple developed by Stark Brothers' Nurseries, the 157-year-old Louisiana, Mo., company with whom the late "plant wizard", Luther Burbank, was so long associated. But it doesn't quite tell the whole surprising story.

The fact is, this astonishing new apple — so big that most people think it's artificial until they hold it in their hands — grows on a dwarf tree that's only eight to 10 feet tall at maturity.

Other than this and its "grapefruit size", however, the Jumbo is not a novelty tree. The apple has deep red color and the shape of a Stark's Delicious, but the flavor is closer to that of a Winesap. The flesh is firm, and the apple is recommended for eating fresh or for baking.

The tree was introduced in the Spring of 1972 — in limited numbers — after 10 years of test-growing by Stark.

A Tip On Watering Your House Plants

Here's a tip from the American Water Works Assn. for people who have indoor plants or flowers:

Few house plants should be watered with cold water. This is why many indoor plants fail to bloom. To keep house plants in the best condition, let the water warm to room temperature before watering. You'll get better results.

The association is a scientific, non-profit organization formed to improve water service to North American communities.

Arbor Day Observance Better Late Than Never

Arbor Day has come and gone, but if you didn't get into the tree-planting festivities, there is no reason why you should not sill stage your own belated observance.

There are lots of fine trees available for planting in Marin, and plenty of reasons for planting them. They provide shade and temperature control, they frame the view of both the outside world and of the home itself. They provide protection from the wind, reduce noise, afford privacy, and offer an aesthetic treat with their silhouette against the sky. They contribute, too, to the campaign against pollution, manufacturing the oxygen essential to man's well-being.

SPACE, HOWEVER, can be a factor that will thwart even the most devoted admirer of the tree. If there is no place to plant the tree, it doesn't get planted.

However, one should not overlook the fact that there are many, many small ornamental trees that require very little space and are ideally suited to the small garden or yard.

Local nurseries have an excellent selection of trees which thrive in our area. The best approach is to discuss your tree needs, or objective, with your nurseryman. The number of choices he can recommend will surprise and please you.

IF YOU'RE landscaping an estate, that's one thing. But, when you "tree-scape" the smaller gardens in today's cities, it's judicious to seek professional advice.

Right now, there are deciduous flowering and shade trees to plant bareroot. Such decorative delights as European White Birch, Purple Leaf Plum and Flowering Peaches are readily available.

Some small trees are really large shrubs and such is the case with heat-loving Crape Myrtle, which puts on a warm season carnival of color — in many shades. Evergreen Elm is a graceful, pendulous-type tree which fits small landscapes throughout the state.

THE DOGWOODS should not be neglected in any list of favorite small trees. Once the pride of the South, these trees are now grown everywhere. The showy Nuttall's Dogwood with its five-petaled white or pinkish bracts, for instance, grows from British Columbia all the way down the Pacific Coast.

Flowering crabs, plums and cherries, magnolias, the hawthorn, the Japanese Red Maple and the birch are other possibilities.

All take up a minimum of room and produce a maximum of beauty and environmental utility.

Zinnia And Marigold Top The '73 List Of Garden Flowers

Zinnias and marigolds now top all other garden flowers as the most popular among home gardeners in America, and for 1973 both these important classes are represented among the All-American Selections.

The two '73 All-American winners are Peter Pan Scarlet Zinnia, a magnificent new color in this unique class of large-flowered dwarf border hybrid zinnias, and Happy Face Marigold, a prolific deep golden yellow "hedge" type marigold.

PETER PAN Scarlet Zinnia, a silver medal award winner, is a beautiful addition to the Peter Pan series of hybrid zinnias, and only the third color to be introduced in this unusual new class. The other two Peter Pans are Plum and Pink - both winners of All-American gold medal awards in 1971, when they scored higher than any other entries in the 40 years of judging thousands of flowers and vegetables.

Peter Pan Scarlet Zinnia, the 1973 All-American winner, combines attractive large flower size with dwarf plant habit - a combination that more and more home gardeners are demanding.

Individual flowers are well-doubled and measure three to four inches across. Seldom growing more than a foot high, the first flowers appear when the plants reach six inches. They remain neat and compact, tolerate rough weather with ease, and cover themselves with blooms. They are superb in a landscape or border planting where they will remain neat and showy all summer.

HAPPY FACE Marigold, a bronze medal winner, belongs to a class of hybrid marigolds popularly known as "hedging" marigolds owing to their neat, uniform habit of growth. Happy Face has deep golden yellow fully-double flowers measuring up to four inches across on 26-inch plants.

Earlier than the Jubilees, more double than Apollo and Moonshot, it stays colorful from the end of July until frost, branching and rebranching with fresh blooms. At its best in a border, Happy Face is also useful as a container plant and as a patio accent.

Both Peter Pan Scarlet Zinnia and Happy Face Marigold are easy to grow from seed.

IN ADDITION to the new 1973 All-American Winners, the 1972 and 1971 selections have proved their popularity among home gardeners.

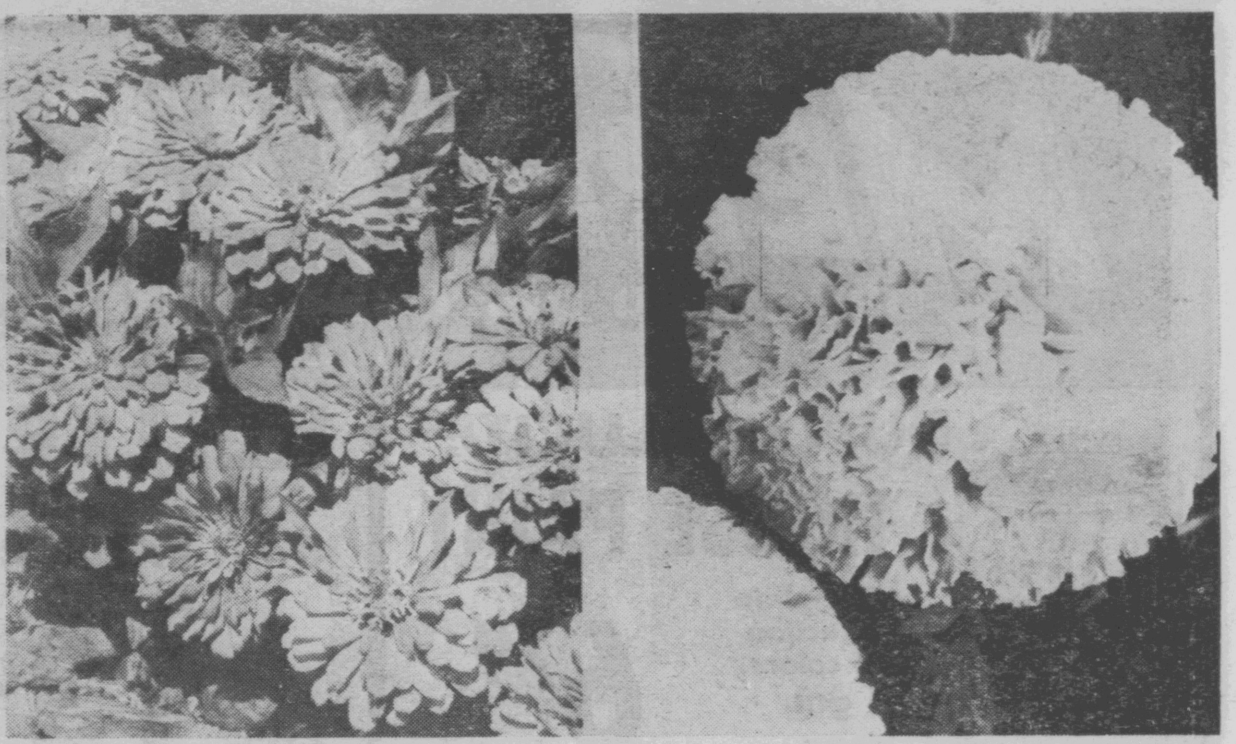
All-American Selections for 1972 were Carved Ivory Zinnia, an ivory-colored giant hybrid zinnia; Gold Galore Marigold, a sensational semi-dwarf golden yellow hybrid combining dwarf plant habit with large flower size; Circus hybrid petunia, a lovely salmon and white grandiflora double petunia, and Summer Carnival Hollyhocks, a vigorous large-flowered double hollyhocks in a beautiful mixture of colors.

All-America Selections for 1971 presented a magnificent array of flowers that awakened the public's interest in some lesser known classes.

Southern Belle, a giant hybrid hibiscus, is so large and so spectacular it has to be seen to be believed. A perennial that flowers the first year from seed (even in the north), it has white, rose and crimson blooms measuring a fantastic 10 inches across. Another delightful surprise among the award winners was Dianthus "Queen of Hearts," an everblooming radiant red with early-flowering characteristics. Silver Puffs Hollyhocks, a dwarf light pink hollyhocks, and Little Darling Snapdragon, a semi-dwarf butterfly type snapdragon, rounded off an outstanding year that proves flower breeders and hybridizers are more than ever alert to the needs of home gardeners.

BEFORE All-America Selections was organized in 1932 to make awards for outstanding new flowers and vegetables, gardeners had no way of knowing which flowers introduced each year were the best.

Today, All-American Selections has 30 trial gardens in the United States, Canada and Mexico, with a different judge at each location responsible for judging the flowers on the basis of performance in his own trials. Each flower variety submitted for trial is known only by a code number so the judges have no way of telling which breeder submitted the trial. Points are given to each flower and the totals counted to determine those which qualify for Bronze, Silver and Gold Medals.



THE TWO NEW garden flowers honored with All-America Selections recognition for 1973 are the Peter Pan Scarlet Zinnia, left, a silver medal award winner, and Happy Face Marigold, a bronze medal recipient.

One Apple Gives You One Pie

An apple so big that just one makes a whole pie.

An apple so unusual that the owner of the tree gets a registered certificate of its pedigree.

An apple that usually weighs in at two pounds and measures about five inches in diameter, and tastes great.

That's a quick description of the new Jumbo apple developed by Stark Brothers' Nurseries, the 157-year-old Louisiana, Mo., company with whom the late "plant wizard", Luther Burbank, was so long associated. But it doesn't quite tell the whole surprising story.

The fact is, this astonishing new apple — so big that most people think it's artificial until they hold it in their hands — grows on a dwarf tree that's only eight to 10 feet tall at maturity.

Other than this and its "grapefruit size", however, the Jumbo is not a novelty tree. The apple has deep red color and the shape of a Stark's Delicious, but the flavor is closer to that of a Winesap. The flesh is firm, and the apple is recommended for eating fresh or for baking.

The tree was introduced in the Spring of 1972 — in limited numbers — after 10 years of test-growing by Stark.

A Tip On Watering Your House Plants

Here's a tip from the American Water Works Assn. for people who have indoor plants or flowers:

Few house plants should be watered with cold water. This is why many indoor plants fail to bloom. To keep house plants in the best condition, let the water warm to room temperature before watering. You'll get better results.

The association is a scientific, non-profit organization formed to improve water service to North American communities.

It's A Critical Time For Care Of Lawns

Unlike colder areas, Marin lawns, except for the occasional Bermuda grass plots, never really sleep in winter. Nevertheless, spring, with its warmer temperatures, does mark a resurgence of growing activity for our grasses, thus making these next few weeks a key period for the care of your lawn.

For instance, now is a vital time for fertilizing. As the weather warms, application of a "slow release" plant food is recommended.

Foliage may have been scorched by winter weather. If so, no harm in removing it. A close clipping will reveal spritely new shoots. And with the insulating barrier of old vegetation gone, the soil warms rapidly, encouraging attractive fresh growth.

If your lawn is thin, or suffered from winter damage, or consists of varieties with which you are not particularly satisfied, overseed with top quality lawnseed. In most cases half the normal rate suffices.

Seed should contact soil; if the lawn is thatchy (has an accumulation of organic duff at the base of the sod), dig the thatch out with a power rake and sweep it up for the compost pile before overseeding.

Spring is also a time for weed control.

Pre-emergence crabgrass preventers must be spread before crabgrass sprouts. Crabgrass seed germinates when the soil temperature reaches about 60 degrees.

Preventers will not be needed in the shade, since crabgrass cannot survive there. Nor will a lawn made dense by proper fertilizaion, bolster seeding, and reasonably high mowing let crabgrass have much of a chance.

THE NEW BLUEGRASSES ARE TOUGH AND DENSE

Americans will have a host of fine new bluegrass varieties at their beck and call in 1973.

A number have been bred in the United States, several by hybridization at Rutgers University. Many others, though checked out in America, were bred in Europe.

The new cultivars can be received enthusiastically. Almost all are far more resistant to disease than was old-time bluegrass. Most varieties are dwarfish and quite dense, so that you have less of a weed problem with them even when the lawn is mowed low.

Here is a "social register" of the chief new lawn bluegrasses:

ADELPHI — one of the Rutgers triumphs, dark green and of intermediate texture.

ARBORETUM — A traditional type from Missouri, durable in southern parts of the bluegrass belt.

ARISTA — An European selection, a strong performer in seed blends.

BARON — A dark, bold "find" from Holland, quite low-growing.

BONNIEBLUE — A durable hybrid from Rutgers, like its cousin, Adelphi, very dark green.

FYLKING — An exquisite soft-green beauty from Sweden.

GALAXY — A splendid dark green hybrid from Rutgers, of intermediate texture.

MERION — The traditional standard of bluegrass excellence.

NUGGET — An outstanding selection from Alaska, especially dark in spring, densely carpet-like underfoot and quite wear-resistant.

PENNSTAR — An especially beautiful fine-textured selection like Fylking, making a felted sward when mowed low.

PRATO — A bright, perky selection from Europe, proving an excellent companion in seed mixtures.

SODCO — A striking slow-growing variety (that may need less mowing), derived from four bloodlines selected at Purdue University.

SYDSPORT — A brilliant, bold "rave" from Sweden, now finding favor in America.

One Variety Or A Mixture? Here Are The Pros And Cons

One must decide whether to have a single variety, a blend of varieties or a mixture of species in the lawn.

What are the pros and cons?

Crop breeders seek uniformity, so that all plants mature at the same time and are of identical quality. This facilitates harvest and handling.

But it also risks loss by epidemic, as when corn blight struck so severely the summer before last. If all plants are genetically alike contagion can spread like wildfire. A home owner takes this same sort of risk if he plants but a single variety. No matter how outstanding the variety, the chance that a new disease or insect pest may show up is always there.

Even Merion, the most acclaimed of the lawn bluegrasses, succumbs in certain regions to diseases that were "not around" when Merion was first released.

A BLEND OF similar varieties helps insure against complete devastation. No two bluegrasses are genetically identical, and likely not equally susceptible to a single race of disease or other ailment. Now that many excellent new varieties are available, it makes sense to blend two or three in a seeding mixture. Top varieties all look good, and they receive the same general care, — no added complications here.

Chance for survival should be better with a mixed population because even if one variety "does not cut the mustard" another may!

For the non-expert an even broader mutual aid scheme is available, — the combining of different species. Seedsmen offer successful lawnseed mixtures for a particular climate based upon long experience. Bluegrasses may form the backbone, but fine fescues extend adaptability further.

FESCUES DO better ordinarily than bluegrass in the shade, where habitat is dry and on soils that are infertile. Thus a bluegrass — fescue seed mixture supplies bluegrass for the better sites, fescues for poorer locations.

And mayb some of the new perennial ryegrasses should be included because they start so quickly, help make cover until the slower bluegrasses gain a foothold. This could be important on slopes.

Thus a lawnseed mixture has much to recommend it for general planting. The more experienced lawnsman might prefer a blend of varieties, — say several bluegrasses for sunny lawns or several fescues for shaded ones.

WHERE A FAST start is imperative, the new perennial ryegrasses should be considered.

Colonial bentgrasses are good for low-mowed lawns in humid climates.

No doubt the purist can get along nicely with but a single of the new varieties, selected as these are for disease-tolerance and vigor. But the average person is usually better off with blends and mixtures. It is a matter of the old adage of not putting all your eggs in one basket!

New Method Of Thatch Control Is Under Study

It may be possible soon to control thatch, a major lawn problem, with biological materials. But Michigan State University turf expert David P. Martin says more research is needed.

He told the American Society of Agronomy that thus far the best way to get rid of thatch is with a time-consuming mechanical dethatching process.

Thatch is an accumulation of dead leaves, stems and roots that increases lawn disease and drought problems.

Seeking something that would "eliminate thatch naturally," Martin injected enzymes and a lignin precursor (ferulic acid) into the thatch. He reported this cut decomposition time by 5 per cent.

"This might be fast enough to keep thatch from ever building up," he related.

Brown Lawn Spots And Their Causes

Lawns develop brown spots for a variety of reasons —from compaction or fertilizer burn, from fungus or sod webworm.

If you have this trouble with your lawn, first try by your own appraisal to determine if soil is compacted, and if you decide it is, use a spiker or corer to remedy the trouble. If compaction doesn't seem likely, ask your nurseryman for a spray to kill sod webworms.

Chances are good that one or another of these remedies will work.

THE STATE OF OREGON is responsible for something like 40 per cent of all the grass seed planted and produced in the United States. And almost all of the country's rye grass seed comes from the 80-mile-long Willamette Valley between Portland and Eugene. Giant combines are shown harvesting the delicate crop near Lebanon in the heart of the grass seed production area.

Seeking something that would "eliminate thatch naturally," Martin injected enzymes and a lignin precursor (ferulic acid) into the thatch. He reported this cut decomposition time by 5 per cent.

"This might be fast enough to keep thatch from ever building up," he related.

THE STATE OF OREGON is responsible for something like 40 per cent of all the grass seed planted and produced in the United States. And almost all of the country's rye grass seed comes from the 80-mile-long Willamette Valley between Portland and Eugene. Giant combines are shown harvesting the delicate crop near Lebanon in the heart of the grass seed production area.

Good Start Is Key To Greening Of A Yard

A new lawn can be planted with greatest confidence if the seedbed has been cultivated, mixing in plenty of fertilizer (and lime, too, if a soil test shows acidity).

It is possible to scorch old vegetation chemically, scratch the surface (as with a powered thinning machine) and then seed. But seed stands the best chance of settling to a good site for sprouting and rooting among loose soil chunks.

SOIL CULTIVATION may be by a rotary tiller (almost no one seems to spade sizable areas anymore) or a tractor with cultivating and leveling implements can be rented.

Don't rework the soil more than necessary to get it level, for repeated tillage pulverizes soil aggregates and destroys structure. A dusty soilbed "melts" upon first watering to an impervious surface which seals off the rootzone from air and causes future water to run off rather than soak into the lawn.

Use a lawn spreader to sow seed uniformly. About three pounds of a bluegrass-fine fescue blend is all that is needed for a thousand square feet — or only half this much of tiny-seeded varieties such as Highland and other colonial bentgrasses.

EVEN IF YOU are in moist "bentgrass country," a little bluegrass and fine fescue is suggested along with the bentgrass; but mow low and water and fertilize to favor the bent.

The new perennial ryegrasses are not only attractive, but sprout quickly; they are good in seed blends for slopes that must be grassed-over in a hurry.

If possible, mulch the new seeding. Any loose material that conserves moisture and protects the soil will suffice.

Garden centers usually carry woven nettings or mulch mats (such as of excelsior); or you can even use plastic if you are willing to lift it any time temperature approaches 100 degrees (as it will infrequently on a sunny day).

AROUND HOME you might find dried lawn clippings or chipped twigs. Stringy sphagnum peatmoss can be used, also.

If the soilbed is kept moist by light sprinklings and weather is warm, the seeding should sport a fuzz of green in two or three weeks.

Natural mulches need not be removed, but, of course, a plastic covering is another matter.

Roots of new grass grow about as much as the tops, so when the grass is an inch or two tall watering can become less frequent.

As soon as the grass leaves turn a bit floppy, two to three inches tall, it is time for mowing. From then on mow each time the lawn exceeds its customary height (usually about three-quarter inch for bentgrass, one and a half to two inches for bluegrasses and fescues) by 50 per cent.

After a few mowings, the lawn will be well enough established to endure weed treatments, including spring crabgrass preventers.

Longer Day, Taller Grass

Owners of blue grass lawns will have noticed that the grass behaves differently in autumn (when day length shortens) compared to spring (when day lengthens). In one test Merion bluegrass had leaves more than twice as long at 16 hours of daylight as at eight hours, and the leaves were a bit wider. (On the other hand there was more branching under the shorter day length). No wonder that mowing and weed problems are burdensome in spring!

To cope with spring mowing choose a lawn mower with sufficient capacity for peak needs.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Booklet With Advice In Non-Technical Terms

"Home Lawn Care, 145 Questions and Answers," by Melvin J. Robey, is a 44-page, softcovered, six by nine inch booklet containing easy-to-understand answers to the most asked questions on lawn care, including over 45 illustrations and tables.

Questions asked are presented informally and the answers are written in non-technical terms so the home owner can understand and apply them to his lawn.

The booklet is divided into nine chapters dealing with all phases of home lawn care. Chapters included are: facts on fertilizers and their use, watering your lawn, mowing practices, weed, disease, and insect problems, selecting the right grass for your lawn, seeding rates and procedures, and maintenance tips.

Some of the questions you will find answered are:

What type grasses will do best in the shade? Is it necessary to water after fertilizing my lawn? When is the best time to seed a lawn? Is it necessary to remove the clippings from my lawn after each mowing? How dangerous are insecticides to the person applying them?

The author understands the needs of the homeowner and expresses his answers so one does not have to be an agriculturist to understand him.

The down to earth approach used makes this a useful tool for the homeowner who wants his lawn to be the best in the neighborhood. For a copy of the booklet send $1 plus 25 cents for mailing and handling to "Home Lawn Care," Post Office Box 2126, West Lafayette, Ind., 47906.

Some Guidelines For Watering, Feeding, Mowing And Weeding

An age-old problem in lawn care is how often to water, for wherever you see a lawn that is lush throughout the summer, you'll find a gardener with an efficient watering system.

Whether the system was devised by trial and error, or scientifically developed, considerations involved included rate of water penetration, water capacity of the soil, depth of topsoil, depth of grass roots, and the daily weather conditions.

Because your neighbor's lawn thrives on frequent waterings is no reason for you to assume yours will respond similarly.

SOILS VARY. Sandy soils make water disappear almost upon application. With heavy clay soils, an average sprinkler will put on water faster than the soil will take it. You'll end up with water standing in pools or a run-off into the driveway or flower beds before the soil is satisfied.

Deep waterings are recommended by nurserymen — whether once or twice a week. Frequent shallow waterings promote shallow rooting and a build-up of salinity because of the lack of leaching. Shallow waterings also encourage shallow-rooted weeds, compaction and an environment favorable to disease, as well as a greater total water loss.

When you see grass beginning to turn yellowish or pale green, chances are that an application of lawn food will get it growing fast and green again.

Your nurseryman has fertilizers designed for the various types of lawns in your area. These range from quick-acting nitrogen to the slower-relasing, balanced, fertilizers.

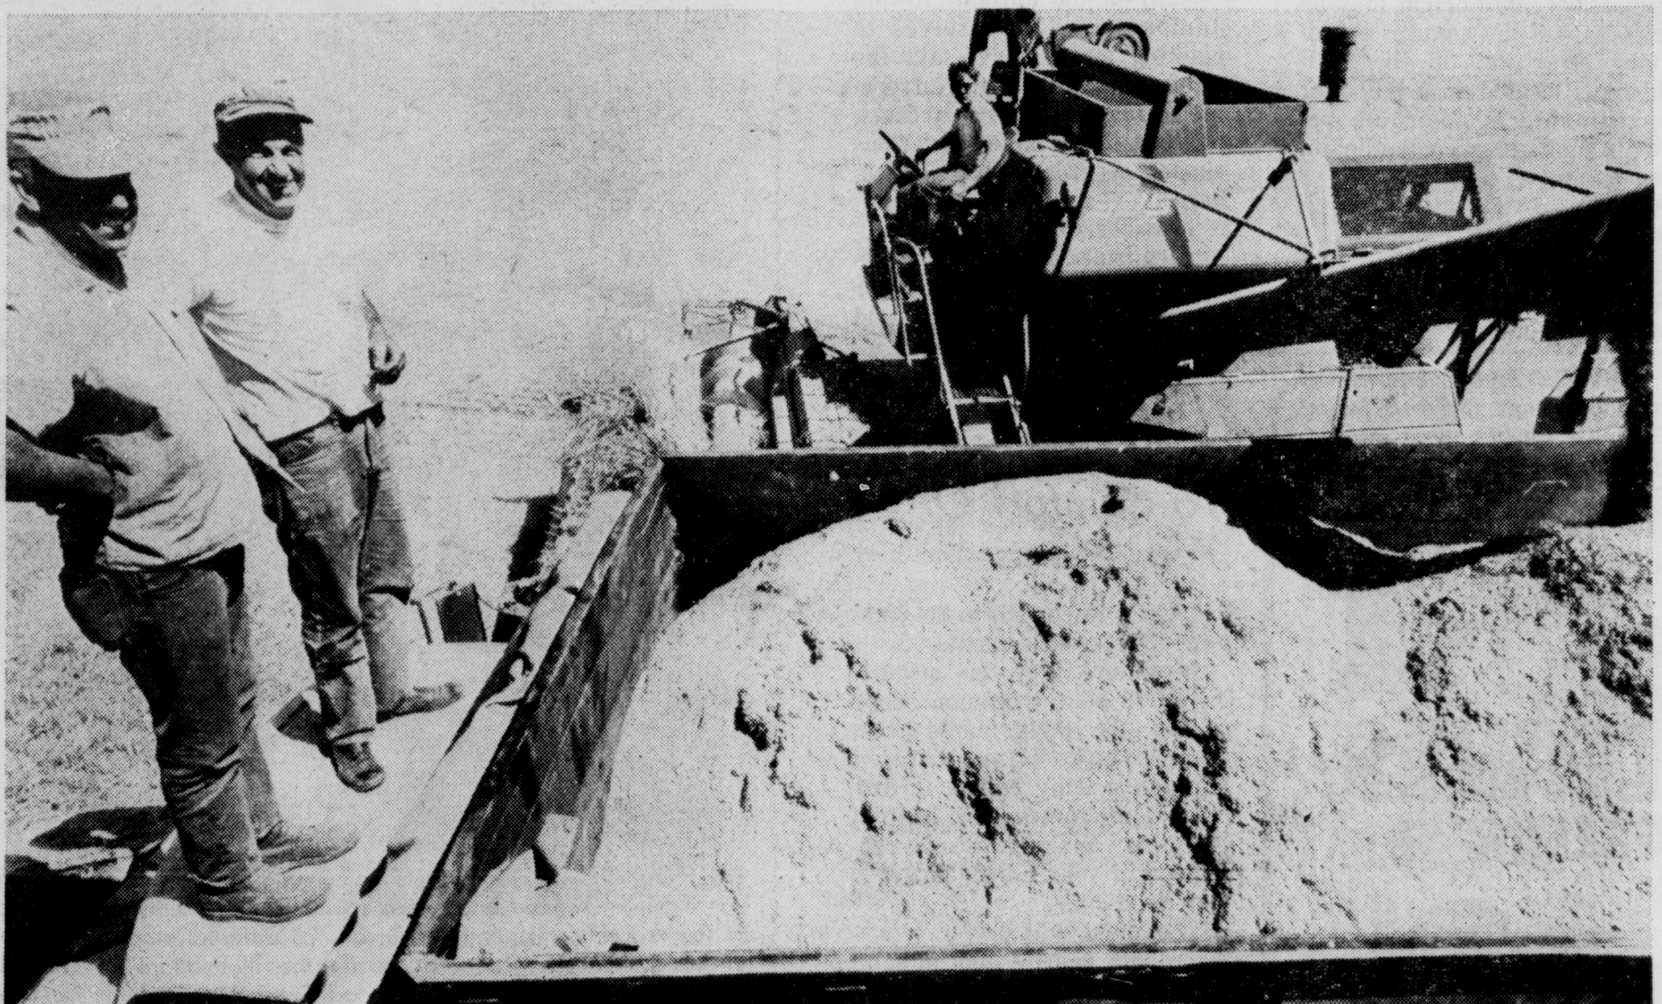
MANY GARDENERS feed in lighter amounts as often as every month. Others go by the calendar and fertilize lawns every 90 days. Certain grasses have special requirements, and a nurseryman can assist you in establishing the proper diet for your lawn.

When it comes to the question of how high to cut the grass, keep in mind not all grasses respond to the same cutting height.

Creepers such as bent and Bermuda grasses should be mowed low to keep the runners from piling up and creating a layer of brown thatch. Bluegrasses, for the most part, should be mowed to one and a half to two inches, as is the case where you are using a blend or mixture of grasses in your lawn.

With Dichondra, the more traffic it endures, the smaller, tighter and more compact the leaves grow. Frequent lawn mowing has the same effect. Where traffic is light and feeding is ample, and the Dichondra is lush and leafy, frequent mowings will give you an even texture. In these areas, infrequent mowing may leave a noticeable scalped appearance for a short time.

A final reminder is that different grasses (and weeds) require different chemicals for control. Repeated applications are generally required.



THE BROTHERS Leo and Verl Nofsiger inspect some of the fruit of the grass seed harvest on the more than 3,000 acres planted to that crop by their company. For Oregon farmers, grass seed is more than a 30 million dollar annual crop. Seed is shipped form the state for hundreds of thousands of lawns, pastures, parks, golf courses, school grounds, recreation sites, etc., across the country and abroad.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plant Canna Lilies now for flags of color during the warm season. There are also dwarf forms available. Set out bulbs or plants in full sun.

✓ Grow your own vegetables. Plant now: beets, carrots, lettuce, endive, onion, turnips and radishes. Shopping may turn up transplants of cabbage, cauliflower, swiss chard and Brussels sprouts.

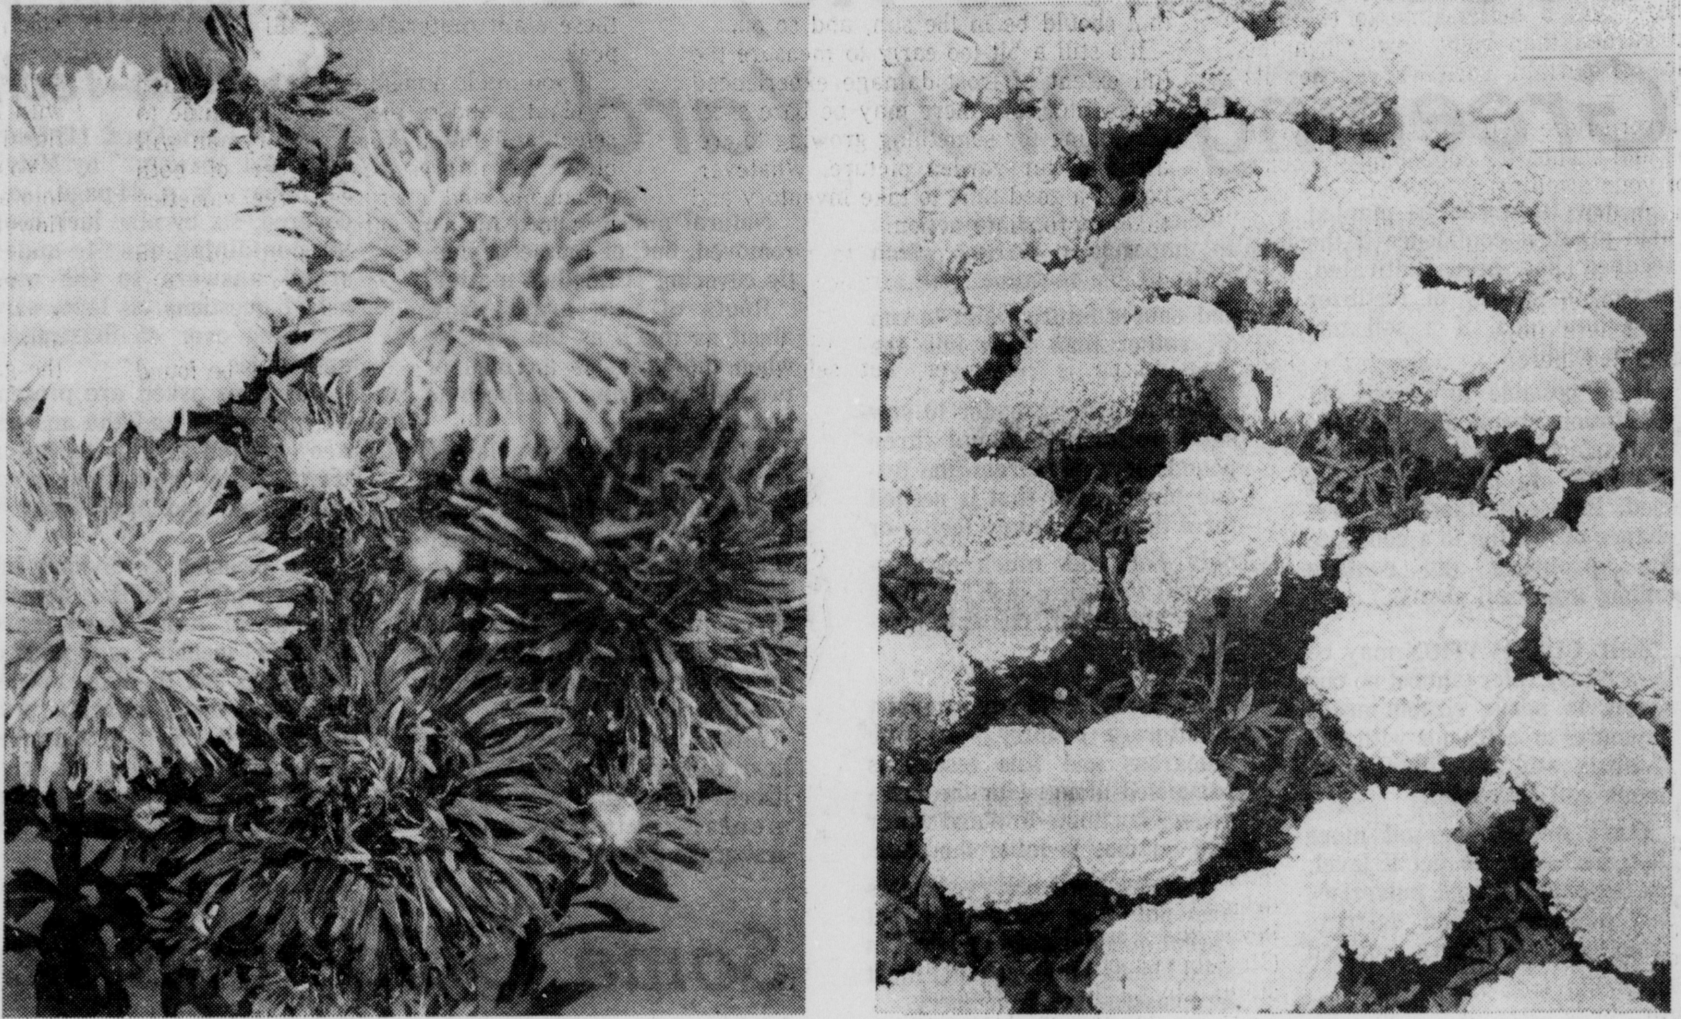
✓ Established roses may be fed this month. Wait to feed newly-planted roses until they have completely established themselves in the garden, like early summer.

✓ Rooted cuttings of Carnations are available in nursery containers for planting now.

✓ Select Azaleas and Camellias while they are in bloom. A visit to your local nursery this week will reveal many varieties — in a lovely range of colors and flower forms — are in flower, allowing you to select exactly the shade you desire.

✓ Check your garden for areas that have suffered extensive wear and tear from winter rains, and take corrective action with soil, sand, stakes, etc.

NEW BY BURPEE



ALWAYS ONE of the busiest of the developers of new garden flowers is the W. Atlee Burpee Co. and 1973 is no exception. Heading the list of '73 introductions, at top, is a new class of giant annual asters called Totem Poles, with fully-double, shaggy flowers that measure up to seven inches across and are supported by extra strong stems. "There is nothing among the whole aster class to match their spectacular size or to beat them for decoration as a bedding background plant," claims Burpee. Mixed colors only are offered at this time. Another Burpee newcomer, bottom photo, is the odorless marigold, a mixed color giant of carnation-type flowers from which is missing the usual tangy aroma of the foliage, making it particularly suited to indoor arrangements. The double flowers measure four inches across, and they stand about two and a half feet high. Burpee catalogs can be obtained by writing the company's branch at Riverside, Calif., 92502.

If It's Privacy You Want, Then Plant Accordingly

Planting for privacy has always been a factor in landscape design, but never a more important one than it is today, when the emphasis is on outdoor living.

The properly screened backyard adds to the enjoyment of the family's summertime living. Screens help create space for outdoor activities for condominium dwellers and residents of mobile homes — and afford shelter from the encroachment of civilization, allowing for maximum privacy and relaxation.

HOW BEST TO achieve privacy epends upon the size of the individual's property.

For physical and aesthetic reasons, a bare fence is unsatisfactory, generally, because it seldom reaches high enough to hide the view from next door — and its stark lines leave much to be desired. A combination of fencing and plant material is functional and pleasing to the eye.

In considering the height of a screen, several factors are involved. On level land in a neighborhood of single-story dwellings, a six foot height provides adequate privacy and protection. More height may be necessary if the home is a two-story structure, or the residence is located on a hill — or partitioning is desirable between multi-story condominium units.

These are things to be discussed with your nurseryman or landscaper, who can show you the alternatives of both plan and plant.

FOR TALL SCREENS, in confined space, upright-growing Carolina Cherry, Podacarpus, certain Viburnums, and Eugenia are worthy of consideration; as are English Laurel, Xylosma, many Pittosporums and Photinias for large-growing choices to provide a wide or spreading screen of privacy. Many will also take shearing to contain them within the desired bounds, if limited space is a consideration.

Many of the upright-growing Junipers lend themselves to planting for privacy, says the California Assn. of Nurserymen. They are ideal accents, too, boasting foliages in various shades of green, blue and silver.

Strawberry Tree with its decorative fruits, Oleander with its continuous and bright summer bloom, Pineapple Guava and red-berried Cotoneasters are also excellent.

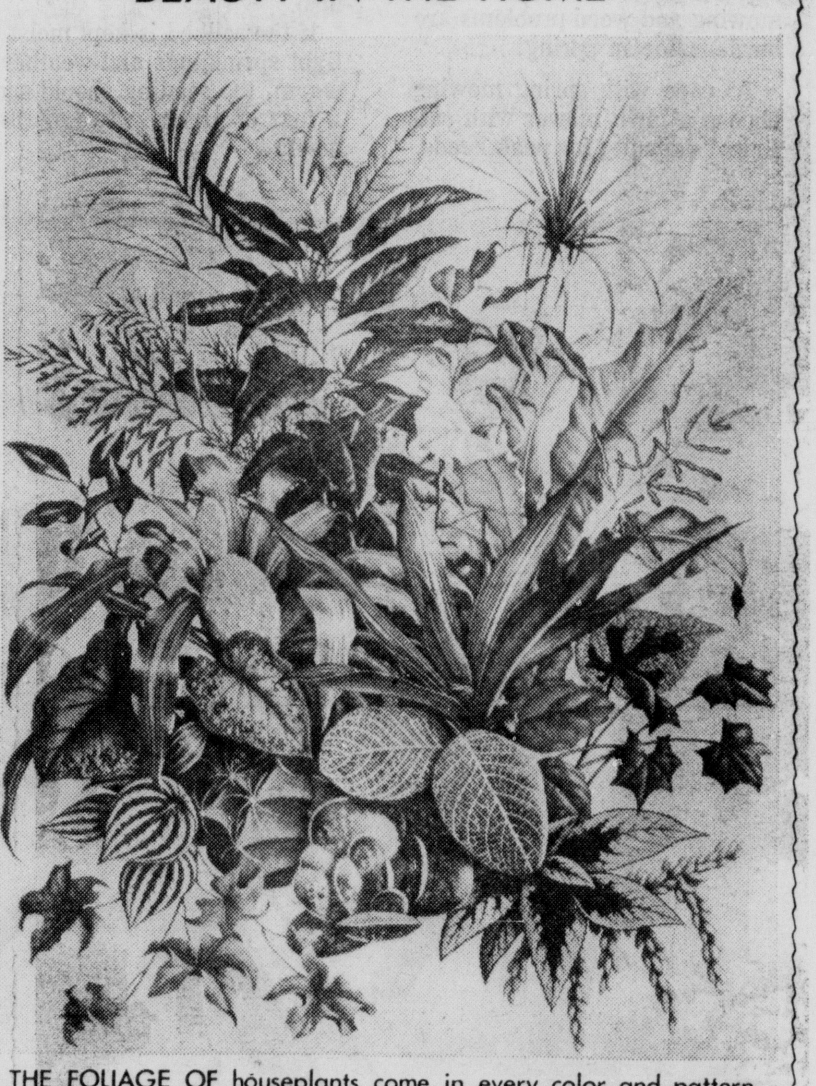
Light Essential To Comfort Of Your Plants

Light is important to the comfort of your houseplants.

Keep in mind the original home of many common house plants - the shady, humid forest floor, with light diffused through a leafy ceiling to protect them from intense heat. It isn't easy to simulate such conditions in your home, but it is not impossible.

The plant will prefer semishade with nearby light in summer. Don't overexpose the plant to sun. In fall and winter, the slowest growing period, move the plant nearer to the light source.

BEAUTY IN THE HOME



THE FOLIAGE OF houseplants come in every color and pattern, varying from the red and green caladium, lower left, to the spikes of the dracaena, upper right. In all, 23 different plants are shown in this painting reproduced among the illustrations in "Foliage House Plants" by James Underwood Crockett, a volume from the Time-Life Encyclopedia of Gardening series published by Time-Life Books. The price: $6.95. The most popular indoor plant? Still the Philodendron, although it has its challengers.

It's A Critical Time For Care Of Lawns

Unlike colder areas, Marin lawns, except for the occasional Bermuda grass plots, never really sleep in winter. Nevertheless, spring, with its warmer temperatures, does mark a resurgence of growing activity for our grasses, thus making these next few weeks a key period for the care of your lawn.

For instance, now is a vital time for fertilizing. As the weather warms, application of a "slow release" plant food is recommended.

Foliage may have been scorched by winter weather. If so, no harm in removing it. A close clipping will reveal spritely new shoots. And with the insulating barrier of old vegetation gone, the soil warms rapidly, encouraging attractive fresh growth.

If your lawn is thin, or suffered from winter damage, or consists of varieties with which you are not particularly satisfied, overseed with top quality lawnseed. In most cases half the normal rate suffices.

Seed should contact soil; if the lawn is thatchy (has an accumulation of organic duff at the base of the sod), dig the thatch out with a power rake and sweep it up for the compost pile before overseeding.

Spring is also a time for weed control.

Pre-emergence crabgrass preventers must be spread before crabgrass sprouts. Crabgrass seed germinates when the soil temperature reaches about 60 degrees.

Preventers will not be needed in the shade, since crabgrass cannot survive there. Nor will a lawn made dense by proper fertilizaion, bolster seeding, and reasonably high mowing let crabgrass have much of a chance.

One Variety Or A Mixture? Here Are The Pros And Cons

One must decide whether to have a single variety, a blend of varieties or a mixture of species in the lawn.

What are the pros and cons?

Crop breeders seek uniformity, so that all plants mature at the same time and are of identical quality. This facilitates harvest and handling.

But it also risks loss by epidemic, as when corn blight struck so severely the summer before last. If all plants are genetically alike contagion can spread like wildfire. A home owner takes this same sort of risk if he plants but a single variety. No matter how outstanding the variety, the chance that a new disease or insect pest may show up is always there.

Even Merion, the most acclaimed of the lawn bluegrasses, succumbs in certain regions to diseases that were "not around" when Merion was first released.

A BLEND OF similar varieties helps insure against complete devastation. No two bluegrasses are genetically identical, and likely not equally susceptible to a single race of disease or other ailment. Now that many excellent new varieties are available, it makes sense to blend two or three in a seeding mixture. Top varieties all look good, and they receive the same general care, — no added complications here.

Chance for survival should be better with a mixed population because even if one variety "does not cut the mustard" another may!

For the non-expert an even broader mutual aid scheme is available, — the combining of different species. Seedsmen offer successful lawnseed mixtures for a particular climate based upon long experience. Bluegrasses may form the backbone, but fine fescues extend adaptability further.

FESCUES DO better ordinarily than bluegrass in the shade, where habitat is dry and on soils that are infertile. Thus a bluegrass — fescue seed mixture supplies bluegrass for the better sites, fescues for poorer locations.

And mayb some of the new perennial ryegrasses should be included because they start so quickly, help make cover until the slower bluegrasses gain a foothold. This could be important on slopes.

Thus a lawnseed mixture has much to recommend it for general planting. The more experienced lawnsman might prefer a blend of varieties, — say several bluegrasses for sunny lawns or several fescues for shaded ones.

WHERE A FAST start is imperative, the new perennial ryegrasses should be considered.

Colonial bentgrasses are good for low-mowed lawns in humid climates.

No doubt the purist can get along nicely with but a single of the new varieties, selected as these are for disease-tolerance and vigor. But the average person is usually better off with blends and mixtures. It is a matter of the old adage of not putting all your eggs in one basket!

Brown Lawn Spots And Their Causes

Lawns develop brown spots for a variety of reasons —from compaction or fertilizer burn, from fungus or sod webworm.

If you have this trouble with your lawn, first try by your own appraisal to determine if soil is compacted, and if you decide it is, use a spiker or corer to remedy the trouble. If compaction doesn't seem likely, ask your nurseryman for a spray to kill sod webworms.

Chances are good that one or another of these remedies will work.

THE NEW BLUEGRASSES ARE TOUGH AND DENSE

Americans will have a host of fine new bluegrass varieties at their beck and call in 1973.

A number have been bred in the United States, several by hybridization at Rutgers University. Many others, though checked out in America, were bred in Europe.

The new cultivars can be received enthusiastically. Almost all are far more resistant to disease than was old-time bluegrass. Most varieties are dwarfish and quite dense, so that you have less of a weed problem with them even when the lawn is mowed low.

Here is a "social register" of the chief new lawn bluegrasses:

ADELPHI — one of the Rutgers triumphs, dark green and of intermediate texture.

ARBORETUM — A traditional type from Missouri, durable in southern parts of the bluegrass belt.

ARISTA — An European selection, a strong performer in seed blends.

BARON — A dark, bold "find" from Holland, quite low-growing.

BONNIEBLUE — A durable hybrid from Rutgers, like its cousin, Adelphi, very dark green.

FYLKING — An exquisite soft-green beauty from Sweden.

GALAXY — A splendid dark green hybrid from Rutgers, of intermediate texture.

MERION — The traditional standard of bluegrass excellence.

NUGGET — An outstanding selection from Alaska, especially dark in spring, densely carpet-like underfoot and quite wear-resistant.

PENNSTAR — An especially beautiful fine-textured selection like Fylking, making a felted sward when mowed low.

PRATO — A bright, perky selection from Europe, proving an excellent companion in seed mixtures.

SODCO — A striking slow-growing variety (that may need less mowing), derived from four bloodlines selected at Purdue University.

SYDSPORT — A brilliant, bold "rave" from Sweden, now finding favor in America.

New Method Of Thatch Control Is Under Study

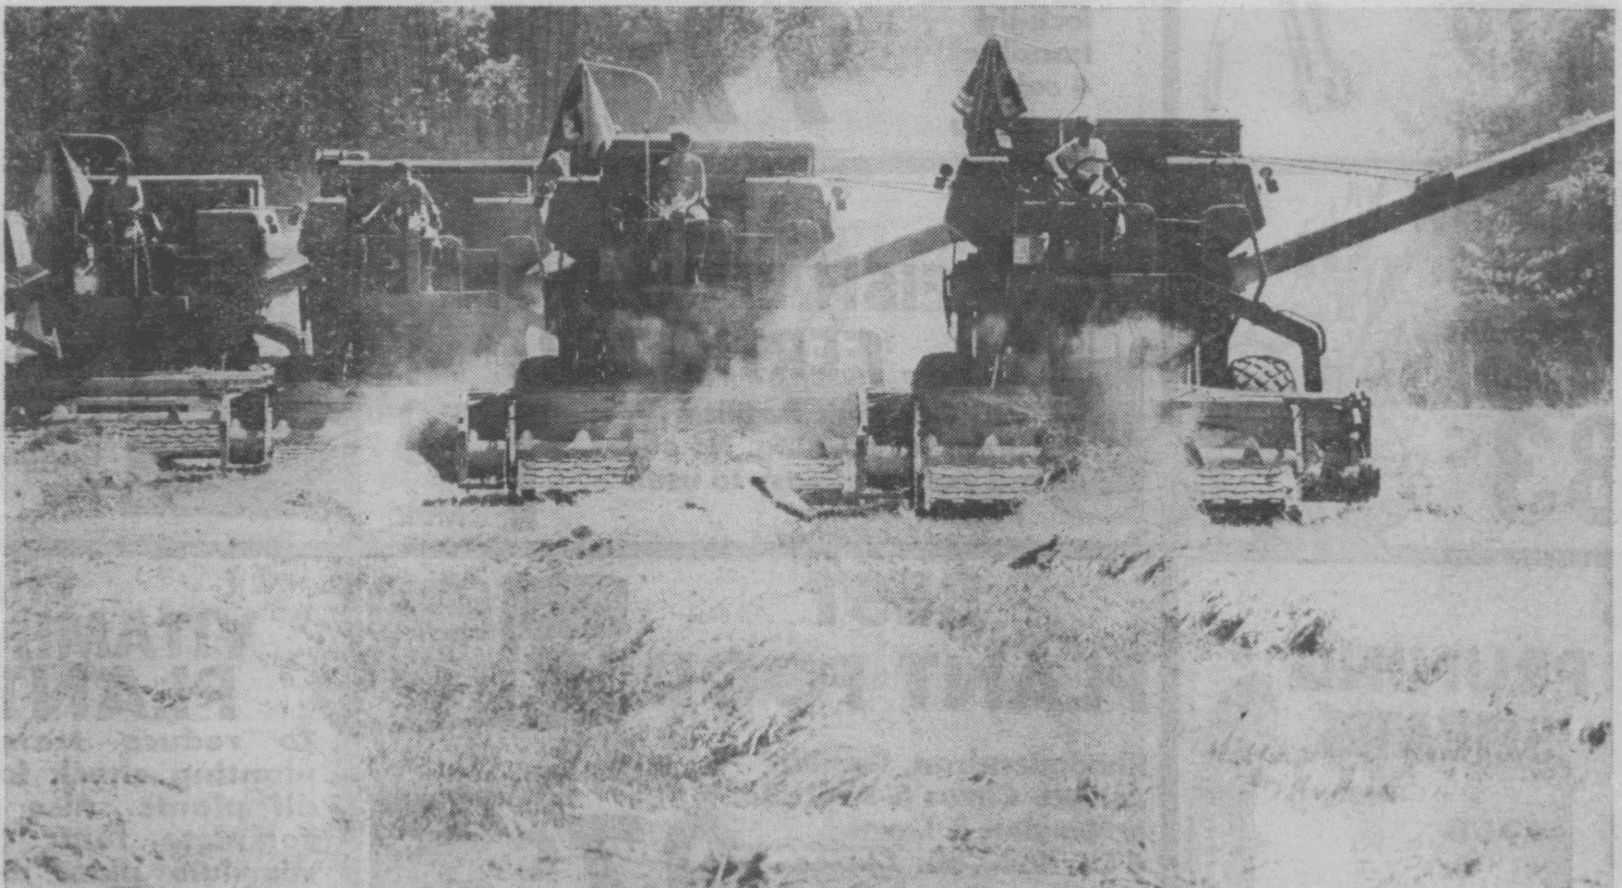
It may be possible soon to control thatch, a major lawn problem, with biological materials. But Michigan State University turf expert David P. Martin says more research is needed.

He told the American Society of Agronomy that thus far the best way to get rid of thatch is with a time-consuming mechanical dethatching process.

Thatch is an accumulation of dead leaves, stems and roots that increases lawn disease and drought problems.

Seeking something that would "eliminate thatch naturally," Martin injected enzymes and a lignin precursor (ferulic acid) into the thatch. He reported this cut decomposition time by 5 per cent.

"This might be fast enough to keep thatch from ever building up," he related.



THE STATE OF OREGON is responsible for something like 40 per cent of all the grass seed planted and produced in the United States. And almost all of the country's rye grass seed comes from the 80-mile-long Willamette Valley between Portland and Eugene. Giant combines are shown harvesting the delicate crop near Lebanon in the heart of the grass seed production area.

IT'S A GOOD TIME FOR A GARDEN INVENTORY

There isn't a better time to evaluate your garden than right now, when the choice of certain varieties reaches its peak.

Nurseries are well-stocked with myriad trees and shrubs for enhancing the beauty of your dwelling or garden.

In gardens large or small, young or old, there are certain to be a few errors that need to be rectified — tall specimens where shorter plants are needed, foliage plants where flowering ones would be appreciated more, or shrubs in the shade that should be in the sun, and so on.

It's still a bit too early to measure the full extent of frost damage experienced this winter, but there may be bare spots screaming for something growing to create a better garden picture. Whatever, now is a good time to take inventory and take appropriate action.

It's an excellent time to plant such deciduous items as fruit trees, flowering trees, grapevines, berry plants, artichokes, rhubarb and roses. The bareroot season is just over, but selections of these plant materials are still near their peak.

If you made a mental note last summer to plant a shade tree, now is the time to select and plant. Your nurseryman will offer an impressive number of both deciduous and evergreen tree varieties best for Marin conditions.

Dwarf fruit trees are popular, and with more interest in growing-your-own fruit today, demand will undoubtedly exceed supply.

Azaleas and Camellias are to be found blooming in nurseries right now, and are easily transplanted into the garden. Nurseries also feature Rhododendrons laden with flower buds. These will unfold their floral beauty during the blooming season.

You can change a drab garden spot into a thing of beauty, simply by planting flowering trees that bloom in spring and summer.

You'll find a wealth of spring-time variety from flowering plums, crabapples and cherries. Such performers brighten the garden, and the entire neighborhood.

The Lenten Rose: Delightful, Different

Sometimes people miss out on the most useful and handsome plants that can be grown in their locale — because they just haven't heard about them.

This is often the case with the Lenten Rose, a beautiful off-season performer that deserves to be better known.

Polished, dark green leaves never do a disappearing act. Flowers that look like perfect single roses. Profuse bloom from January to April. The ability to serve as distinctive ground cover beneath trees and shrubs; elegant go-togethers with Ferns, Azaleas, Rhododendrons or Camellias. Undemanding of disposition where culture is concerned.

THESE are only some of the virtues of the Lenten Rose, a plant for all-year beauty in shady areas of the landscape.

The fact that the Lenten Rose (Helleborus Orientalis) can send up its white, pink or purplish flowers without benefit of sun makes it a sound choice for difficult places where the sun never hits. The Christmas Rose (Helleborus Niger), which is similar to the Lenten Rose except in its earlier blooming time, has the same ability to bloom in deep shade.

This means that, by interplanting the two, you can enjoy flowers from October to April.

THE PLANTS grow about 14 inches tall and spread graciously — in clumps of about two feet across. Flowers, which rise up on single, leafy stems, are about two and a half inches across, and are superior for cutting for people-pleasing indoor arrangements.

Both of the so-called Roses grow best if left undisturbed. Give them a permanent place in the garden and let them take care of themselves. They don't require a lot of water. Though they do best in cooler summer climates, they tolerate frost and can take a fair amount of sun as long as there is plenty of organic matter in the soil.

The plants like a slightly acid soil. Set them out with a planter mix formulated for Azaleas and Camellias for best results.

DADDY OF THE GLADS

BIG DADDY is the name of this towering gladiolus, and it's a 1973 All-American selection. It is also an ego-builder, easy to grow, and achieving a height of six feet or more, with profusions of creamy-peach spikes and immense individual florets. Gladiolus plantings can be continued into the late spring.

Beauty In Container For Porch, Patio

Question: If a Gardenia is such a lovely shrub in the landscape, why would you want to grow it in a container?

Answer: So you can enjoy its beauty, and fragrant blossoms, up close — on the porch or patio.

This is a chief reason to grow most plants in a container, so their individual characteristics can be enjoyed close by — whether in the porch or the outdoor living area. Californians spend many summer hours outdoors, and by having plants in tubs, or other containers, the outdoor living area is greatly enhanced. The plants can be moved about, and become decorative pieces — as well as conversation pieces.

Garden color is something Californians enjoy throughout the year.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen reports there are many summer-flowering shrubs which can be used to decorate the outdoor living area — especially in containers to showcase the beauty and color of the individual specimens.

What are some of the colorful choices?

In addition to Gardenias, the red-blooming Bottle Brush, Lantana, and Oleanders are outstanding candidates — especially in hot, sunny locations. Oleanders are available in shades of pink, red, and white — the plants provide continuous bloom to enjoy. This is true, too, of Hibiscus and Lantana — which bloom in many appealing colors.

Hibiscus varieties include several different flower forms — big singws, frilly ones, multipetalled types and doubles. Your nursery will have an assortment of colors and flower forms from which to choose, ranging from white, shades of pink and red, to soft yellow to rich golds.

And, don't overlook Roses as a source of scintillating color during the summer months.

The Numbers On The Bags Of Fertilizer

It is a good idea t buy a specific type of fertilizer to better satisfy your garden.

The numbers on the fertilizer bag will direct you.

Suppose it says 5-10-5, which is a good all-purpose formula. What does it mean?

The first figure means 5 per cent is nitrogen; 10 per cent is phosphorus; and the final 5 is potassium. If you have a 100-pound bag, there would be five, 10 and five pounds of these elements respectively. The remainder is a spreading agent.

Keep It Moist

Most house plants prefer high humidity, so pick a place where several plants may be grouped. The plants emit water vapor from the soil and leaves, creating a more natural environment. Moisten the air with a fine spray of water occasionally.

Good Start Is Key To Greening Of A Yard

A new lawn can be planted with greatest confidence if the seedbed has been cultivated, mixing in plenty of fertilizer (and lime, too, if a soil test shows acidity).

It is possible to scorch old vegetation chemically, scratch the surface (as with a powered thinning machine) and then seed. But seed stands the best chance of settling to a good site for sprouting and rooting among loose soil chunks.

SOIL CULTIVATION may be by a rotary tiller (almost no one seems to spade sizable areas anymore) or a tractor with cultivating and leveling implements can be rented.

Don't rework the soil more than necessary to get it level, for repeated tillage pulverizes soil aggregates and destroys structure. A dusty soilbed "melts" upon first watering to an impervious surface which seals off the rootzone from air and causes future water to run off rather than soak into the lawn.

Use a lawn spreader to sow seed uniformly. About three pounds of a bluegrass-fine fescue blend is all that is needed for a thousand square feet — or only half this much of tiny-seeded varieties such as Highland and other colonial bentgrasses.

EVEN IF YOU are in moist "bentgrass country," a little bluegrass and fine fescue is suggested along with the bentgrass; but mow low and water and fertilize to favor the bent.

The new perennial ryegrasses are not only attractive, but sprout quickly; they are good in seed blends for slopes that must be grassed-over in a hurry.

If possible, mulch the new seeding. Any loose material that conserves moisture and protects the soil will suffice.

Garden centers usually carry woven nettings or mulch mats (such as of excelsior); or you can even use plastic if you are willing to lift it any time temperature approaches 100 degrees (as it will infrequently on a sunny day).

AROUND HOME you might find dried lawn clippings or chipped twigs. Stringy sphagnum peatmoss can be used, also.

If the soilbed is kept moist by light sprinklings and weather is warm, the seeding should sport a fuzz of green in two or three weeks.

Natural mulches need not be removed, but, of course, a plastic covering is another matter.

Roots of new grass grow about as much as the tops, so when the grass is an inch or two tall watering can become less frequent.

As soon as the grass leaves turn a bit floppy, two to three inches tall, it is time for mowing. From then on mow each time the lawn exceeds its customary height (usually about three-quarter inch for bentgrass, one and a half to two inches for bluegrasses and fescues) by 50 per cent.

After a few mowings, the lawn will be well enough established to endure weed treatments, including spring crabgrass preventers.

Longer Day, Taller Grass

Owners of blue grass lawns will have noticed that the grass behaves differently in autumn (when day length shortens) compared to spring (when day lengthens). In one test Merion bluegrass had leaves more than twice as long at 16 hours of daylight as at eight hours, and the leaves were a bit wider. (On the other hand there was more branching under the shorter day length). No wonder that mowing and weed problems are burdensome in spring!

To cope with spring mowing choose a lawn mower with sufficient capacity for peak needs.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Booklet With Advice In Non-Technical Terms

"Home Lawn Care, 145 Questions and Answers," by Melvin J. Robey, is a 44-page, soft-covered, six by nine inch booklet containing easy-to-understand answers to the most asked questions on lawn care, including over 45 illustrations and tables.

Questions asked are presented informally and the answers are written in non-technical terms so the home owner can understand and apply them to his lawn.

The booklet is divided into nine chapters dealing with all phases of home lawn care. Chapters included are: facts on fertilizers and their use, watering your lawn, mowing practices, weed, disease, and insect problems, selecting the right grass for your lawn, seeding rates and procedures, and maintenance tips.

Some of the questions you will find answered are:

What type grasses will do best in the shade? Is it necessary to water after fertilizing my lawn? When is the best time to seed a lawn? Is it necessary to remove the clippings from my lawn after each mowing? How dangerous are insecticides to the person applying them?

The author understands the needs of the homeowner and expresses his answers so one does not have to be an agriculturist to understand him.

The down to earth approach used makes this a useful tool for the homeowner who wants his lawn to be the best in the neighborhood. For a copy of the booklet send $1 plus 25 cents for mailing and handling to "Home Lawn Care," Post Office Box 2126, West Lafayette, Ind., 47906.

Some Guidelines For Watering, Feeding, Mowing And Weeding

An age-old problem in lawn care is how often to water, for wherever you see a lawn that is lush throughout the summer, you'll find a gardener with an efficient watering system.

Whether the system was devised by trial and error, or scientifically developed, considerations involved included rate of water penetration, water capacity of the soil, depth of topsoil, depth of grass roots, and the daily weather conditions.

Because your neighbor's lawn thrives on frequent waterings is no reason for you to assume yours will respond similarly.

SOILS VARY. Sandy soils make water disappear almost upon application. With heavy clay soils, an average sprinkler will put on water faster than the soil will take it. You'll end up with water standing in pools or a run-off into the driveway or flower beds before the soil is satisfied.

Deep waterings are recommended by nurserymen — whether once or twice a week. Frequent shallow waterings promote shallow rooting and a build-up of salinity because of the lack of leaching. Shallow waterings also encourage shallow-rooted weeds, compaction and an environment favorable to disease, as well as a greater total water loss.

When you see grass beginning to turn yellowish or pale green, chances are that an application of lawn food will get it growing fast and green again.

Your nurseryman has fertilizers designed for the various types of lawns in your area. These range from quick-acting nitrogen to the slower-relasing, balanced, fertilizers.

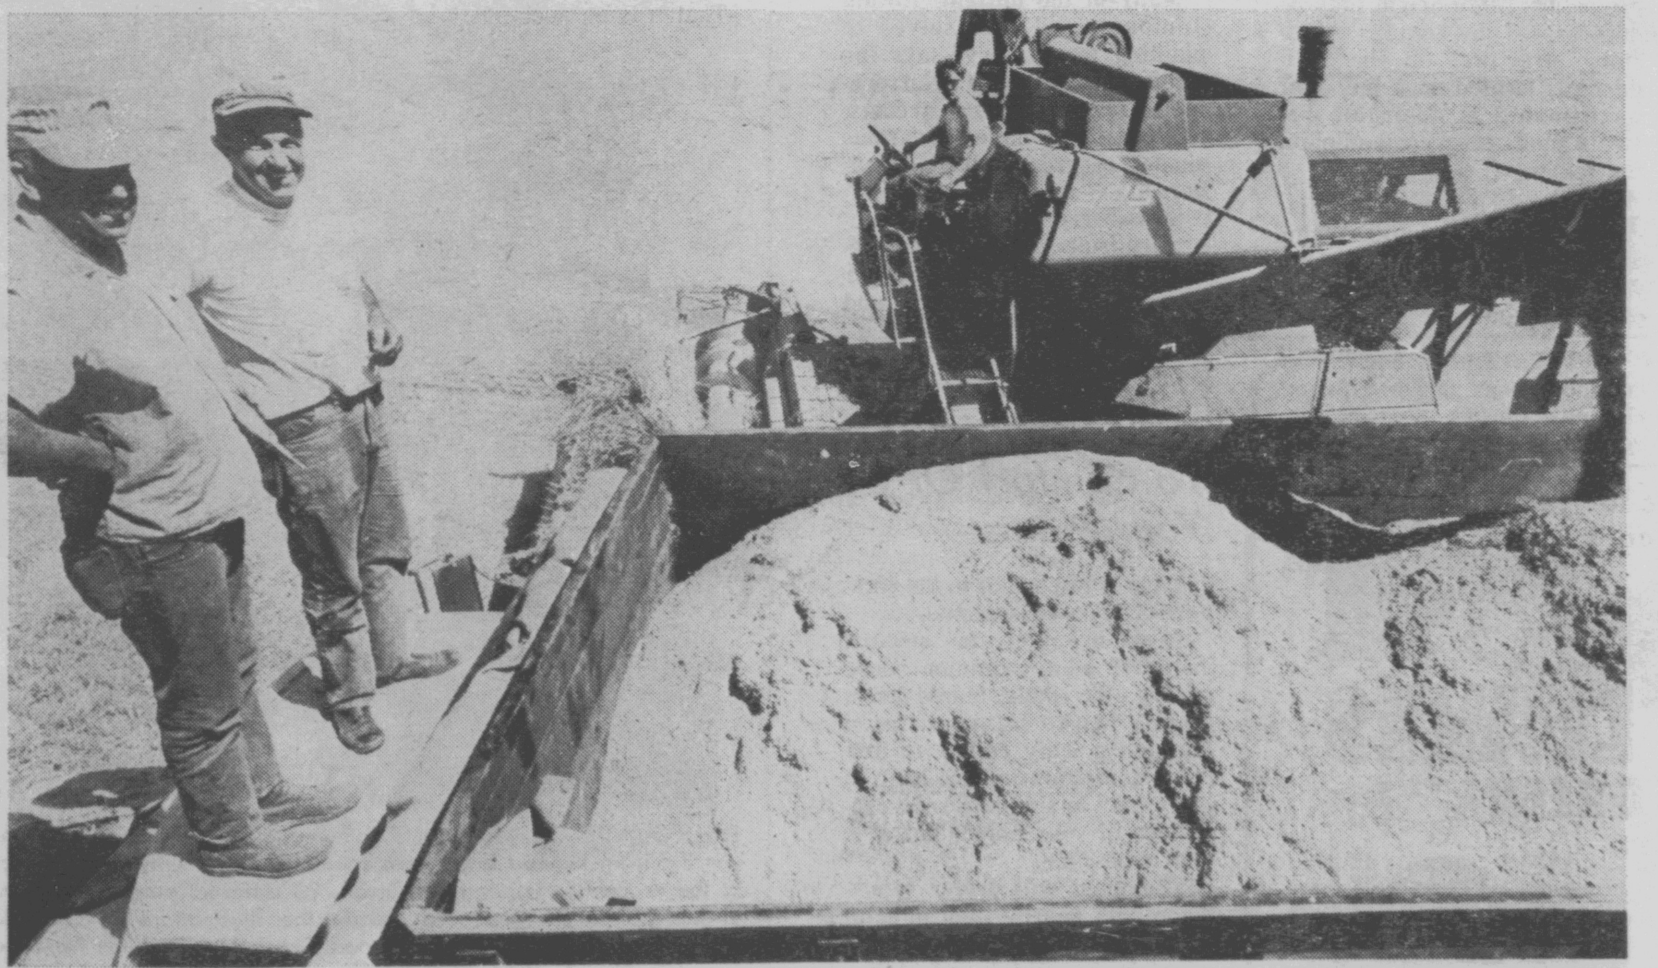
MANY GARDENERS feed in lighter amounts as often as every month. Others go by the calendar and fertilize lawns every 90 days. Certain grasses have special requirements, and a nurseryman can assist you in establishing the proper diet for your lawn.

When it comes to the question of how high to cut the grass, keep in mind not all grasses respond to the same cutting height.

Creepers such as bent and Bermuda grasses should be mowed low to keep the runners from piling up and creating a layer of brown thatch. Bluegrasses, for the most part, should be mowed to one and a half to two inches, as is the case where you are using a blend or mixture of grasses in your lawn.

With Dichondra, the more traffic it endures, the smaller, tighter and more compact the leaves grow. Frequent lawn mowing has the same effect. Where traffic is light and feeding is ample, and the Dichondra is lush and leafy, frequent mowings will give you an even texture. In these areas, infrequent mowing may leave a noticeable scalped appearance for a short time.

A final reminder is that different grasses (and weeds) require different chemicals for control. Repeated applications are generally required.



THE BROTHERS Leo and Verl Nofsiger inspect some of the fruit of the grass seed harvest on the more than 3,000 acres planted to that crop by their company. For Oregon farmers, grass seed is more than a 30 million dollar annual crop. Seed is shipped form the state for hundreds of thousands of lawns, pastures, parks, golf courses, school grounds, recreation sites, etc., across the country and abroad.

One Of The World's Great Beauty Spots

By LYNNE CARRIER

GUATEMALAN INDIAN women walk on the dock on the shores of beautiful Lake Atitlan, carrying textiles to the town of Panajachel to sell to tourists who have newly discovered the lake and village with its modern hotels and yet unspoiled charm.

For decades poets, adventurers, and anthropologists heralded Guatemala's Lake Atitlan as one of the most beautiful spots in the world.

But in the past three years, thousands of American tourists have been discovering it firsthand. The once-isolated highland resort now is served by paved roads and modern hotel facilities, yet retains a primitive, unspoiled charm attractive to vacationers.

The lake is a brief one-and-a-halfhour drive from Guatemala City. The road leads from the sophisticated Central American capital to a rugged sierra country inhabited by Indian descendants of the great Mayan civilization. The contrast is abrupt and dramatic.

WITHIN MILES of the lake, it shimmers in the distance like a mirage. As the tortuous highway winds down toward the lake's lower 5,400-foot elevation, Atitlan bobs in and out of view from behind cloud-wreathed peaks. It reappears in its full glory when the road crests a final mountain bulwark.

Below, clear jade-green waters stretch for 24 miles in a setting of lofty cliffs and three splendid volcanoes.

As the "xocomil," a stiff afternoon breeze, flows, the lake ruffles into millions of multifaceted emeralds. Despite the wind, the air stays mild. In fact, Lake Atitlan is blessed with an average year-round temperature of 72 degrees.

SEEN FROM this high vantage, the lake gives the impression of belonging to a mythical uninhabited world. The mountains rising steeply from its shores seem to protect it from modern civilization. The sensation is only dispelled as the road drops into the bustling shoreside village of Panajachel after descending 2,000 feet in a series of hairpin curves.

Although there are eight indigenous villages around the lake, the action is in Panajachel.

Not many years ago, the town resembled other simple Indian communities in the region. The native life there focuses on fishing for bass from crude plank dinghies or tending "milpas," the cornfields, and the onions sprouting in hundreds of terraces along the shore.

THEY SPEAK the Mayan dialects, Kakchiquel and Tzutuhil. The few who know Spanish speak it with a crisply abbreviated accent.

The Indians dress in brilliant, hand-woven costumes. Each village has its own distinctive dress style so colorful and intricately patterned that Guatemalan weavers are reputed to be the finest in the hemisphere.

Once tourists discovered Lake Atitlan, Panajachel was quickly converted into a resort town. Upper-class Guatemalans built villas on its shorefront and constructed hotels and restaurants.

Without really renouncing their traditional ways, the Indians rapidly adjusted to the presence of outsiders. Tourism provided a good market for their weaving and agricultural goods.

SURPRISINGLY, differences developed among the visitors themselves and not, as one might expect, between primitive Indian and foreigner. Not only has Lake Atitlan earned favor with average middle class travelers but has also attracted large numbers of furu-style mystics, hippies (called "jipis" in Spanish), and other youthful visitors on a low budget. Although the majority carry American passports, the two generations rarely mingle.

The traditional tourist current gravitates toward the edge of town, where visitors may choose between two elegant shorefront hotels.

The Hotel Tzanjuyu a longtime favorite. Its oddly fashioned pink stucco facade just over the lake. The rooms are comfortable despite the make-do architecture. They all come with private bath and hot water. Many have cheerful fireplaces and command sweeping panoramas of the lake.

GARDENS OF brilliant-hued tropical flowers splash the well-manicured grounds with color, and thanks to this picturesque setting, the Tzanjuyu never lacks a clientele of amateur and professional painters. Each night, a marimba band regales guests with typical Guatemalan music. In general, the management has done a fine job of choreographing activities.

The price is a moderate $14 a night for double.

Further down the shore, the Tzanjuyu is getting competition from a newcomer, the Hotel Atitlan. The Atitlan opened last year on a choice site, a beach-lined cove with a magnificent mountain backdrop. The rooms are tastefully appointed in Spanish colonial furnishing and go for $15.50 a double per night.

THE HIPPIES inhabit the center of Panajachel, where they say they get better "Indian vibrations." Their claim is that first-class hotels isolate people from their natural surroundings and that making the scene requires a healthy measure of downward mobility.

The young people bring a thriving business to the humble 50-cent-a-night establishments. One depends so heavily on the American youth trade that its placard reads "Well Come. Boarding House." Across the street is a windowless shack extravagantly called "the Dining Room." Its crude wooden tables are lined with long-haired travelers dressed in typical "huipiles," the tunic-style over-blouses worn by Indian women. The menu relies on frijoles and tortillas, but as one New Yorker put it, "It's part of the scene."

All over town, visible signs of the hip set proliferate. At the El Sol vegetarian restaurant, run by young Americans, a filling plate of meatless goodies costs a mere 65 cents. Farther down the road, there is an abandoned Yoga center. Along the public beach, silent, squatting Zen Buddhists meditate on the lake's alleged mystical qualities.

All of this is enough to make the more orthodox tourist cringe. And middle-class Guatemalans frequently look askance at the young visitors who, aside from their suspect habit of going native, rarely have much money to lavish on the local economy.

But the Indians don't agree. While they scarcely understand why American youths of middle-class origin want to ape their meager life style, the Indians accept them with a shrug of the shoulders in accordance with their live-and-let-live philosophy. For the natives the main concern is getting along with both types of foreigners.

Samples of local weaving are sold to the wealthier tourists, especially in Santiago, a charming village on the shore opposite Panajachel. An excursion boat leaves the Hotel Tzanjuyu daily for a visit to Santiago's colorful Indian market. Dark-haired women and children greet the boat at the dock, hawking a variety of typical souvenirs and, for a small fee, offering themselves as photographic subjects.

"Take a pitch. Take a pitch," implores a beautifully costumed five-year-old, whose Spanish is more limited than her few words of English.

The Indians' approach to the hip set realistically depends on the sale of tortillas, corn, beans, and tattered native garments guaranteed to cloak the wearer in vintage Mayan.

ONE ENTERPRISING Indian managed to set up a tourist business that attracts the entire gamut of visitors from hippies to diplomats. Early this year, Tomas Xon opened a unique second-hand native textile shop in Panajachel. He got his inspiration when his brother Sebastian, who works in California, sent him a pair of trousers purchased at a Los Angeles used-clothing store.

His second-hand shop is curiously indicative of how Indians are dealing with the propsect of an ever-increasing number of foreign visitors. He still lives modestly and goes barefoot most of the time. Yet he understands English, accepts traveler's checks, and is learning French so he can bargain better with European tourists.

With more hotels in the works, Lake Atitlan is bound to enjoy a major tourist boom in the near future.

Local Indians, like Xon, are cheerfully prepared to make the best of changes in their surroundings. So far they give no sign that they intend to relinquish their traditions in exchange for wholly contemporary mannerisms. Rather, they anticipate that tourism will be mutually beneficial.

One Of The World's Great Beauty Spots

By LYNNE CARRIER

For decades poets, adventurers, and anthropologists heralded Guatemala's Lake Atitlan as one of the most beautiful spots in the world.

But in the past three years, thousands of American tourists have been discovering it firsthand. The once-isolated highland resort now is served by paved roads and modern hotel facilities, yet retains a primitive, unspoiled charm attractive to vacationers.

The lake is a brief one-and-a-halfhour drive from Guatemala City. The road leads from the sophisticated Central American capital to a rugged sierra country inhabited by Indian descendants of the great Mayan civilization. The contrast is abrupt and dramatic.

WITHIN MILES of the lake, it shimmers in the distance like a mirage. As the tortuous highway winds down toward the lake's lower 5,400-foot elevation, Atitlan bobs in and out of view from behind cloud-wreathed peaks. It reappears in its full glory when the road crests a final mountain bulwark.

Below, clear jade-green waters stretch for 24 miles in a setting of lofty cliffs and three splendid volcanoes.

As the "xocomil," a stiff afternoon breeze, flows, the lake ruffles into millions of multifaceted emeralds. Despite the wind, the air stays mild. In fact, Lake Atitlan is blessed with an average year-round temperature of 72 degrees.

SEEN FROM this high vantage, the lake gives the impression of belonging to a mythical uninhabited world. The mountains rising steeply from its shores seem to protect it from modern civilization. The sensation is only dispelled as the road drops into the bustling shoreside village of Panajachel after descending 2,000 feet in a series of hairpin curves.

Although there are eight indigenous villages around the lake, the action is in Panajachel.

Not many years ago, the town resembled other simple Indian communities in the region. The native life there focuses on fishing for bass from crude plank dinghies or tending "milpas," the cornfields, and the onions sprouting in hundreds of terraces along the shore.

THEY SPEAK the Mayan dialects, Kakchiquel and Tzutuhil. The few who know Spanish speak it with a crisply abbreviated accent.

The Indians dress in brilliant, hand-woven costumes. Each village has its own distinctive dress style so colorful and intricately patterned that Guatemalan weavers are reputed to be the finest in the hemisphere.

Once tourists discovered Lake Atitlan, Panajachel was quickly converted into a resort town. Upper-class Guatemalans built villas on its shorefront and constructed hotels and restaurants.

Without really renouncing their traditional ways, the Indians rapidly adjusted to the presence of outsiders. Tourism provided a good market for their weaving and agricultural goods.

SURPRISINGLY, differences developed among the visitors themselves and not, as one might expect, between primitive Indian and foreigner. Not only has Lake Atitlan earned favor with average middle class travelers but has also attracted large numbers of furu-style mystics, hippies (called "jipis" in Spanish), and other youthful visitors on a low budget. Although the majority carry American passports, the two generations rarely mingle.

The traditional tourist current gravitates toward the edge of town, where visitors may choose between two elegant shorefront hotels.

The Hotel Tzanjuyu a longtime favorite. Its oddly fashioned pink stucco facade just over the lake. The rooms are comfortable despite the make-do architecture. They all come with private bath and hot water. Many have cheerful fireplaces and command sweeping panoramas of the lake.

GUATEMALAN INDIAN women walk on the dock on the shores of beautiful Lake Atitlan, carrying textiles to the town of Panajachel to sell to tourists who have newly discovered the lake and village with its modern hotels and yet unspoiled charm.

GARDENS OF brilliant-hued tropical flowers splash the well-manicured grounds with color, and thanks to this picturesque setting, the Tzanjuyu never lacks a clientele of amateur and professional painters. Each night, a marimba band regales guests with typical Guatemalan music. In general, the management has done a fine job of choreographing activities.

The price is a moderate $14 a night for double.

Further down the shore, the Tzanjuyu is getting competition from a newcomer, the Hotel Atitlan. The Atitlan opened last year on a choice site, a beach-lined cove with a magnificent mountain backdrop. The rooms are tastefully appointed in Spanish colonial furnishing and go for $15.50 a double per night.

THE HIPPIES inhabit the center of Panajachel, where they say they get better "Indian vibrations." Their claim is that first-class hotels isolate people from their natural surroundings and that making the scene requires a healthy measure of downward mobility.

The young people bring a thriving business to the humble 50-cent-a-night establishments. One depends so heavily on the American youth trade that its placard reads "Well Come. Boarding House." Across the street is a windowless shack extravagantly called "the Dining Room." Its crude wooden tables are lined with long-haired travelers dressed in typical "huipiles," the tunic-style over-blouses worn by Indian women. The menu relies on frijoles and tortillas, but as one New Yorker put it, "It's part of the scene."

All over town, visible signs of the hip set proliferate. At the El Sol vegetarian restaurant, run by young Americans, a filling plate of meatless goodies costs a mere 65 cents. Farther down the road, there is an abandoned Yoga center. Along the public beach, silent, squatting Zen Buddhists meditate on the lake's alleged mystical qualities.

All of this is enough to make the more orthodox tourist cringe. And middle-class Guatemalans frequently look askance at the young visitors who, aside from their suspect habit of going native, rarely have much money to lavish on the local economy.

But the Indians don't agree. While they scarcely understand why American youths of middle-class origin want to ape their meager life style, the Indians accept them with a shrug of the shoulders in accordance with their live-and-let-live philosophy. For the natives the main concern is getting along with both types of foreigners.

Samples of local weaving are sold to the wealthier tourists, especially in Santiago, a charming village on the shore opposite Panajachel. An excursion boat leaves the Hotel Tzanjuyu daily for a visit to Santiago's colorful Indian market. Dark-haired women and children greet the boat at the dock, hawking a variety of typical souvenirs and, for a small fee, offering themselves as photographic subjects.

"Take a pitch. Take a pitch," implores a beautifully costumed five-year-old, whose Spanish is more limited than her few words of English.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plant Canna Lilies now for flags of color during the warm season. There are also dwarf forms available. Set out bulbs or plants in full sun.

✓ Grow your own vegetables. Plant now: beets, carrots, lettuce, endive, onion, turnips and radishes. Shopping may turn up transplants of cabbage, cauliflower, swiss chard and Brussels sprouts.

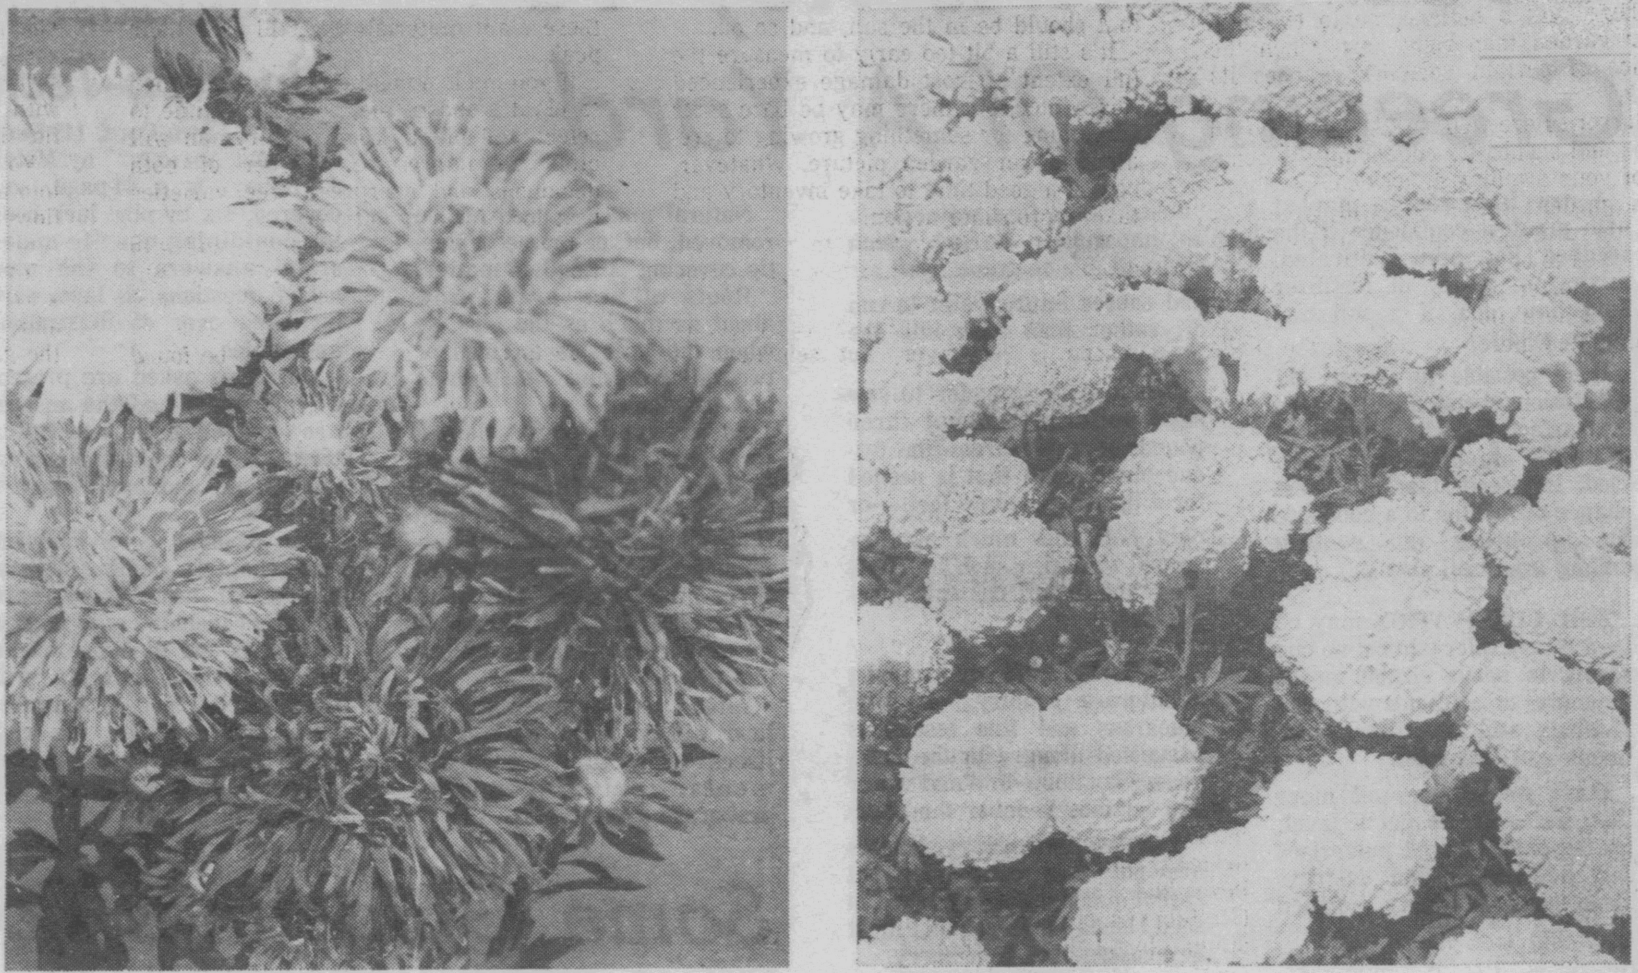
✓ Established roses may be fed this month. Wait to feed newly-planted roses until they have completely established themselves in the garden, like early summer.

✓ Rooted cuttings of Carnations are available in nursery containers for planting now.

✓ Select Azaleas and Camellias while they are in bloom. A visit to your local nursery this week will reveal many varieties — in a lovely range of colors and flower forms — are in flower, allowing you to select exactly the shade you desire.

✓ Check your garden for areas that have suffered extensive wear and tear from winter rains, and take corrective action with soil, sand, stakes, etc.

NEW BY BURPEE



ALWAYS ONE of the busiest of the developers of new garden flowers is the W. Atlee Burpee Co. and 1973 is no exception. Heading the list of '73 introductions, at top, is a new class of giant annual asters called Totem Poles, with fully-double, shaggy flowers that measure up to seven inches across and are supported by extra strong stems. "There is nothing among the whole aster class to match their spectacular size or to beat them for decoration as a bedding background plant," claims Burpee. Mixed colors only are offered at this time. Another Burpee newcomer, bottom photo, is the odorless marigold, a mixed color giant of carnation-type flowers from which is missing the usual tangy aroma of the foliage, making it particularly suited to indoor arrangements. The double flowers measure four inches across, and they stand about two and a half feet high. Burpee catalogs can be obtained by writing the company's branch at Riverside, Calif., 92502.

If It's Privacy You Want, Then Plant Accordingly

Planting for privacy has always been a factor in landscape design, but never a more important one than it is today, when the emphasis is on outdoor living.

The properly screened backyard adds to the enjoyment of the family's summertime living. Screens help create space for outdoor activities for condominium dwellers and residents of mobile homes — and afford shelter from the encroachment of civilization, allowing for maximum privacy and relaxation.

HOW BEST TO achieve privacy epends upon the size of the individual's property.

For physical and aesthetic reasons, a bare fence is unsatisfactory, generally, because it seldom reaches high enough to hide the view from next door — and its stark lines leave much to be desired. A combination of fencing and plant material is functional and pleasing to the eye.

In considering the height of a screen, several factors are involved. On level land in a neighborhood of single-story dwellings, a six foot height provides adequate privacy and protection. More height may be necessary if the home is a two-story structure, or the residence is located on a hill — or partitioning is desirable between multi-story condominium units.

These are things to be discussed with your nurseryman or landscaper, who can show you the alternatives of both plan and plant.

FOR TALL SCREENS, in confined space, upright-growing Carolina Cherry, Podacarpus, certain Viburnums, and Eugenia are worthy of consideration; as are English Laurel, Xylosma, many Pittosporums and Photinias for large-growing choices to provide a wide or spreading screen of privacy. Many will also take shearing to contain them within the desired bounds, if limited space is a consideration.

Many of the upright-growing Junipers lend themselves to planting for privacy, says the California Assn. of Nurserymen. They are ideal accents, too, boasting foliages in various shades of green, blue and silver.

Strawberry Tree with its decorative fruits, Oleander with its continuous and bright summer bloom, Pineapple Guava and red-berried Cotoneasters are also excellent.

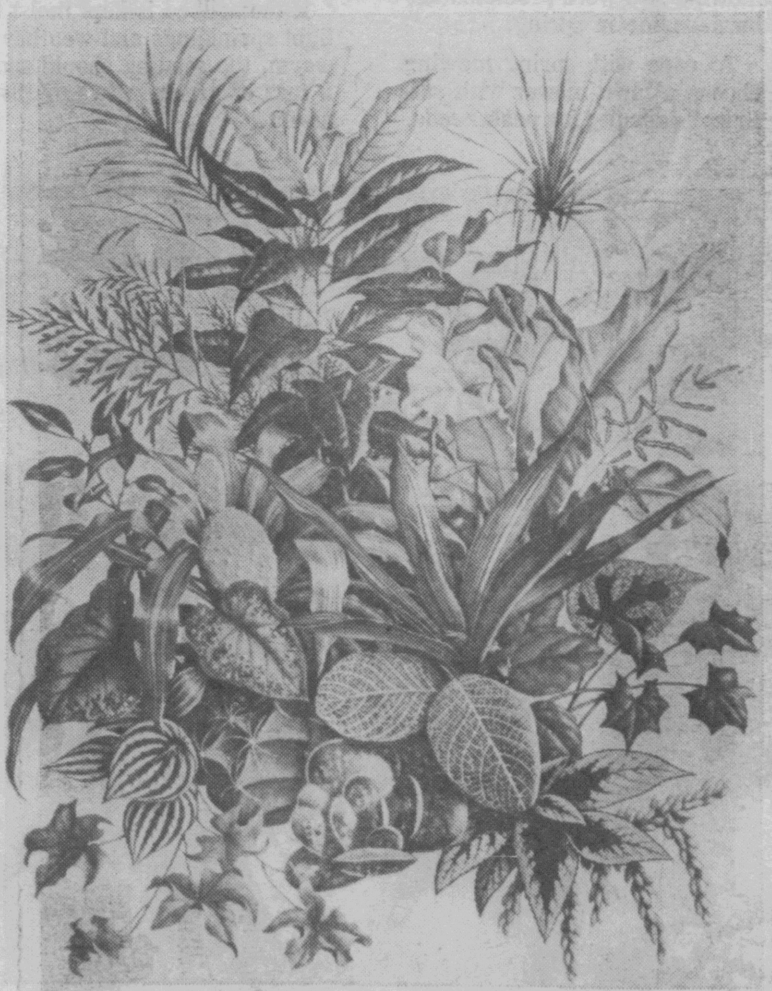
Light Essential To Comfort Of Your Plants

Light is important to the comfort of your houseplants.

Keep in mind the original home of many common house plants - the shady, humid forest floor, with light diffused through a leafy ceiling to protect them from intense heat. It isn't easy to simulate such conditions in your home, but it is not impossible.

The plant will prefer semishade with nearby light in summer. Don't overexpose the plant to sun. In fall and winter, the slowest growing period, move the plant nearer to the light source.

BEAUTY IN THE HOME



THE FOLIAGE OF houseplants come in every color and pattern, varying from the red and green caladium, lower left, to the spikes of the dracaena, upper right. In all, 23 different plants are shown in this painting reproduced among the illustrations in "Foliage House Plants" by James Underwood Crockett, a volume from the Time-Life Encyclopedia of Gardening series published by Time-Life Books. The price: $6.95. The most popular indoor plant? Still the Philodendron, although it has its challengers.

Russians Miffed By Special Privileges Of Visitors

By GORDON JOSELOFF

MOSCOW (UPI) — It is Friday night and there is the usual line outside the Aragvi Restaurant, Moscow's best Georgian eatery.

Suddenly a taxi pulls up and out jump two American couples. Ignoring the crowd, they go straight inside and are immediately shown to a table.

"Hey," says one young Russian on the line. "Where are we — in New York or Moscow?" Others around him nod their approval.

FOREIGNERS IN the Soviet Union — both those resident here and visitors — are a privileged bunch when it comes to service at restaurants, theaters, hotels and airports.

In the past, most Russian grumbling about the situation was limited to a few words among friends. Newspapers have been too cognizant of the Kremlin's desire for more tourists and their hard currency to criticize the practice.

But now one writer has cautiously aired his gripes publicly in Nyedelya, the weekly supplement of Izvestia, the government newspaper.

A. Makarov said it is only right that a guest get a better seat or a better dish.

"THIS IS A natural practice in our everyday life. Who is going to argue about it? But there is just one delicate point," he wrote.

"Besides generosity and the readiness to fulfill any desire, genuine hospitality presupposes a certain quality of dignity in the host," he said. "Respecting the guest, the host respects himself. Respecting alien customs, he respects his own."

The writer said he was in a hotel one day when the elevator operator told him: "You are lucky that you are allowed to stay in this hotel. You are not a foreigner."

He said he reacted with shock.

"I DELIVERED AN angry and confusing speech that being a citizen of my own country and a patriot of my Motherland, I am not jealous of any foreigner," Makarov said. Another time he was in an airport and noticed a large restaurant empty of people except for some waitresses talking among themselves.

"From time to time people approached the waitresses and asked for food. The women looked at them in a scornful manner," he said.

"AND WHO ARE you?" he quoted one of the waitresses as asking an old man. "Ph, you are an ordinary citizen. Hello, pleased to see you, but we are waiting for foreigners. Do you understand Russian, we are waiting for foreigners."

Makarov said if the customer two hours later had looked into the restaurant he would have seen the same picture — emptiness and the same conversation. Finally, after another hour, a small group of tourists appeared. He said they seemed oppressed by the size of the room and its emptiness and were happy to leave.

IN LENINGRAD, he said, he saw a foreigner in an elegant car approach a raised bridge and demand that it immediately be lowered for him.

"It was as if I should demand that the Buckingham Palace Guards in London march in front of me in their ceremonial manner," Makarov said.

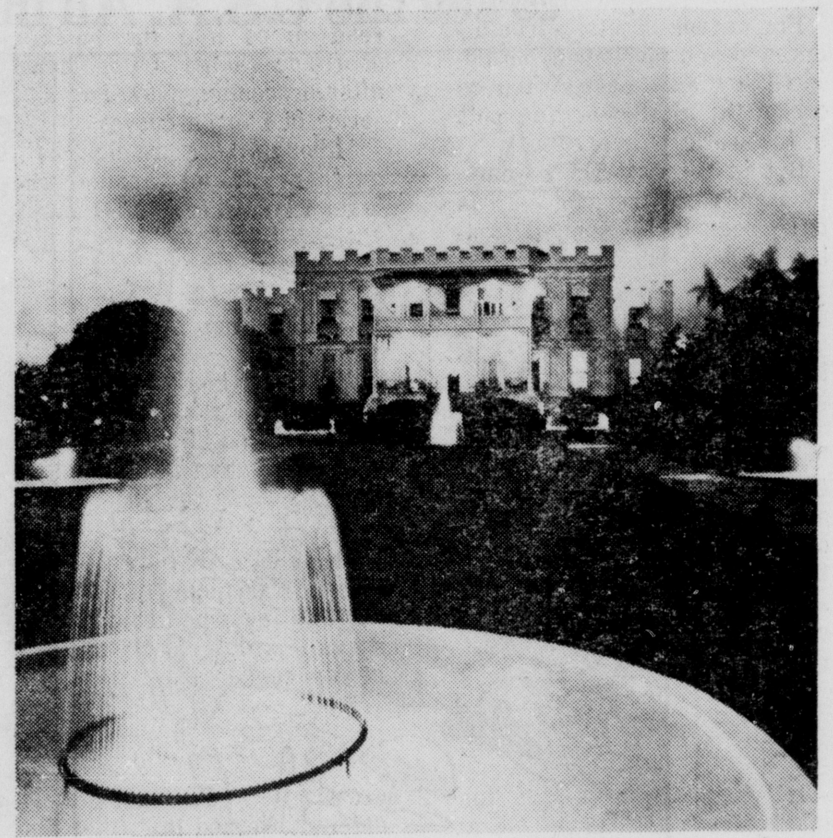
"The guest was told he had to wait a little bit. Then he really became impudent shouting curses in various languages of the world," he said.

"He was jumping with impatience on those very stones on which some time ago Pushkin walked. Everybody was embarrassed and everybody felt the foreigner was displeased.

"Was he offended by someone?"

Makarov said hospitality is one thing, "but it has nothing in common with servility."

'Little England' Flourishes In Caribbean



THE NOTORIOUS PIRATE Sam Lord built this mansion in southern Barbados in 1830. Now a luxury hotel, Sam Lord's Castle is popular with visitors who like to enjoy costly decor plundered from cargo ships nearly 150 years ago.

By ROBIN WRIGHT

BARBADOS, West Indies — In Barbados, dollars are not always currency, cucumbers are not all vegetables, and lilies grow in the sea.

But even more wondrously, life on Barbados is not what most people know as living. It's more like dreaming.

In fact almost everything on this tiny pear-shaped West Indies island takes on a new context, always slightly irregular and always relating to the sea.

TAKE THE dollars that aren't always currency, for example. They are actually ocean animals that live in the mud are known as sand dollars.

The cucumbers that aren't all vegetables are mud-dwellers called sea cucumbers. The lilies that grow in the sea — not surprisingly named sea lilies — are graceful animals that attach themselves to rocks in deep water and have been around since long before the age of the dinosaur.

And the life... well, the life on Barbados is equally novel paradoxically combining the sophistication and traditions of the British Isles and the lush vegetation and weather of the tropics with the architecture and spirit of New Orleans. A tropical British New Orleans? Yes.

IMAGINE THIS: The main street of the main city (Bridgetown) is a pastel version of New Orlean's Latin Quarter, soft blue, green, pink, and beige buildings bordered by white wrought iron instead of the traditional black. Quaint terraces overlook narrow streets.

Farther out, gingerbread houses are lined up all in a row, tiny but proud in their fresh paint and colorful trim.

Beyond the city, Barbados shows its tropical side in an endless display of sugar cane plantations, gentle rolling green hills, then bordering beaches.

It's not as mountainous or as lush as its neighboring Indies islands. There is none of the bold beauty. But there is a gentle stability to the surroundings, almost a British restraint.

THE PEOPLE are as gently spirited and friendly as the island appears physically. Considered by many to be the playground of the Caribbean, Barbados is a warm place where natives are relaxed and talkative. They seem somehow to even enjoy the quarter-million people who descend on the tiny island each year.

Sometimes there is a slight communications problem created by the Bajam version of English, a fast, broken rhythmic language full of double negatives and redunancies such as boy-child, sparrow-bird. And then there are the new variations of old words: Destructive is destroyful and expensive is costive.

But it's all part of the charm of the place.

WHAT MAKES Barbados really different from the other Caribbean islands is its cosmopolitan air and level of development. Called "Little England" by its neighbors, its bustles in a way that suggests southern England has been transplanted to the tropics.

This is most obvious in its numbers. With 260,000 residents, the tiny 21-mile-long island is the most crowded of the Caribbean isles and close to the most densely populated island in the world.

Although some have jokingly said they expect it to sink like an overloaded ship into the sea, the fact that one of the island's major exports is people keeps it from being too crowded.

THE BUSTLE has had many positive effects. Far more prosperous than its sisters, Barbados provides a handsome lifestyle for both residents and guests.

Bridgetown is far from being a sleepy island village, featuring fancy shops with both native and European wares. And the "plantocracy" has provided serveral cultural centers.

Among the natives, there is a 98 per cent literacy rate as a result of the 136 government-supported schools and six colleges or vocation centers. And there is a sampling of everything from theater to horse racing, even a Lions Club and a YMCA within the small, 166-square-mile area.

TOURISTS WILL feel the effect of development, but not overdevelopment, in the accommodations and activities available.

The finest luxury hotels in the Caribbean are in Barbados, as well as the greatest variety of sports facilities — two golf courses, many tennis courts, a racetrack, polo field, yacht clubs, a cricket field, and endless places sponsoring deep-sea diving and fishing, surfing, boating, and swimming.

Besides economic enrichment, there are the natural riches that make the island even more attractive. Barbados beaches are among the best in the hemisphere and the weather is considered by many to be the finest in the Western world.

A CONSTANT 10-knot trade wind balances the heat of a caressing sun, providing a naural air-conditioning system. The temperature is 75 to 80 degrees day or night, winter or summer.

The beaches are of two varieties, the silver sands of the west coast washed by the Caribbean, and the rugged front that meets the relentless Atlantic waves on the eastern side.

The majority of luxury hotels are on the Platinum Coast to the west and south where most of the swimming is done. The more rugged northeast or Scotland district provides breathtaking views from the steep cliffs and coves that overlook an ocean that spreads unimpeded from the African coast. A spectacular surf makes it a surfer's paradise.

If that isn't enough consider this as a selling point in favor of a Barbados vacation: It's the only place outside the United States to which George Washington ever traveled. After his trip, he repeatedly wrote of "being enraptured" with the island.

And if it's good enough for George Washington, well. . .

The year 1953 was not a promising one for Washington D.C.'s old Patent Office Building. Legislation was introduced in Congress to raze the building and erect in its place a parking garage!

The once spacious structure had already been chopped up into a warren of small offices filled with federal bureaucrats.

Fortunately, President Dwight Eisenhower and a bipartisan group of senators and congressmen were successful in saving the grand old building. In 1963, it was turned over to the Smithsonian Institution as a home for the National Collection of Fine Arts and the National Portrait Gallery.

Restored to its former glory, the old Patent Office Building today houses one of the capital's most impressive, and least visited, collections of art works.

A visit to the building is worthwhile even if you have no interest in art, because the beautiful old structure — only the White House and the Capitol are older — is an attraction in its own right.

A Landmark Saved, Used

The year 1953 was not a promising one for Washington D.C.'s old Patent Office Building. Legislation was introduced in Congress to raze the building and erect in its place a parking garage!

The once spacious structure had already been chopped up into a warren of small offices filled with federal bureaucrats.

Fortunately, President Dwight Eisenhower and a bipartisan group of senators and congressmen were successful in saving the grand old building. In 1963, it was turned over to the Smithsonian Institution as a home for the National Collection of Fine Arts and the National Portrait Gallery.

Restored to its former glory, the old Patent Office Building today houses one of the capital's most impressive, and least visited, collections of art works.

A visit to the building is worthwhile even if you have no interest in art, because the beautiful old structure — only the White House and the Capitol are older — is an attraction in its own right.

IT'S A GOOD TIME FOR A GARDEN INVENTORY

There isn't a better time to evaluate your garden than right now, when the choice of certain varieties reaches its peak.

Nurseries are well-stocked with myriad trees and shrubs for enhancing the beauty of your dwelling or garden.

In gardens large or small, young or old, there are certain to be a few errors that need to be rectified — tall specimens where shorter plants are needed, foliage plants where flowering ones would be appreciated more, or shrubs in the shade that should be in the sun, and so on.

It's still a bit too early to measure the full extent of frost damage experienced this winter, but there may be bare spots screaming for something growing to create a better garden picture. Whatever, now is a good time to take inventory and take appropriate action.

It's an excellent time to plant such deciduous items as fruit trees, flowering trees, grapevines, berry plants, artichokes, rhubarb and roses. The bareroot season is just over, but selections of these plant materials are still near their peak.

If you made a mental note last summer to plant a shade tree, now is the time to select and plant. Your nurseryman will offer an impressive number of both deciduous and evergreen tree varieties best for Marin conditions.

Dwarf fruit trees are popular, and with more interest in growing-your-own fruit today, demand will undoubtedly exceed supply.

Azaleas and Camellias are to be found blooming in nurseries right now, and are easily transplanted into the garden. Nurseries also feature Rhododendrons laden with flower buds. These will unfold their floral beauty during the blooming season.

You can change a drab garden spot into a thing of beauty, simply by planting flowering trees that bloom in spring and summer.

You'll find a wealth of spring-time variety from flowering plums, crabapples and cherries. Such performers brighten the garden, and the entire neighborhood.

The Lenten Rose: Delightful, Different

Sometimes people miss out on the most useful and handsome plants that can be grown in their locale — because they just haven't heard about them.

This is often the case with the Lenten Rose, a beautiful off-season performer that deserves to be better known.

Polished, dark green leaves never do a disappearing act. Flowers that look like perfect single roses. Profuse bloom from January to April. The ability to serve as distinctive ground cover beneath trees and shrubs; elegant go-togethers with Ferns, Azaleas, Rhododendrons or Camellias. Undemanding of disposition where culture is concerned.

THESE are only some of the virtues of the Lenten Rose, a plant for all-year beauty in shady areas of the landscape.

The fact that the Lenten Rose (Helleborus Orientalis) can send up its white, pink or purplish flowers without benefit of sun makes it a sound choice for difficult places where the sun never hits. The Christmas Rose (Helleborus Niger), which is similar to the Lenten Rose except in its earlier blooming time, has the same ability to bloom in deep shade.

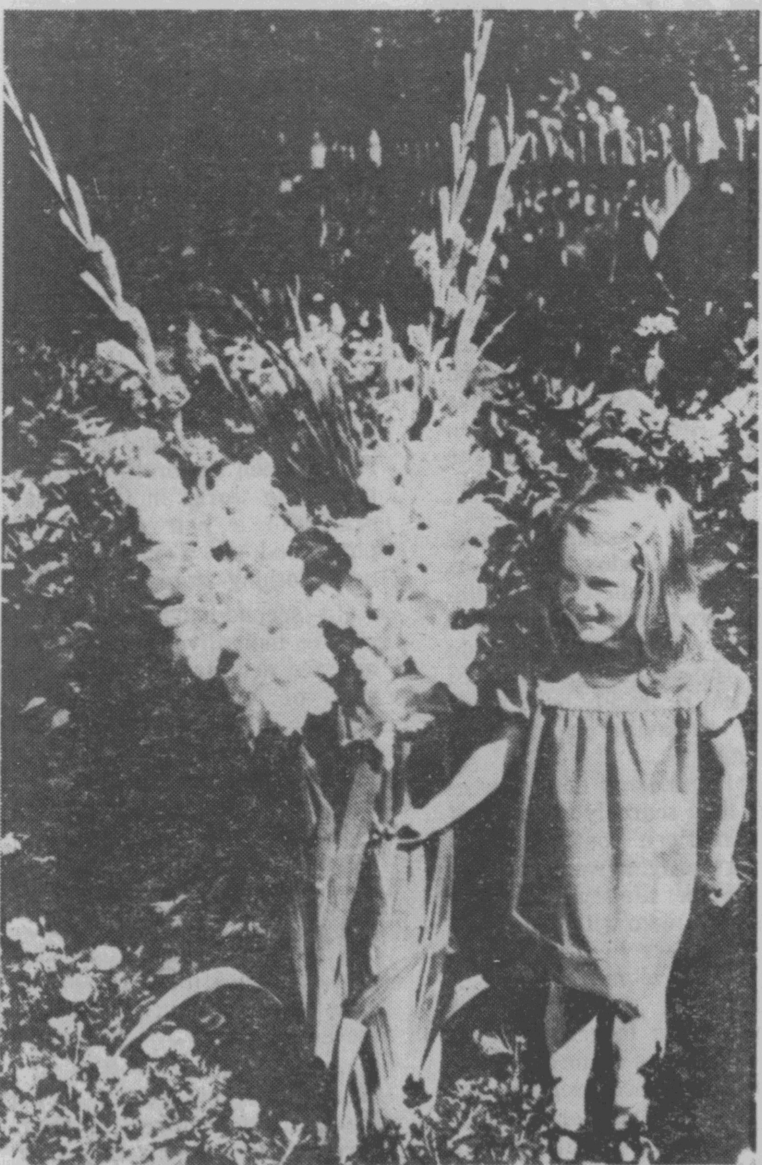
This means that, by interplanting the two, you can enjoy flowers from October to April.

THE PLANTS grow about 14 inches tall and spread graciously — in clumps of about two feet across. Flowers, which rise up on single, leafy stems, are about two and a half inches across, and are superior for cutting for people-pleasing indoor arrangements.

Both of the so-called Roses grow best if left undisturbed. Give them a permanent place in the garden and let them take care of themselves. They don't require a lot of water. Though they do best in cooler summer climates, they tolerate frost and can take a fair amount of sun as long as there is plenty of organic matter in the soil.

The plants like a slightly acid soil. Set them out with a planter mix formulated for Azaleas and Camellias for best results.

DADDY OF THE GLADS



BIG DADDY is the name of this towering gladiolus, and it's a 1973 All-American selection. It is also an ego-builder, easy to grow, and achieving a height of six feet or more, with profusions of creamy-peach spikes and immense individual florets. Gladiolus plantings can be continued into the late spring.

The Numbers On The Bags Of Fertilizer

It is a good idea t buy a specific type of fertilizer to better satisfy your garden.

The numbers on the fertilizer bag will direct you.

Suppose it says 5-10-5, which is a good all-purpose formula. What does it mean?

The first figure means 5 per cent is nitrogen; 10 per cent is phosphorus; and the final 5 is potassium. If you have a 100-pound bag, there would be five, 10 and five pounds of these elements respectively. The remainder is a spreading agent.

Keep It Moist

Most house plants prefer high humidity, so pick a place where several plants may be grouped. The plants emit water vapor from the soil and leaves, creating a more natural environment. Moisten the air with a fine spray of water occasionally.

Beauty In Container For Porch, Patio

Question: If a Gardenia is such a lovely shrub in the landscape, why would you want to grow it in a container?

Answer: So you can enjoy its beauty, and fragrant blossoms, up close — on the porch or patio.

This is a chief reason to grow most plants in a container, so their individual characteristics can be enjoyed close by — whether in the porch or the outdoor living area. Californians spend many summer hours outdoors, and by having plants in tubs, or other containers, the outdoor living area is greatly enhanced. The plants can be moved about, and become decorative pieces — as well as conversation pieces.

Garden color is something Californians enjoy throughout the year.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen reports there are many summer-flowering shrubs which can be used to decorate the outdoor living area — especially in containers to showcase the beauty and color of the individual specimens.

What are some of the colorful choices?

In addition to Gardenias, the red-blooming Bottle Brush, Lantana, and Oleanders are outstanding candidates — especially in hot, sunny locations. Oleanders are available in shades of pink, red, and white — the plants provide continuous bloom to enjoy. This is true, too, of Hibiscus and Lantana — which bloom in many appealing colors.

Hibiscus varieties include several different flower forms — big singws, frilly ones, multi-petalled types and doubles. Your nursery will have an assortment of colors and flower forms from which to choose, ranging from white, shades of pink and red, to soft yellow to rich golds.

And, don't overlook Roses as a source of scintillating color during the summer months.

One Of The World's Great Beauty Spots

By LYNNE CARRIER

GUATEMALAN INDIAN women walk on the dock on the shores of beautiful Lake Atitlan, carrying textiles to the town of Panajachel to sell to tourists who have newly discovered the lake and village with its modern hotels and yet unspoiled charm.

For decades poets, adventurers, and anthropologists heralded Guatemala's Lake Atitlan as one of the most beautiful spots in the world.

But in the past three years, thousands of American tourists have been discovering it firsthand. The once-isolated highland resort now is served by paved roads and modern hotel facilities, yet retains a primitive, unspoiled charm attractive to vacationers.

The lake is a brief one-and-ahalfhour drive from Guatemala City. The road leads from the sophisticated Central American capital to a rugged sierra country inhabited by Indian descendants of the great Mayan civilization. The contrast is abrupt and dramatic.

WITHIN MILES of the lake, it shimmers in the distance like a mirage. As the tortuous highway winds down toward the lake's lower 5,400-foot elevation, Atitlan bobs in and out of view from behind cloud-wreathed peaks. It reappears in its full glory when the road crests a final mountain bulwark.

Below, clear jade-green waters stretch for 24 miles in a setting of lofty cliffs and three splendid volcanoes.

As the "xocomil," a stiff afternoon breeze, flows, the lake ruffles into millions of multifaceted emeralds. Despite the wind, the air stays mild. In fact, Lake Atitlan is blessed with an average year-round temperature of 72 degrees.

SEEN FROM this high vantage, the lake gives the impression of belonging to a mythical uninhabited world. The mountains rising steeply from its shores seem to protect it from modern civilization. The sensation is only dispelled as the road drops into the bustling shoreside village of Panajachel after descending 2,000 feet in a series of hairpin curves.

Although there are eight indigenous villages around the lake, the action is in Panajachel.

Not many years ago, the town resembled other simple Indian communities in the region. The native life there focuses on fishing for bass from crude plank dinghies or tending "milpas," the cornfields, and the onions sprouting in hundreds of terraces along the shore.

THEY SPEAK the Mayan dialects, Kakchiquel and Tzutuhil. The few who know Spanish speak it with a crisply abbreviated accent.

The Indians dress in brilliant, hand-woven costumes. Each village has its own distinctive dress style so colorful and intricately patterned that Guatemalan weavers are reputed to be the finest in the hemisphere.

Once tourists discovered Lake Atitlan, Panajachel was quickly converted into a resort town. Upper-class Guatemalans built villas on its shorefront and constructed hotels and restaurants.

Without really renouncing their traditional ways, the Indians rapidly adjusted to the presence of outsiders. Tourism provided a good market for their weaving and agricultural goods.

SURPRISINGLY, differences developed among the visitors themselves and not, as one might expect, between primitive Indian and foreigner. Not only has Lake Atitlan earned favor with average middle class travelers but has also attracted large numbers of furu-style mystics, hippies (called "jipis" in Spanish), and other youthful visitors on a low budget. Although the majority carry American passports, the two generations rarely mingle.

The traditional tourist current gravitates toward the edge of town, where visitors may choose between two elegant shorefront hotels.

The Hotel Tzanjuyu a longtime favorite. Its oddly fashioned pink stucco facade just over the lake. The rooms are comfortable despite the make-do architecture. They all come with private bath and hot water. Many have cheerful fireplaces and command sweeping panoramas of the lake.

GARDENS OF brilliant-hued tropical flowers splash the well-manicured grounds with color, and thanks to this picturesque setting, the Tzanjuyu never lacks a clientele of amateur and professional painters. Each night, a marimba band regales guests with typical Guatemalan music. In general, the management has done a fine job of choreographing activities.

The price is a moderate $14 a night for double.

Further down the shore, the Tzanjuyu is getting competition from a newcomer, the Hotel Atitlan. The Atitlan opened last year on a choice site, a beach-lined cove with a magnificent mountain backdrop. The rooms are tastefully appointed in Spanish colonial furnishing and go for $15.50 a double per night.

THE HIPPIES inhabit the center of Panajachel, where they say they get better "Indian vibrations." Their claim is that first-class hotels isolate people from their natural surroundings and that making the scene requires a healthy measure of downward mobility.

The young people bring a thriving business to the humble 50-cent-a-night establishments. One depends so heavily on the American youth trade that its placard reads "Well Come. Boarding House." Across the street is a windowless shack extravagantly called "the Dining Room." Its crude wooden tables are lined with long-haired travelers dressed in typical "huipiles," the tunic-style over-blouses worn by Indian women. The menu relies on frijoles and tortillas, but as one New Yorker put it, "It's part of the scene."

The Travel Pages

All over town, visible signs of the hip set proliferate. At the El Sol vegetarian restaurant, run by young Americans, a filling plate of meatless goodies costs a mere 65 cents. Farther down the road, there is an abandoned Yoga center. Along the public beach, silent, squatting Zen Buddhists meditate on the lake's alleged mystical qualities.

All of this is enough to make the more orthodox tourist cringe. And middle-class Guatemalans frequently look askance at the young visitors who, aside from their suspect habit of going native, rarely have much money to lavish on the local economy.

But the Indians don't agree. While they scarcely understand why American youths of middle-class origin want to ape their meager life style, the Indians accept them with a shrug of the shoulders in accordance with their live-and-let-live philosophy. For the natives the main concern is getting along with both types of foreigners.

Samples of local weaving are sold to the wealthier tourists, especially in Santiago, a charming village on the shore opposite Panajachel. An excursion boat leaves the Hotel Tzanjuyu daily for a visit to Santiago's colorful Indian market. Dark-haired women and children greet the boat at the dock, hawking a variety of typical souvenirs and, for a small fee, offering themselves as photographic subjects.

"Take a pitch. Take a pitch," implores a beautifully costumed five-year-old, whose Spanish is more limited than her few words of English.

The Indians' approach to the hip set realistically depends on the sale of tortillas, corn, beans, and tattered native garments guaranteed to cloak the wearer in vintage Mayan.

ONE ENTERPRISING Indian managed to set up a tourist business that attracts the entire gamut of visitors from hippies to diplomats. Early this year, Tomas Xon opened a unique second-hand native textile shop in Panajachel. He got his inspiration when his brother Sebastian, who works in California, sent him a pair of trousers purchased at a Los Angeles used-clothing store.

His second-hand shop is curiously indicative of how Indians are dealing with the propsect of an ever-increasing number of foreign visitors. He still lives modestly and goes barefoot most of the time. Yet he understands English, accepts traveler's checks, and is learning French so he can bargain better with European tourists.

With more hotels in the works, Lake Atitlan is bound to enjoy a major tourist boom in the near future.

Local Indians, like Xon, are cheerfully prepared to make the best of changes in their surroundings. So far they give no sign that they intend to relinquish their traditions in exchange for wholly contemporary mannerisms. Rather, they anticipate that tourism will be mutually beneficial.

Russians Miffed By Special Privileges Of Visitors

By GORDON JOSELOFF

MOSCOW (UPI) — It is Friday night and there is the usual line outside the Aragvi Restaurant, Moscow's best Georgian eatery.

Suddenly a taxi pulls up and out jump two American couples. Ignoring the crowd, they go straight inside and are immediately shown to a table.

"Hey," says one young Russian on the line. "Where are we — in New York or Moscow?" Others around him nod their approval.

FOREIGNERS IN the Soviet Union — both those resident here and visitors — are a privileged bunch when it comes to service at restaurants, theaters, hotels and airports.

In the past, most Russian grumbling about the situation was limited to a few words among friends. Newspapers have been too cognizant of the Kremlin's desire for more tourists and their hard currency to criticize the practice.

But now one writer has cautiously aired his gripes publicly in Nyedelya, the weekly supplement of Izvestia, the government newspaper.

A. Makarov said it is only right that a guest get a better seat or a better dish.

"THIS IS A natural practice in our everyday life. Who is going to argue about it? But there is just one delicate point," he wrote.

"Besides generosity and the readiness to fulfill any desire, genuine hospitality presupposes a certain quality of dignity in the host," he said. "Respecting the guest, the host respects himself. Respecting alien customs, he respects his own."

The writer said he was in a hotel one day when the elevator operator told him: "You are lucky that you are allowed to stay in this hotel. You are not a foreigner."

He said he reacted with shock.

"I DELIVERED AN angry and confusing speech that being a citizen of my own country and a patriot of my Motherland, I am not jealous of any foreigner," Makarov said. Another time he was in an airport and noticed a large restaurant empty of people except for some waitresses talking among themselves.

"From time to time people approached the waitresses and asked for food. The women looked at them in a scornful manner," he said.

"AND WHO ARE you?" he quoted one of the waitresses as asking an old man. "Ph, you are an ordinary citizen. Hello, pleased to see you, but we are waiting for foreigners. Do you understand Russian, we are waiting for foreigners."

Makarov said if the customer two hours later had looked into the restaurant he would have seen the same picture — emptiness and the same conversation. Finally, after another hour, a small group of tourists appeared. He said they seemed oppressed by the size of the room and its emptiness and were happy to leave.

IN LENINGRAD, he said, he saw a foreigner in an elegant car approach a raised bridge and demand that it immediately be lowered for him.

"It was as if I should demand that the Buckingham Palace Guards in London march in front of me in their ceremonial manner," Makarov said.

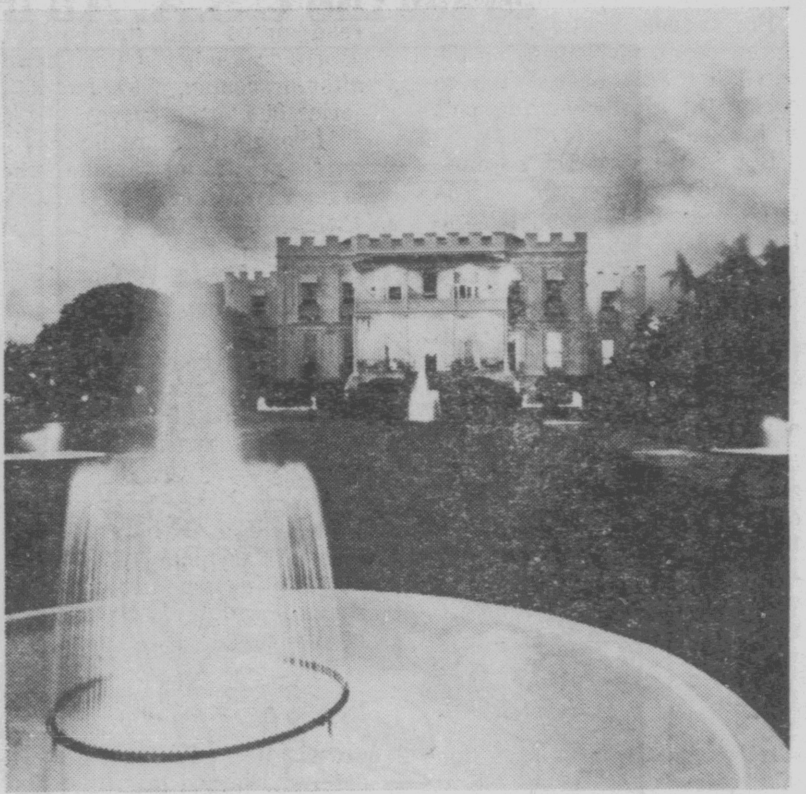
"The guest was told he had to wait a little bit. Then he really became impudent shouting curses in various languages of the world," he said.

"He was jumping with impatience on those very stones on which some time ago Pushkin walked. Everybody was embarrassed and everybody felt the foreigner was displeased.

"Was he offended by someone?"

Makarov said hospitality is one thing, "but it has nothing in common with servility."

'Little England' Flourishes In Caribbean



THE NOTORIOUS PIRATE Sam Lord built this mansion in southern Barbados in 1830. Now a luxury hotel, Sam Lord's Castle is popular with visitors who like to enjoy costly decor plundered from cargo ships nearly 150 years ago.

By ROBIN WRIGHT

BARBADOS, West Indies — In Barbados, dollars are not always currency, cucumbers are not all vegetables, and lilies grow in the sea.

But even more wondrously, life on Barbados is not what most people know as living. It's more like dreaming.

In fact almost everything on this tiny pear-shaped West Indies island takes on a new context, always slightly irregular and always relating to the sea.

TAKE THE dollars that aren't always currency, for example. They are actually ocean animals that live in the mud are known as sand dollars.

The cucumbers that aren't all vegetables are mud-dwellers called sea cucumbers. The lilies that grow in the sea — not surprisingly named sea lilies — are graceful animals that attach themselves to rocks in deep water and have been around since long before the age of the dinosaur.

And the life. . . well, the life on Barbados is equally novel paradoxically combining the sophistication and traditions of the British Isles and the lush vegetation and weather of the tropics with the architecture and spirit of New Orleans. A tropical British New Orleans? Yes.

IMAGINE THIS: The main street of the main city (Bridgetown) is a pastel version of New Orlean's Latin Quarter, soft blue, green, pink, and beige buildings bordered by white wrought iron instead of the traditional black. Quaint terraces overlook narrow streets.

Farther out, gingerbread houses are lined up all in a row, tiny but proud in their fresh paint and colorful trim.

Beyond the city, Barbados shows its tropical side in an endless display of sugar cane plantations, gentle rolling green hills, then bordering beaches.

It's not as mountainous or as lush as its neighboring Indies islands. There is none of the bold beauty. But there is a gentle stability to the surroundings, almost a British restraint.

THE PEOPLE are as gently spirited and friendly as the island appears physically. Considered by many to be the playground of the Caribbean, Barbados is a warm place where natives are relaxed and talkative. They seem somehow to even enjoy the quarter-million people who descend on the tiny island each year.

Sometimes there is a slight communications problem created by the Bajam version of English, a fast, broken rhythmic language full of double negatives and redunancies such as boy-child, sparrow-bird. And then there are the new variations of old words: Destructive is destroyful and expensive is costive.

But it's all part of the charm of the place.

WHAT MAKES Barbados really different from the other Caribbean islands is its cosmopolitan air and level of development. Called "Little England" by its neighbors, its bustles in a way that suggests southern England has been transplanted to the tropics.

This is most obvious in its numbers. With 260,000 residents, the tiny 21-mile-long island is the most crowded of the Caribbean isles and close to the most densely populated island in the world.

Although some have jokingly said they expect it to sink like an overloaded ship into the sea, the fact that one of the island's major exports is people keeps it from being too crowded.

THE BUSTLE has had many positive effects. Far more prosperous than its sisters, Barbados provides a handsome lifestyle for both residents and guests.

Bridgetown is far from being a sleepy island village, featuring fancy shops with both native and European wares. And the "plantocracy" has provided serveral cultural centers.

Among the natives, there is a 98 per cent literacy rate as a result of the 136 government-supported schools and six colleges or vocation centers. And there is a sampling of everything from theater to horse racing, even a Lions Club and a YMCA within the small, 166-square-mile area.

TOURISTS WILL feel the effect of development, but not overdevelopment, in the accommodations and activities available.

The finest luxury hotels in the Caribbean are in Barbados, as well as the greatest variety of sports facilities — two golf courses, many tennis courts, a racetrack, polo field, yacht clubs, a cricket field, and endless places sponsoring deep-sea diving and fishing, surfing, boating, and swimming.

Besides economic enrichment, there are the natural riches that make the island even more attractive. Barbados beaches are among the best in the hemisphere and the weather is considered by many to be the finest in the Western world.

A CONSTANT 10-knot trade wind balances the heat of a caressing sun, providing a naural air-conditioning system. The temperature is 75 to 80 degrees day or night, winter or summer.

The beaches are of two varieties, the silver sands of the west coast washed by the Caribbean, and the rugged front that meets the relentless Atlantic waves on the eastern side.

The majority of luxury hotels are on the Platinum Coast to the west and south where most of the swimming is done. The more rugged northeast or Scotland district provides breathtaking views from the steep cliffs and coves that overlook an ocean that spreads unimpeded from the African coast. A spectacular surf makes it a surfer's paradise.

If that isn't enough consider this as a selling point in favor of a Barbados vacation: It's the only place outside the United States to which George Washington ever traveled. After his trip, he repeatedly wrote of "being enraptured" with the island.

And if it's good enough for George Washington, well. . .

A Landmark Saved, Used

The year 1953 was not a promising one for Washington D.C.'s old Patent Office Building. Legislation was introduced in Congress to raze the building and erect in its place a parking garage!

The once spacious structure had already been chopped up into a warren of small offices filled with federal bureaucrats.

Fortunately, President Dwight Eisenhower and a bipartisan group of senators and congressmen were successful in saving the grand old building. In 1963, it was turned over to the Smithsonian Institution as a home for the National Collection of Fine Arts and the National Portrait Gallery.

Restored to its former glory, the old Patent Office Building today houses one of the capital's most impressive, and least visited, collections of art works.

A visit to the building is worthwhile even if you have no interest in art, because the beautiful old structure — only the White House and the Capitol are older — is an attraction in its own right.

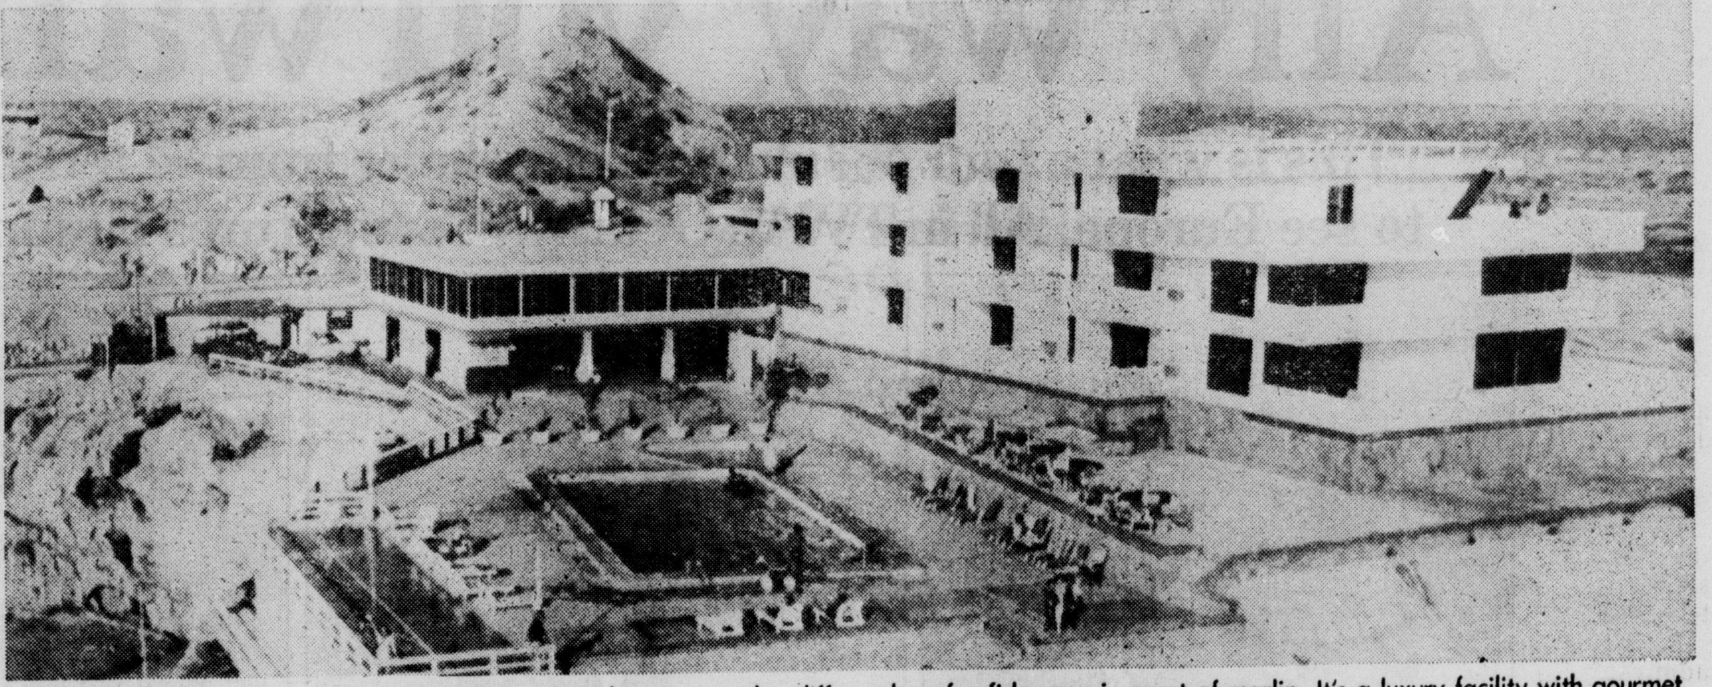
White Sands In New Mexico: Nature's Wonder Work

For countless centuries nature has been forming the 500-square-mile sea of rolling white dunes that make up New Mexico's fabulous White Sands National Monument.

This fascinating formation process, according to the National Automobile Club, involved the washing down of gypsum from the surrounding hills by rains and melting snows, the carrying up of gypsum from below the surface of Tularosa Valley by capillary action of groundwaters.

Although not exactly tropical, White Sands does contain plant and animal life. Many tourists who doubt this have to change their thinking upon sighting representative samples of the 60 plant species found in the monument. And don't let it surprise you if you notice jackrabbits, foxes, coyotes, and other animals running around the dunes.

As soon as you can manage a trip to New Mexico, see for yourself the fantastic results of nature's work in White Sands National Monument. Those rolling white dunes are located just 15 miles from Alamogordo and 54 miles from Las Cruces.



CARNERO INN, built on Punta Carnero in Ecuador on a rocky cliff jutting out into the Pacific Ocean has become a favorite gathering place for fishermen in quest of marlin. It's a luxury facility with gourmet meals and all the other vacation accommodations. But it is the year-around fishing that has become the big attraction.

Marlin Country Beckons To Sportsmen

The marlin is to saltwater fishing what the Kodiak bear, Cape Buffalo and Bengal tiger are to big game hunting.

This is the fish that was the impetus of Hemingway's classic "Old Man and the Sea," and from a sportsfishing standpoint is the unrivaled king of the deep.

Of this clan of billed giants, the blue marlin is reputed to be the largest. Commercial fishermen report catching big blues exceeding 2,000 pounds in weight, but the largest taken on hook and line was a specimen half this size.

Black marlin, on the other hand, rival the blue in size and are plentiful in areas where they can be reached by sportsfishing cruisers. The current rod and reel record for this species was a whopping 1,560-pounder taken off the coast of northern Peru.

White marlin are the smallest species of these billfishes, averaging 50 to 60 pounds in size.

Most popular and perhaps the most plentiful of the marlins is the lean and powerful striped marlin. This tiger-marked billfish averages 250 pounds but is known to reach a weight of twice this size.

Marlin range the world over. Marlin fishing grounds include Hawaii for blues, Venezuela and some of the Caribbean islands for whites, and several far-off places such as Capetown, Africa, New Zealand, and Cairnes, Australia for the black and striped species.

One of the largest concentrations of marlins, however, is found closer to home in the section of Pacific Coast stretching from Salinas, Ecuador, to the Baja Peninsula of Mexico. This is where the fish are, and here are the facilities to allow man and marlin to come to grips with each other.

Along this coast are three marlin fishing hot spots.

First and foremost is Punta Carnero on the coast of Ecuador. Here the Humboldt current clashes with the Equatorial current to form a giant ocean eddy which attracts baitfish and piscatorial predators by the millions. Here are large concentrations of dolphin and sailfish, as well as giant blacks and even more abundant striped marlin.

The current world record was taken a few miles south in northern Peru, and a second place 1,440-pounder was boated right here. Big game fishing is relatively new, and more record catches are expected to be forthcoming as angling pressure increases.

Carnero Inn, a new and luxurious resort hotel built on a rocky cliff jutting out into the Pacific, is the marlin fishing headquarters for this region. This facility features outstanding accommodations and service, gourmet meals, and a variety of packages designed for discriminating sportsmen. For example, a six-night, five-day all-inclusive fishing package is priced at $498.

Good fishing is found here at all months of the year.

Further up the coast at Pinas Bay, Panama is a deluxe fishing resort which has produced a number of outstanding catches of black marlin and is still introducing big game fishermen to the exciting sport of marlin fishing. Tropic Star Lodge offers exclusive week-long packages which include six days of fishing for $1,185 per person, plus $20 for tackle rental. This facility operates year-round, also.

The third marlin hot spot on this stretch of Pacific coast is at Cabo San Lucas, tip of Mexico's Baja Peninsula. Here is a concentration of striped marlin at all seasons and a greater abundance of black marlin in the summer. Sailfish are most plentiful in the winter.

The plush Camino Real offers all-inclusive week-long packages priced at $398 which provides four days of off-shore fishing.

Marlin country is reached from the U.S. by jet flights to Mexico City and a transfer to La Paz, to Panama City, and Guayaquil, Ecuador. Braniff International is a principal carrier serving all of these cities, and can provide further details concerning each of these fishing packages.

THE ACTION IS fast and furious, once the marlin is on the line. The sportsman strains to reel one in, at left, and the big billfish slashes through the water at right. Double strikes are not all that unusual in the prime marlin fishing grounds along the Pacific Coast.

"TRAFFIC LANES" showing up prematurely on your carpets? Since this kind of wear can make its mark on almost any carpet, what can you do to make yours last longer . . . without traffic lanes?

A little thought will tell you ahead of time where heavy traffic occurs in your home . . . along paths where people must move from room to room. In such areas you would do well to choose a carpet fiber noted for wear, such as nylon. Its strong resistance to abrasion is one reason nylon still holds its own among all the newer fibers.

Another solution is to use area rugs over your carpets in heavy traffic areas. Or have an extra piece of carpet cut from the original broadloom at the time of purchase. Have this piece (or pieces) bound and place them over the traffic lanes.

In children's or other heavy activity rooms, a room size or large area rug may be a better answer than wall-to-wall. You can replace the rug inexpensively when worn, and you can also rotate it to distribute the wear evenly.

Ask us about wear factors when you talk over your carpet needs. We can help you choose better . . . and we can also offer you a better choice of great carpet values by America's leading manufacturers. Follow the traffic now to TWA is what travel should be.

"Knowing him gave me the sense of what it meant to search for things in the theater, never to stop searching," says actress Peggy Wood of George M. Cohan in "George M. Cohan: The Man Who Owned Broadway" by John McCabe. "(After) our last visit, I looked back at him — working patiently, alone on that deserted stage. He had never stopped thinking about the theater."

The Real Yankee Doodle Dandy: Total Creature Of The Theater

By DON KEOWN

GEORGE M. COHAN: THE MAN WHO OWNED BROADWAY by John McCabe; Doubleday, 296 pages, $7.95.

For younger Americans the name George M. Cohan no doubt brings to mind a picture of James Cagney bounding across a stage singing "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy . . ." in the classic movie musical still seen from time to time on television.

But while Cagney succeeded admirably in capturing the spirit, mannerisms and to a degree talents of Cohan in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the motion picture had little to do with the real off-stage Cohan and with his life.

There was good reason, for Cohan, soon to die of cancer, in authorizing his depiction on film, specified that his personal life was to be avoided. It was in keeping with an ambivilence that Cohan practiced throughout his life: An unquenchable thirst for the spotlight as a performer, an equal resolve to avoid it as a private person.

John McCabe, actor and writer, attempts — and largely succeeds — to give us the George M. Cohan the motion picture could not in his biography "George M. Cohan: The Man Who Owned Broadway."

What the reader soon realizes is that in knowing Cohan the show business figure he had come to know more of the Cohan the man than he might have realized. Cohan was so much a creature of the theater that there was very little of him left over for a private, away-from-the-stage life. He was never at ease away from the theater.

His involvement began as a very small boy when he joined his parents, Jerry and Nellie, and sister Josie for what was to become a famous vaudeville act as The Four Cohans. Still in what should have been his childhood, the brash and precocious George was soon assuming the primary responsibility for the act from his less forceful father. George M. Cohan's dedication to the stage was to continue, and to grow into stardom, surviving the usual ups and downs, until his death. Even then, knowing he was doomed, he was still engaged in the writing of a new musical in which he would have starred.

Along with Cohan's devotion to the theater, the other key quality that biographer McCabe brings out in his subject is his old-fashionedness. While Cohan did give the theater important innovations, he was fundamentally distrustful of change. It was as though his needle stuck at 1910, and the theater and life he loved dearest were always of that era. His values remained unchanged, and this was reflected in his work for the theater.

He was a sentimentalist, and sometimes childishly so, wallowing in nostalgia. He was an unapologetic flag-waving patriot, but never to the point where he questioned or attacked the loyalty of others not so outspoken in their nationalistic pride. What did arouse his ire was to hear the old things and the old ways denounced as "corny." "Gosh, how I hate that word," he wrote George Buck.

It was this attachment to the past that embroiled Cohan in his one great off-stage controversy. Both actor and producer, he chose to side with the producers when Actors Equity Association decided to strike the professional theater in 1919. It produced great bitterness, and many on the other side never forgave Cohan. And Cohan remained stubbornly anti-union until his death.

But many of his colleagues in the theater who opposed him then came to admire him for his talent, his taste and his vigor. More than any other single figure, for all his conservatism, he kept the Broadway upon which they were dependent, alive and vibrant. Their shared love of the street overcame old antagonisms.

John McCabe brings out all the many facets of the Cohan gifts. He was from the start a song-and-dance-man and remained proud of that title all his life. He was a songwriter whose repertoire ranged from "Over There," the great World War I tune, to "Mary's a Grand Old Name" and other standards.

He was a playwright more prolific than creative, although his "The Tavern" — "a masterwork," says McCabe — rates as one of the landmark plays in American theater history.

He was a producer not given to experimentation, but presenting that with which he was familiar with unfailing charm and taste.

And, often overlooked today, he was a brilliant actor — America's First Actor, he was called in his time. The Cagney portrayal of the song-and-dance-man has caused the thespian side of George M. Cohan to be neglected. Suffice it to say, his protege, Spencer Tracy, not forgotten as an actor, patterned his acting techniques largely after those of Cohan.

Because Cohan was so totally a man of the theater, John McCabe's own background as an actor stands him in good stead in this biography. It permits a professional evaluation of Cohan's work. But more important, it allows an understanding of and compassion for George M. Cohan that might not have been possible otherwise. Cohan saw himself, not as a part of the comedy that is life, but outside it, enjoying it, and with no desire to participate. He was a man uninterested in any other world other than the theater.

If that sounds like a confined and incomplete existence, it apparently was not so for George M. Cohan. As his daughter Mary said after his death: "He was a deeply happy man. The Equity affair was the only thing in his life that every really upset him. For the rest — it was a glorious life, and no one knew it better than he."

One of John McCabe's finest services is that he lays to rest an old myth that George M. Cohan died a man embittered because the times had passed him by. The real Cohan had little interest in the times. He continued to live and work and think very much as he had done before the sweeping social and cultural changes of the middle 1900s — and he was content in doing so.

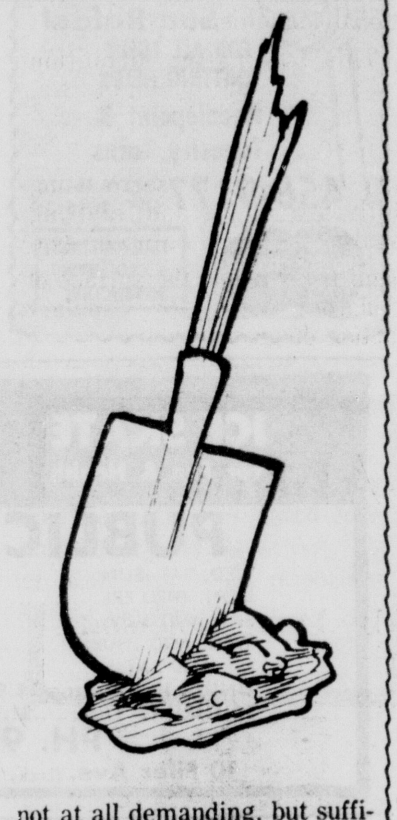
THE BROKEN KEY by Mary Linn Roby; Hawthorn, 213 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.



Mary Linn Roby is one of many women specializing in Gothic suspense fiction, and deserves a ranking well toward the top. She handles the familiar formula of a young woman in peril in a strange and romantic setting with the best of them.

In "The Broken Key," that setting is an estate on the Cornwall coast, and you can't find a much better one for this sort of thing. Artist Sara Grey goes there to claim the cottage willed her by the woman she has served as companion. Once there, she finds herself involved in a bitter family feud — and herself the target of jealousy and hatred.

There is, of course, the essential mysterious, handsome young man.

Good reading for that evening when you want something not at all demanding, but sufficiently involving to take your mind off the cares of the day and tomorrow.

"Knowing him gave me the sense of what it meant to search for things in the theater, never to stop searching," says actress Peggy Wood of George M. Cohan in "George M. Cohan: The Man Who Owned Broadway" by John McCabe. "(After) our last visit, I looked back at him — working patiently, alone on that deserted stage. He had never stopped thinking about the theater."

The Real Yankee Doodle Dandy: Total Creature Of The Theater

By DON KEOWN

GEORGE M. COHAN: THE MAN WHO OWNED BROADWAY by John McCabe; Doubleday, 296 pages, $7.95.

For younger Americans the name George M. Cohan no doubt brings to mind a picture of James Cagney bounding across a stage singing "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy . . ." in the classic movie musical still seen from time to time on television.

But while Cagney succeeded admirably in capturing the spirit, mannerisms and to a degree talents of Cohan in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the motion picture had little to do with the real off-stage Cohan and with his life.

There was good reason, for Cohan, soon to die of cancer, in authorizing his depiction on film, specified that his personal life was to be avoided. It was in keeping with an ambivilence that Cohan practiced throughout his life: An unquenchable thirst for the spotlight as a performer, an equal resolve to avoid it as a private person.

John McCabe, actor and writer, attempts — and largely succeeds — to give us the George M. Cohan the motion picture could not in his biography "George M. Cohan: The Man Who Owned Broadway."

What the reader soon realizes is that in knowing Cohan the show business figure he had come to know more of the Cohan the man than he might have realized. Cohan was so much a creature of the theater that there was very little of him left over for a private, away-from-the-stage life. He was never at ease away from the theater.

His involvement began as a very small boy when he joined his parents, Jerry and Nellie, and sister Josie for what was to become a famous vaudeville act as The Four Cohans. Still in what should have been his childhood, the brash and precocious George was soon assuming the primary responsibility for the act from his less forceful father. George M. Cohan's dedication to the stage was to continue, and to grow into stardom, surviving the usual ups and downs, until his death. Even then, knowing he was doomed, he was still engaged in the writing of a new musical in which he would have starred.

Along with Cohan's devotion to the theater, the other key quality that biographer McCabe brings out in his subject is his old-fashionedness. While Cohan did give the theater important innovations, he was fundamentally distrustful of change. It was as though his needle stuck at 1910, and the theater and life he loved dearest were always of that era. His values remained unchanged, and this was reflected in his work for the theater.

He was a sentimentalist, and sometimes childishly so, wallowing in nostalgia. He was an unapologetic flag-waving patriot, but never to the point where he questioned or attacked the loyalty of others not so outspoken in their nationalistic pride. What did arouse his ire was to hear the old things and the old ways denounced as "corny." "Gosh, how I hate that word," he wrote George Buck.

It was this attachment to the past that embroiled Cohan in his one great off-stage controversy. Both actor and producer, he chose to side with the producers when Actors Equity Association decided to strike the professional theater in 1919. It produced great bitterness, and many on the other side never forgave Cohan. And Cohan remained stubbornly anti-union until his death.

But many of his colleagues in the theater who opposed him then came to admire him for his talent, his taste and his vigor. More than any other single figure, for all his conservatism, he kept the Broadway upon which they were dependent, alive and vibrant. Their shared love of the street overcame old antagonisms.

John McCabe brings out all the many facets of the Cohan gifts. He was from the start a song-and-dance-man and remained proud of that title all his life. He was a songwriter whose repertoire ranged from "Over There," the great World War I tune, to "Mary's a Grand Old Name" and other standards.

He was a playwright more prolific than creative, although his "The Tavern" — "a masterwork," says McCabe — rates as one of the landmark plays in American theater history.

He was a producer not given to experimentation, but presenting that with which he was familiar with unfailing charm and taste.

And, often overlooked today, he was a brilliant actor — America's First Actor, he was called in his time. The Cagney portrayal of the song-and-dance-man has caused the thespian side of George M. Cohan to be neglected. Suffice it to say, his protege, Spencer Tracy, not forgotten as an actor, patterned his acting techniques largely after those of Cohan.

Because Cohan was so totally a man of the theater, John McCabe's own background as an actor stands him in good stead in this biography. It permits a professional evaluation of Cohan's work. But more important, it allows an understanding of and compassion for George M. Cohan that might not have been possible otherwise. Cohan saw himself, not as a part of the comedy that is life, but outside it, enjoying it, and with no desire to participate. He was a man uninterested in any other world other than the theater.

If that sounds like a confined and incomplete existence, it apparently was not so for George M. Cohan. As his daughter Mary said after his death: "He was a deeply happy man. The Equity affair was the only thing in his life that every really upset him. For the rest — it was a glorious life, and no one knew it better than he."

One of John McCabe's finest services is that he lays to rest an old myth that George M. Cohan died a man embittered because the times had passed him by. The real Cohan had little interest in the times. He continued to live and work and think very much as he had done before the sweeping social and cultural changes of the middle 1900s — and he was content in doing so.

Books For Juniors —

In this age of television cartoons and comic books, can nursery rhymes still win the affection of children?

They can if they are as well done as McGraw-Hill's version of "The Moving Adventures of Old Dame Trot and Her Comical Cat," with whimsical, colorful pictures by the one and only Paul Galdone.

Galdone came upon the verse in an old chap book, published in England in 1807 by W. T. Darton, that he found as part of a treasure trove of such works in the 200-year-old home of a Vermont neighbor.

Enchanted by the rhyme, Galdone was inspired to do his own version. The lilt of the verse is irresistible. And the gifted Galdone has loaded the pages with art with eye-appeal and hilarity.

It's a $4.95 classic.

ANOTHER age-old tale that lasts and lasts is Charles Perrault's "The Little Red Riding Hood," first published in 1967. Henry Z. Walck has republished it with illustrations by William Stobbs, that alternate between dramatic black and white, and vivid colors. And Kathleen Lines has appended a brief history of the story. One note: The ending is Perrault's original one, and not the watered down version that developed in later tellings. It's a good job, all around, of keeping alive an old favorite, and it was never better illustrated. The price: $4.95.

George Mendoza is a familiar name in children's literature, as it should be. For "The Alphabet Boat: A seagoing Alphabet Book" (American Heritage, $4.95) is his 100th book for youngsters. It's an ABC book that, as the title indicates, relates the letters to nautical terms, from A for anchor, to Z for zephyr. Mendoza's text is brief and catchy, and tells a story of adventure at sea, while artist-author Lawrence Di Fiori has done some delightful illustrations that feature a two-member crew in sailor suits, one boy, one girl, the same ages as the readers. Mendoza and Di Fiori also give their young viewers a quick lesson in the ways of the sea and the kinds of vessels, along with the ABCs.

"When Grandfather Was a Boy" (Mc-Graw-Hill, $4.95) by Robert Pease, art by William Dugan, transports somewhat older youngsters back to ages ago, when there was no television, not even movies, and you could mail a letter for two cents. But after covering the 1910 era, it also covers the 1940s of the next generation, the 1970s of today, and even offers a preview of the 2000 of the generation to come. Pease, an architect, has written an informative and interesting text that traces the changing pattern of life in America in ways most meaningful to youngsters. The illustrations are instructive and appealing.

Marin Poet's Book Of Verse

Walt Green, commercial artist of 1732 Lincoln Ave., San Rafael, is the writer of a book of poetry simply entitled "Poems."

In softcover, and published by the poet himself, the clean, attractive printing is the work of Gita Graphics Ltd. of London, through arrangements made by Green while traveling in Britain and Europe.

The verse, both free and rhymed, ranges from a very contemporary "The World Is," "City" and "Wednesday Afternoon" to a nostalgic "Mustachio" tribute to his father; from the deadly serious "And War" to a humorous "St. Pantaleone" and "Mr. Mosby Said."

The book can be purchased from the poet at $2.50 or from City Lights Bookstore in San Francisco.

Book Award Goes To An Englishman

John Burningham, designer, artist, cartoonist and author-illustrator of "Mr. Gumpy's Outing," has been awarded the sixth annual Boston Globe-Horn Book Award for the best illustrations in a book for children.

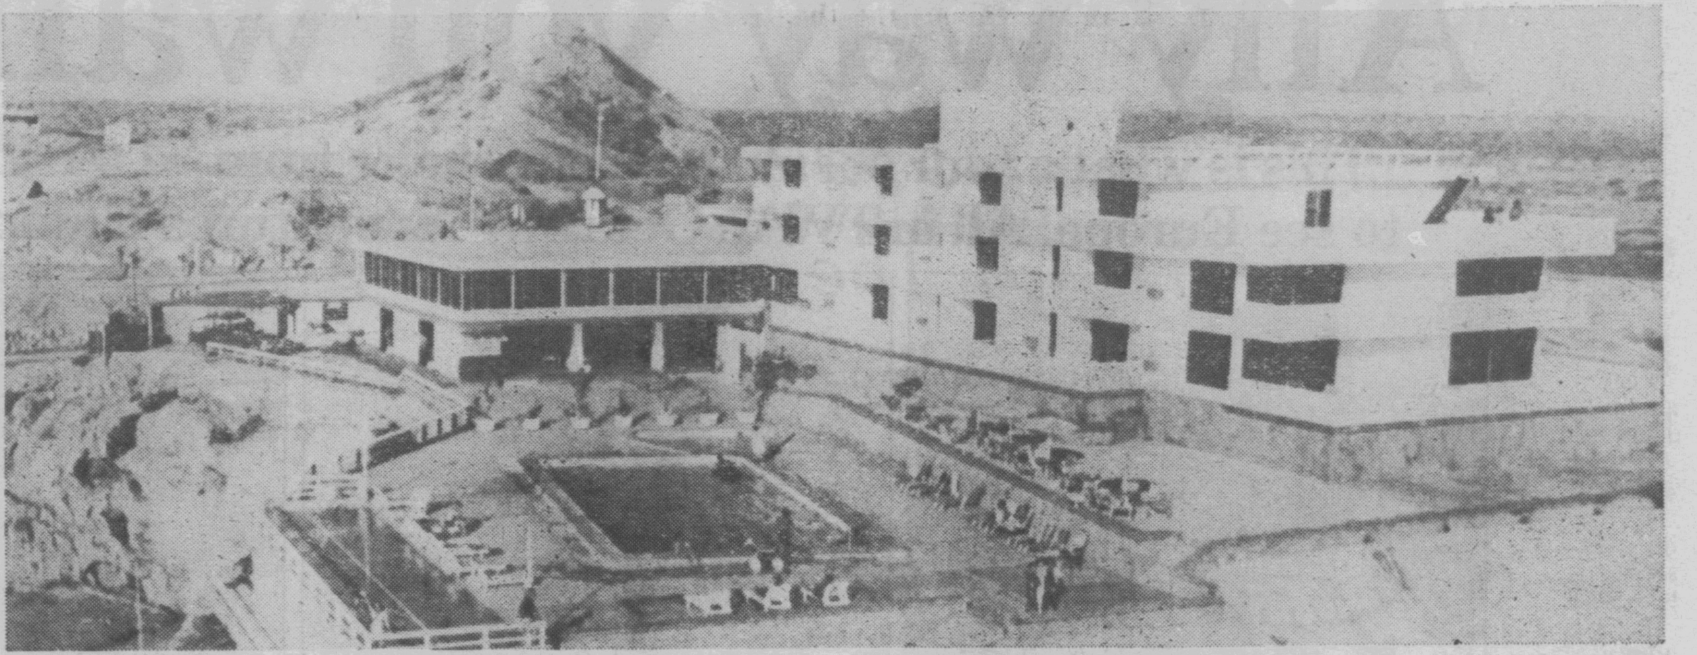
White Sands In New Mexico: Nature's Wonder Work

For countless centuries nature has been forming the 500-square-mile sea of rolling white dunes that make up New Mexico's fabulous White Sands National Monument.

This fascinating formation process, according to the National Automobile Club, involved the washing down of gypsum from the surrounding hills by rains and melting snows, the carrying up of gypsum from below the surface of Tularosa Valley by capillary action of groundwaters.

Although not exactly tropical, White Sands does contain plant and animal life. Many tourists who doubt this have to change their thinking upon sighting representative samples of the 60 plant species found in the monument. And don't let it surprise you if you notice jackrabbits, foxes, coyotes, and other animals running around the dunes.

As soon as you can manage a trip to New Mexico, see for yourself the fantastic results of nature's work in White Sands National Monument. Those rolling white dunes are located just 15 miles from Alamogordo and 54 miles from Las Cruces.



CARNERO INN, built on Punta Carnero in Ecuador on a rocky cliff jutting out into the Pacific Ocean has become a favorite gathering place for fishermen in quest of marlin. It's a luxury facility with gourmet meals and all the other vacation accommodations. But it is the year-around fishing that has become the big attraction.

Marlin Country Beckons To Sportsmen

The marlin is to saltwater fishing what the Kodiak bear, Cape Buffalo and Bengal tiger are to big game hunting.

This is the fish that was the impetus of Hemingway's classic "Old Man and the Sea," and from a sportsfishing standpoint is the unrivaled king of the deep.

Of this clan of billed giants, the blue marlin is reputed to be the largest. Commercial fishermen report catching big blues exceeding 2,000 pounds in weight, but the largest taken on hook and line was a specimen half this size.

Black marlin, on the other hand, rival the blue in size and are plentiful in areas where they can be reached by sportsfishing cruisers. The current rod and reel record for this species was a whopping 1,560-pounder taken off the coast of northern Peru.

White marlin are the smallest species of these billfishes, averaging 50 to 60 pounds in size.

Most popular and perhaps the most plentiful of the marlins is the lean and powerful striped marlin. This tiger-marked billfish averages 250 pounds but is known to reach a weight of twice this size.

Marlin range the world over. Marlin fishing grounds include Hawaii for blues, Venezuela and some of the Caribbean islands for whites, and several far-off places such as Capetown, Africa, New Zealand, and Cairnes, Australia for the black and striped species.

One of the largest concentrations of marlins, however, is found closer to home in the section of Pacific Coast stretching from Salinas, Ecuador, to the Baja Peninsula of Mexico. This is where the fish are, and here are the facilities to allow man and marlin to come to grips with each other.

Along this coast are three marlin fishing hot spots.

First and foremost is Punta Carnero on the coast of Ecuador. Here the Humboldt current clashes with the Equatorial current to form a giant ocean eddy which attracts baitfish and piscatorial predators by the millions. Here are large concentrations of dolphin and sailfish, as well as giant blacks and even more abundant striped marlin.

The current world record was taken a few miles south in northern Peru, and a second place 1,440-pounder was boated right here. Big game fishing is relatively new, and more record catches are expected to be forthcoming as angling pressure increases.

Carnero Inn, a new and luxurious resort hotel built on a rocky cliff jutting out into the Pacific, is the marlin fishing headquarters for this region. This facility features outstanding accommodations and service, gourmet meals, and a variety of packages designed for discriminating sportsmen. For example, a six-night, five-day all-inclusive fishing package is priced at $498.

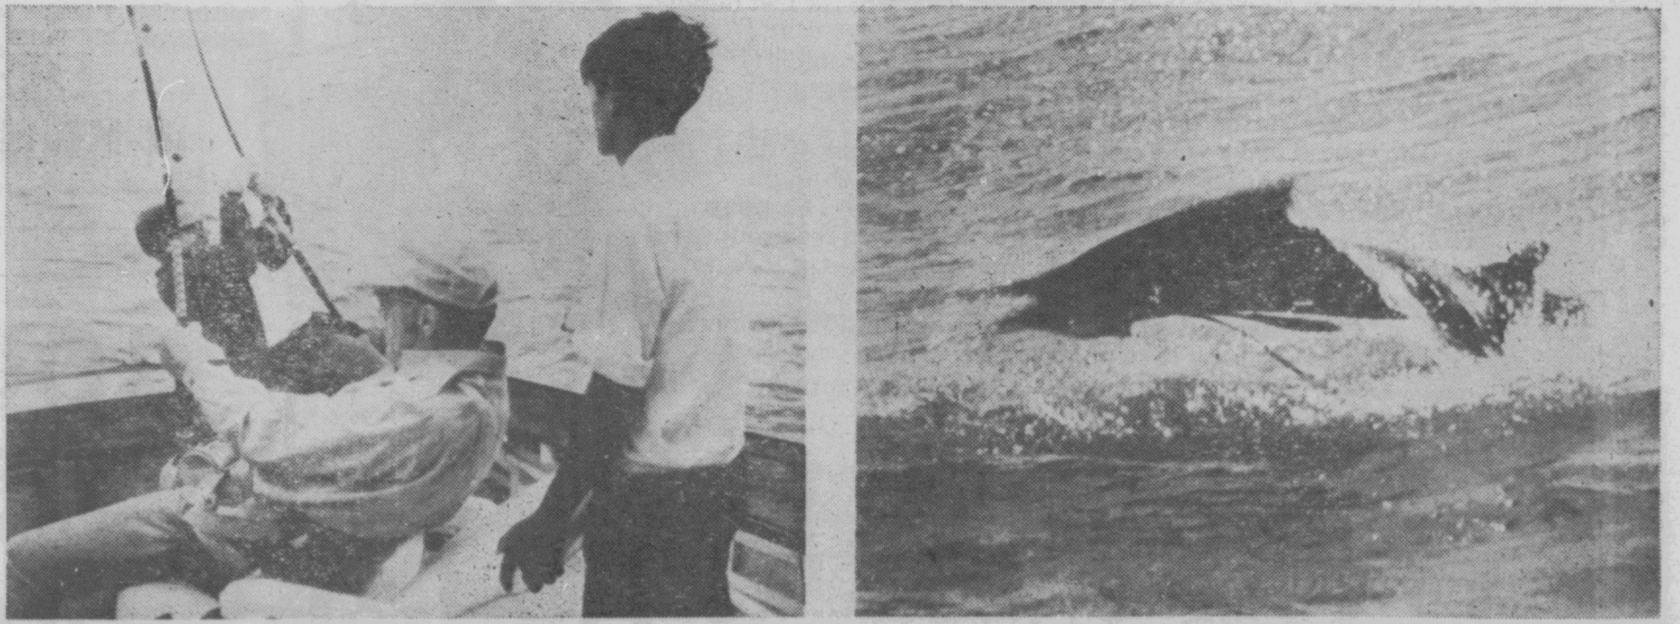
Good fishing is found here at all months of the year.

Further up the coast at Pinas Bay, Panama is a deluxe fishing resort which has produced a number of outstanding catches of black marlin and is still introducing big game fishermen to the exciting sport of marlin fishing. Tropic Star Lodge offers exclusive week-long packages which include six days of fishing for $1,185 per person, plus $20 for tackle rental. This facility operates year-round, also.

The third marlin hot spot on this stretch of Pacific coast is at Cabo San Lucas, tip of Mexico's Baja Peninsula. Here is a concentration of striped marlin at all seasons and a greater abundance of black marlin in the summer. Sailfish are most plentiful in the winter.

The plush Camino Real offers all-inclusive week-long packages priced at $398 which provides four days of off-shore fishing.

Marlin country is reached from the U.S. by jet flights to Mexico City and a transfer to La Paz, to Panama City, and Guayaquil, Ecuador. Braniff International is a principal carrier serving all of these cities, and can provide further details concerning each of these fishing packages.



THE ACTION IS fast and furious, once the marlin is on the line. The sportsman strains to reel one in, at left, and the big billfish slashes through the water at right. Double strikes are not all that unusual in the prime marlin fishing grounds along the Pacific Coast.

"TRAFFIC LANES" showing up prematurely on your carpets? Since this kind of wear can make its mark on almost any carpet, what can you do to make yours last longer . . . without traffic lanes?

A little thought will tell you ahead of time where heavy traffic occurs in your home . . . along paths where people must move from room to room. In such areas you would do well to choose a carpet fiber noted for wear, such as nylon. Its strong resistance to abrasion is one reason nylon still holds its own among all the newer fibers.

Another solution is to use area rugs over your carpets in heavy traffic areas. Or have an extra piece of carpet cut from the original broadloom at the time of purchase. Have this piece (or pieces) bound and place them over the traffic lanes.

In children's or other heavy activity rooms, a room size or large area rug may be a better answer than wall-to-wall. You can replace the rug inexpensively when worn, and you can also rotate it to distribute the wear evenly.

Ask us about wear factors when you talk over your carpet needs. We can help you choose better . . . and we can also offer you a better choice of great carpet values by America's leading manufacturers. Follow the traffic now to

The Hip World Poet Laureate

THE FALL OF AMERICA, Poems of These States, 1965-1971 by Allen Ginsberg; City Lights, 188 pages, softcover, $2.50. Reviewed by Jacob Gaines.

The poet laureate of the hip world often speaks in a voice pitched beyond the hearing range of those over 30.

His famous "HOWL" was for some in such a voice. And in this collection of poems, written and/or recorded during a six-year trip across the country, Allen Ginsberg maintains the esoteric quality of language that sometimes obscures his meaning for those in the un-hip generation.

Yet for all Americans there is in his work a beauty and love of language, of deep caring and often of profundity.

It is not presumptious that Ginsberg dedicates this book to Walt Whitman. Whitman if he were writing today might well dedicate a current book to Allen Ginsberg. They are closely linked in their love of the land and its people, in their power and in their dreams.

Ginsberg's is the voice of young America. He is, however, getting old. And the old man with the voice of young America speaks with an ancient wisdom and a sure sense of poetry and the cadence of words.

Richard Howard in his book "Alone with America" writes, "The characteristic Ginsberg product nowadays, when he is to be found at any point in the world, is the transit poem in which 'new sentences spring forth out of the scene to describe spontaneous forms of time. . ."

One evening in the hot sulphur baths at Esalen, I said to a face resting on a wiry greying beard spread like elbows on the steaming water, "Aren't you Arthur Ginsberg?"

"Allen," he said gently, and even before I had time to be embarrassed he asked me about myself. He was famous, had lived in India, had traveled all over the land and the world. We talked a long time. He was intersted in everything I had done, was doing; we talked only about me.

As we parted, I asked if he knew of a place to live in Big Sur. "I'm living in the woods," he said, "in a sleeping bag."

That was in May 1971 when he was writing "Bixby Canyon Ocean Path Word Breeze" contained in this collection.

Gotham Book has published the Bixby poem in hard cover; on it is Emil White's lovely painting of Bixby Bridge.

The Milovan Djilas Story Continued

MEMOIR OF A REVOLUTIONARY by Milovan Djilas; Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc., 390 pages, $12. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

Revolutionaries take themselves far too seriously; and Communist revolutionaries, because they are dogmatic and inflexible, especially lack humor and color, and are therefore very boring (except to another Communist revolutionary).

Some of these critical comments apply to Milovan Djilas and his writings, but he was to be the disciple of a more enlightened form of Communism and in the future he was to "jump the wall" and end party affiliations.

He came from Montenegro. Slight and poor of health, he nevertheless proved to be a tough guerrilla fighter. And he was deadly serious. In 1929 at 17 he entered the University of Belgrade — a Montenegran intellectual of peasant stock who had never seen a train. The following year marked the beginning of the dictatorship of King Alexander Karadjordjevik which created the proper atmosphere for student movements, illegal organizations, and experiments in new ideologies. Endles discussions with fellow students and socialist leaders are a little hard to take, but the monotony is relieved by the fact that the students are gathered up in occasional police sweeps.

Djilas admits that in 1932 he was "very confused ideologically and politically," and devoted more time to his writings — poetry, essays, and social comments. He published with some success, but soon his gradual acceptance of Communism alienated him from the magazine for which he had been writing. Finally there was a total commitment to Communism: ". . .New ideas and even more the physical demands of the movement, made a claim on a man's physical and spiritual energies, and thereby erased all poetic passions, and any other feeling that might stand in the way of immediate revolutionary objectives. . ." But he did find time to fall in love and marry a comrade, Mitra Mitrovic.

MILOVAN DJILAS
Tough and serious

At the time of the Nazi invasion of his homeland, his iron determination and dedication helped sustain the partisan movement. He gained the admiration of Stalin as a "brilliant guerrilla leader;" and under Tito's leadership, became chief architect of the Communist revolution. The Yugoslav communists built an organization strong enough to resist Hitler's Germany and later to follow an independent route and spur Stalin's Russia.

The western allies found Djilas arrogant and unfriendly in his dedication, to the embarrassment of Tito. But Djilas became a great admirer of the United States and its economic and industrial know-how, and urged an acceptance among his associates of a British style of Socialism. Djilas helped to mold minds, while others organized cadres. All the while he maintained a special "father and son" relationship with Tito.

This book is the second volume of the life story of Djilas that began with "Land Without Justice." What is to come is the fall from power, from the vice-presidency, from the head of the Politburo, to resignation from the party. The present volume, however, is a serious chronicle of the struggles and triumphs of a dedicated revolutionary who never stagnated and never allowed hallowed dogmas to cloud his enterprise and intellect. It is written with little humor and makes too many assumptions, but taken as a whole it is good contemporary history.

Israel Thwarts Another Writer

BRIDE OF ISRAEL, MY LOVE by Richard Llewellyn, Doubleday, 297 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

The confusions of modern Israel have a fascination for writers. Latest victim of the compulsion to explain this contradictory land is Richard Llewellyn, author of the memorable "How Green Was My Valley."

But it is a long way from Wales to Israel, and Llewellyn should have stayed home.

His protagonist is a highly trained technician, a refugee from modern science. Heroines include a once-famous opera singer; the daughter of a famous rabbi; and various other females endowed with long, slim, silken legs.

The technician falls in and out of love, in and out of bed, builds a plant in the desert, works with Palestinians, is bombed, nearly killed, suffers because he is part-Jewish, cannot decide to become a convert, and cannot speak Hebrew. The plot consists of these adventures, plus his attempt to "find himself."

The hero tells his own story, in stream-of-consciousness style, without any aid from old-fashioned quotation marks — though he is given to long conversations that seem to be meant to advance the plot and let the reader know what is happening.

The good thing in this book is Llewellyn's lyricism which, while it echoes the King James version, os worth reading. For example, he writes, "The trees up there blazed little flames of green and blue shadow poured down to the violet of the valley, and a stream, silver, frothed over the waterfall to the fish ponds still pink in the dawn."

Richard Llewellyn is a gifted author who has written excellent novels. This is not one of them.

TERRACED HELL by Tetsuro Ogawa; Tuttle., 220 pages, $7.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The stories of the Bataan Death March and of the hopeless defense of Corregidor and the Bataan Peninsula by American and Filipino troops have been told many times. "Terraced Hell" tells a different story — that of the flight and defeat of the Japanese after MacArthur's army returned to Luzon.

Tetsuro Ogawa was a civilian employee with the Japanese army. His personal feelings — his desire to surrender vs. his entrenched belief that to do so would be dishonorable — are intertwined with the story of the futile and foolish movements of the remnants of that army after it was cut off by the advancing Americans in the closing months of World War II.

Ogawa was his own translator, and his English is not free of flaws, but his book is interesting — a different look at World War II in the Philippines.

"Knowing him gave me the sense of what it meant to search for things in the theater, never to stop searching," says actress Peggy Wood of George M. Cohan in "George M. Cohan: The Man Who Owned Broadway" by John McCabe. "(After) our last visit, I looked back at him — working patiently, alone on that deserted stage. He had never stopped thinking about the theater."

The Real Yankee Doodle Dandy: Total Creature Of The Theater

By DON KEOWN

GEORGE M. COHAN: THE MAN WHO OWNED BROADWAY by John McCabe; Doubleday, 296 pages, $7.95.

For younger Americans the name George M. Cohan no doubt brings to mind a picture of James Cagney bounding across a stage singing "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy . . ." in the classic movie musical still seen from time to time on television.

But while Cagney succeeded admirably in capturing the spirit, mannerisms and to a degree talents of Cohan in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the motion picture had little to do with the real off-stage Cohan and with his life.

There was good reason, for Cohan, soon to die of cancer, in authorizing his depiction on film, specified that his personal life was to be avoided. It was in keeping with an ambivilence that Cohan practiced throughout his life: An unquenchable thirst for the spotlight as a performer, an equal resolve to avoid it as a private person.

John McCabe, actor and writer, attempts — and largely succeeds — to give us the George M. Cohan the motion picture could not in his biography "George M. Cohan: The Man Who Owned Broadway."

What the reader soon realizes is that in knowing Cohan the show business figure he had come to know more of the Cohan the man than he might have realized. Cohan was so much a creature of the theater that there was very little of him left over for a private, away-from-the-stage life. He was never at ease away from the theater.

His involvement began as a very small boy when he joined his parents, Jerry and Nellie, and sister Josie for what was to become a famous vaudeville act as The Four Cohans. Still in what should have been his childhood, the brash and precocious George was soon assuming the primary responsibility for the act from his less forceful father. George M. Cohan's dedication to the stage was to continue, and to grow into stardom, surviving the usual ups and downs, until his death. Even then, knowing he was doomed, he was still engaged in the writing of a new musical in which he would have starred.

Along with Cohan's devotion to the theater, the other key quality that biographer McCabe brings out in his subject is his old-fashionedness. While Cohan did give the theater important innovations, he was fundamentally distrustful of change. It was as though his needle stuck at 1910, and the theater and life he loved dearest were always of that era. His values remained unchanged, and this was reflected in his work for the theater.

He was a sentimentalist, and sometimes childishly so, wallowing in nostalgia. He was an unapologetic flag-waving patriot, but never to the point where he questioned or attacked the loyalty of others not so outspoken in their nationalistic pride. What did arouse his ire was to hear the old things and the old ways denounced as "corny." "Gosh, how I hate that word," he wrote George Buck.

It was this attachment to the past that embroiled Cohan in his one great off-stage controversy. Both actor and producer, he chose to side with the producers when Actors Equity Association decided to strike the professional theater in 1919. It produced great bitterness, and many on the other side never forgave Cohan. And Cohan remained stubbornly anti-union until his death.

But many of his colleagues in the theater who opposed him then came to admire him for his talent, his taste and his vigor. More than any other single figure, for all his conservatism, he kept the Broadway upon which they were dependent, alive and vibrant. Their shared love of the street overcame old antagonisms.

John McCabe brings out all the many facets of the Cohan gifts. He was from the start a song-and-dance-man and remained proud of that title all his life. He was a songwriter whose repertoire ranged from "Over There," the great World War I tune, to "Mary's a Grand Old Name" and other standards.

He was a playwright more prolific than creative, although his "The Tavern" — "a masterwork," says McCabe — rates as one of the landmark plays in American theater history.

He was a producer not given to experimentation, but presenting that with which he was familiar with unfailing charm and taste.

And, often overlooked today, he was a brilliant actor — America's First Actor, he was called in his time. The Cagney portrayal of the song-and-dance-man has caused the thespian side of George M. Cohan to be neglected. Suffice it to say, his protege, Spencer Tracy, not forgotten as an actor, patterned his acting techniques largely after those of Cohan.

Because Cohan was so totally a man of the theater, John McCabe's own background as an actor stands him in good stead in this biography. It permits a professional evaluation of Cohan's work. But more important, it allows an understanding of and compassion for George M. Cohan that might not have been possible otherwise. Cohan saw himself, not as a part of the comedy that is life, but outside it, enjoying it, and with no desire to participate. He was a man uninterested in any other world other than the theater.

If that sounds like a confined and incomplete existence, it apparently was not so for George M. Cohan. As his daughter Mary said after his death: "He was a deeply happy man. The Equity affair was the only thing in his life that every really upset him. For the rest — it was a glorious life, and no one knew it better than he."

One of John McCabe's finest services is that he lays to rest an old myth that George M. Cohan died a man embittered because the times had passed him by. The real Cohan had little interest in the times. He continued to live and work and think very much as he had done before the sweeping social and cultural changes of the middle 1900s — and he was content in doing so.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE BROKEN KEY by Mary Linn Roby; Hawthorn, 213 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Mary Linn Roby is one of many women specializing in Gothic suspense fiction, and deserves a ranking well toward the top. She handles the familiar formula of a young woman in peril in a strange and romantic setting with the best of them.

In "The Broken Key," that setting is an estate on the Cornwall coast, and you can't find a much better one for this sort of thing. Artist Sara Grey goes there to claim the cottage willed her by the woman she has served as companion. Once there, she finds herself involved in a bitter family feud — and herself the target of jealousy and hatred.

There is, of course, the essential mysterious, handsome young man.

Good reading for that evening when you want something not at all demanding, but sufficiently involving to take your mind off the cares of the day and tomorrow.

TULIPS AND DAFFODILS

Fill the heart with the magic of tulips
Whose petals, sexy satin-textured,

And that of voluptuous butter-yellow daffodils,
Heads hanging demurely,

Causing the most casual admirer to
Surrender with love.

DEPENDENCE ON DESIGN

The quality of kindness in your voice
is like the benediction of a priest:

it guides me when decision calls for choice,
it blesses me like grace before a feast.

The love your eyes communicate so well,
more eloquent than any spoken vow

brings peace, when my vindictive thoughts rebel against injustices that laws allow.

I need the staying power of your sense
when heart and reason quarrel in my thought.

Your wisdom knows the rhyme of recompense,
a gift you give, unbeggared and unbought.

Whatever imprint my life leaves on earth
is but a stencil of your patterned worth.

Books For Juniors —

In this age of television cartoons and comic books, can nursery rhymes still win the affection of children?

They can if they are as well done as McGraw-Hill's version of "The Moving Adventures of Old Dame Trot and Her Comical Cat," with whimsical, colorful pictures by the one and only Paul Galdone.

Galdone came upon the verse in an old chap book, published in England in 1807 by W. T. Darton, that he found as part of a treasure trove of such works in the 200-year-old home of a Vermont neighbor.

Enchanted by the rhyme, Galdone was inspired to do his own version. The lilt of the verse is irresistible. And the gifted Galdone has loaded the pages with art with eye-appeal and hilarity.

It's a $4.95 classic.

ANOTHER age-old tale that lasts and lasts is Charles Perrault's "The Little Red Riding Hood," first published in 1967. Henry Z. Walck has republished it with illustrations by William Stobbs, that alternate between dramatic black and white, and vivid colors. And Kathleen Lines has appended a brief history of the story. One note: The ending is Perrault's original one, and not the watered down version that developed in later tellings. It's a good job, all around, of keeping alive an old favorite, and it was never better illustrated. The price: $4.95.

George Mendoza is a familiar name in children's literature, as it should be. For "The Alphabet Boat: A seagoing Alphabet Book" (American Heritage, $4.95) is his 100th book for youngsters. It's an ABC book that, as the title indicates, relates the letters to nautical terms, from A for anchor, to Z for zephyr. Mendoza's text is brief and catchy, and tells a story of adventure at sea, while artist-author Lawrence Di Fiori has done some delightful illustrations that feature a two-member crew in sailor suits, one boy, one girl, the same ages as the readers. Mendoza and Di Fiori also give their young viewers a quick lesson in the ways of the sea and the kinds of vessels, along with the ABCs.

"When Grandfather Was a Boy" (Mc-Graw-Hill, $4.95) by Robert Pease, art by William Dugan, transports somewhat older youngsters back to ages ago, when there was no television, not even movies, and you could mail a letter for two cents. But after covering the 1910 era, it also covers the 1940s of the next generation, the 1970s of today, and even offers a preview of the 2000 of the generation to come. Pease, an architect, has written an informative and interesting text that traces the changing pattern of life in America in ways most meaningful to youngsters. The illustrations are instructive and appealing.

Marin Poet's Book Of Verse

Walt Green, commercial artist of 1732 Lincoln Ave., San Rafael, is the writer of a book of poetry simply entitled "Poems."

In softcover, and published by the poet himself, the clean, attractive printing is the work of Gita Graphics Ltd. of London, through arrangements made by Green while traveling in Britain and Europe.

The verse, both free and rhymed, ranges from a very contemporary "The World Is," "City" and "Wednesday Afternoon" to a nostalgic "Mustachio" tribute to his father; from the deadly serious "And War" to a humorous "St. Pantaleone" and "Mr. Mosby Said."

The book can be purchased from the poet at $2.50 or from City Lights Bookstore in San Francisco.

Book Award Goes To An Englishman

John Burningham, designer, artist, cartoonist and author-illustrator of "Mr. Gumpy's Outing," has been awarded the sixth annual Boston Globe-Horn Book Award for the best illustrations in a book for children.

Getting The Best Results With Varnish

The Handyman's Pages

By ANDY LANG

Anyone who has recently finished or refinished furniture with varnish has used a finishing material with a basic difference between it and the varnish used by his grandfather.

Modern varnishes contain synthetic resins as opposed to the natural resins used many years ago. While there is some difference of opinion among old-timers as to the superiority of one over the other, manufacturers say that the modern product can be applied easier and produces a better finish, a claim with which I am inclined to agree.

IF IT IS MORE durable, as they also say, it must have an amazing longevity and stability, since furniture pieces I varnished more than 30 years ago are still in prime condition.

Because there are different kinds of synthetic resins with different kinds of characteristics, the label on the can you purchase should be read carefully, not only to determine whether it will produce the result you wish to achieve but to guide you in its usage to obtain maximum effectiveness.

Dust is the big enemy of varnish.

NOT ONLY SHOULD the object being finished be cleaned thoroughly just before the varnishing, but the application should be done in a room or area that is as dust-free as possible. It also is important that the clothes of the user be free of lint and dust. And no one should go in and out of the room while the varnish is drying.

No matter how careful you think you have been, every so often while you are working, you will notice a piece of dust settle in the wet varnish. The tip of a very fine small brush or a toothpick can be used to lift up the speck of dust the moment you notice it. The tiny indentation in the surface will be quickly closed up by the surrounding varnish.

Do not shake or stir the varnish, otherwise air bubbles that form will be transferred to the work.

THE VARNISH should be applied by brush in a free, flowing motion — first with the grain, then immediately across the grain. Then, using the same brush without dipping it in the varnish again, return to the with-the-grain strokes. On this third movement with what will now be a nearly dry brush, use light strokes with only the tips of the bristles. Known as tipping, this procedure smooths out irregularities.

Turn the piece of furniture as many times as possible so that you are working on a horizontal surface. This isn't always possible, so when it isn't, work extra carefully to avoid dripping.

(Varnishing, lacquering, shellacking and other methods of finishing wood are detailed in Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 30 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, Post Office Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743.)

HIDDEN ENTRANCES TO YOUR HOME?

A home anywhere in Marin County might have several hidden entrances and some very unwanted intruders. Termites!

Mud tubes like those shown above are built by subterranean termites to sneak into Marin's nicest homes. Termites invite themselves into both new and old homes. And contrary to popular belief, they love dining at homes built on concrete-slab floors (especially ones with radiant heat). In fact, 60% of all Marin homes have termites present right now.

Once inside, the termites eat their unsuspecting hosts out of house and home. Literally.

Termites eat wood. And since these extremely social insects live in giant nests with up to 250,000 relatives, having the family up to dinner can be a very expensive proposition.

The termite workers shuttle up and down constantly, carrying bits of wood back to the nest. But they are masters at keeping their activity hidden. They work inside of walls and floors, then span open spaces with mud tubes. So a considerable portion of your house can be out to lunch before you know it!

Every homeowner in Marin should check regularly for termite mud tubes around his foundation, post footings, garage, fences, and particularly in winter, the hot water heater and furnace areas. If tubes are found, call Hinkley & Gordon immediately.

Hinkley & Gordon is a state-licensed structural pest control company. For two generations, we've been providing Marin's most expert and thorough pest control services.

The cost of a Hinkley & Gordon inspection is just $35 for the average Marin home. And it certainly beats allowing a sneak attack on your home investment.

The Hip World Poet Laureate

THE FALL OF AMERICA, Poems of These States, 1965-1971 by Allen Ginsberg; City Lights, 188 pages, softcover, $2.50. Reviewed by Jacob Gaines.

The poet laureate of the hip world often speaks in a voice pitched beyond the hearing range of those over 30.

His famous "HOWL" was for some in such a voice. And in this collection of poems, written and/or recorded during a six-year trip across the country, Allen Ginsberg maintains the esoteric quality of language that sometimes obscures his meaning for those in the un-hip generation.

Yet for all Americans there is in his work a beauty and love of language, of deep caring and often of profundity.

It is not presumptious that Ginsberg dedicates this book to Walt Whitman. Whitman if he were writing today might well dedicate a current book to Allen Ginsberg. They are closely linked in their love of the land and its people, in their power and in their dreams.

Ginsberg's is the voice of young America. He is, however, getting old. And the old man with the voice of young America speaks with an ancient wisdom and a sure sense of poetry and the cadence of words.

Richard Howard in his book "Alone with America" writes, "The characteristic Ginsberg product nowadays, when he is to be found at any point in the world, is the transit poem in which 'new sentences spring forth out of the scene to describe spontaneous forms of time. . ."

One evening in the hot sulphur baths at Esalen, I said to a face resting on a wiry greying beard spread like elbows on the steaming water, "Aren't you Arthur Ginsberg?"

"Allen," he said gently, and even before I had time to be embarrassed he asked me about myself. He was famous, had lived in India, had traveled all over the land and the world. We talked a long time. He was intersted in everything I had done, was doing; we talked only about me.

As we parted, I asked if he knew of a place to live in Big Sur. "I'm living in the woods," he said, "in a sleeping bag."

That was in May 1971 when he was writing "Bixby Canyon Ocean Path Word Breeze" contained in this collection.

Gotham Book has published the Bixby poem in hard cover; on it is Emil White's lovely painting of Bixby Bridge.

ALLEN GINSBURG
Voice of the young

Whether solidly or flexibly sheathed, this is hard-core Americana, and its author, Allen Ginsberg, is an important American poet.

MEMOIR OF A REVOLUTIONARY by Milovan Djilas; Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc., 390 pages, $12. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

Revolutionaries take themselves far too seriously; and Communist revolutionaries, because they are dogmatic and inflexible, especially lack humor and color, and are therefore very boring (except to another Communist revolutionary).

Some of these critical comments apply to Milovan Djilas and his writings, but he was to be the disciple of a more enlightened form of Communism and in the future he was to "jump the wall" and end party affiliations.

He came from Montenegro. Slight and poor of health, he nevertheless proved to be a tough guerrilla fighter. And he was deadly serious. In 1929 at 17 he entered the University of Belgrade — a Montenegran intellectual of peasant stock who had never seen a train. The following year marked the beginning of the dictatorship of King Alexander Karadjordjevik which created the proper atmosphere for student movements, illegal organizations, and experiments in new ideologies. Endles discussions with fellow students and socialist leaders are a little hard to take, but the monotony is relieved by the fact that the students are gathered up in occasional police sweeps.

Djilas admits that in 1932 he was "very confused ideologically and politically," and devoted more time to his writings — poetry, essays, and social comments. He published with some success, but soon his gradual acceptance of Communism alienated him from the magazine for which he had been writing. Finally there was a total commitment to Communism: ". . .New ideas and even more the physical demands of the movement, made a claim on a man's physical and spiritual energies, and thereby erased all poetic passions, and any other feeling that might stand in the way of immediate revolutionary objectives. . ." But he did find time to fall in love and marry a comrade, Mitra Mitrovic.

MILOVAN DJILAS
Tough and serious

At the time of the Nazi invasion of his homeland, his iron determination and dedication helped sustain the partisan movement. He gained the admiration of Stalin as a "brilliant guerrilla leader;" and under Tito's leadership, became chief architect of the Communist revolution. The Yugoslav communists built an organization strong enough to resist Hitler's Germany and later to follow an independent route and spur Stalin's Russia.

The western allies found Djilas arrogant and unfriendly in his dedication, to the embarrassment of Tito. But Djilas became a great admirer of the United States and its economic and industrial know-how, and urged an acceptance among his associates of a British style of Socialism. Djilas helped to mold minds, while others organized cadres. All the while he maintained a special "father and son" relationship with Tito.

This book is the second volume of the life story of Djilas that began with "Land Without Justice." What is to come is the fall from power, from the vice-presidency, from the head of the Politburo, to resignation from the party. The present volume, however, is a serious chronicle of the struggles and triumphs of a dedicated revolutionary who never stagnated and never allowed hallowed dogmas to cloud his enterprise and intellect. It is written with little humor and makes too many assumptions, but taken as a whole it is good contemporary history.

Israel Thwarts Another Writer

BRIDE OF ISRAEL, MY LOVE by Richard Llewellyn, Doubleday, 297 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

The confusions of modern Israel have a fascination for writers. Latest victim of the compulsion to explain this contradictory land is Richard Llewellyn, author of the memorable "How Green Was My Valley."

But it is a long way from Wales to Israel, and Llewellyn should have stayed home.

His protagonist is a highly trained technician, a refugee from modern science. Heroines include a once-famous opera singer; the daughter of a famous rabbi; and various other females endowed with long, slim, silken legs.

The technician falls in and out of love, in and out of bed, builds a plant in the desert, works with Palestinians, is bombed, nearly killed, suffers because he is part-Jewish, cannot decide to become a convert, and cannot speak Hebrew. The plot consists of these adventures, plus his attempt to "find himself."

The hero tells his own story, in stream-of-consciousness style, without any aid from old-fashioned quotation marks — though he is given to long conversations that seem to be meant to advance the plot and let the reader know what is happening.

The good thing in this book is Llewellyn's lyricism which, while it echoes the King James version, os worth reading. For example, he writes, "The trees up there blazed little flames of green and blue shadow poured down to the violet of the valley, and a stream, silver, frothed over the waterfall to the fish ponds still pink in the dawn."

Richard Llewellyn is a gifted author who has written excellent novels. This is not one of them.

Different Look

TERRACED HELL by Tetsuro Ogawa; Tuttle., 220 pages, $7.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The stories of the Bataan Death March and of the hopeless defense of Corregidor and the Bataan Peninsula by American and Filipino troops have been told many times. "Terraced Hell" tells a different story — that of the flight and defeat of the Japanese after MacArthur's army returned to Luzon.

Tetsuro Ogawa was a civilian employee with the Japanese army. His personal feelings — his desire to surrender vs. his entrenched belief that to do so would be dishonorable — are intertwined with the story of the futile and foolish movements of the remnants of that army after it was cut off by the advancing Americans in the closing months of World War II.

Ogawa was his own translator, and his English is not free of flaws, but his book is interesting — a different look at World War II in the Philippines.

Books For The Shelves Of China

The World Book Encyclopedia has shipped six sets of its 1973 edition to China — believed to be the first English language encyclopedia donated to China since President Richard M. Nixon visited China in February, 1972.

William T. Branham, chairman of Field Enterprises Educational Corp., publishers of the World Book, said one set was for Peking University, and the others were for major Chinese government agencies.

ALL THE RAGE with kids of all ages in room decor are traffic signs. And when combined with a bed fashioned in the likeness of a racing car, you have a setting that will delight the active small boy. Dad can build the whole kit and kaboodle himself — perhaps with a bit of help from Junior — with the guidance of some Steve Ellingson patterns. Order from Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, as follows: No. 520, all five traffic signs, $1; No. 502, the racing car bed, $2; No. 435, the trestle desk, $1. Make out your check to Steve Ellingson. And include your zip code number to speed delivery. The signs are colorful, authentic duplicates of the real thing. They can be easily sawed out from quarter-inch plywood or hardboard. And even if you don't own a saw, a lumberyard or cabinet shop will no doubt do the job for you. The complete instructions on paints and color schemes are also included — for instance the STOP sign comes out a fire engine red and white, the YIELD sign the prescribed yellow and black. Nor are the bed and desk beyond the capabilities of the average home handyman. Again, it is just a matter of following clear, complete directions.

A Garden View Through Your Picture Window—

Bringing the beauty of blooming plants indoors for ll seasons also can solve the problem of a picture window without a view, simply by adding a lean-to conservatory.

Choosing an area with a large window or a door for this addition also reduces the amount of framing that has to be removed.

A prefabricated lean-to greenhouse can be added by the handyman, or a simple frame of four-by-four and two-by-four-inch western wood will hold double-pane wood windows. In mild climates, such as ours in Marin, single pane glass will do.

Platforms of two-by-four inch western wood, slightly spaced for ventilation, allow variety in arrangements, while other plants may be hung from the four-by-four-inch window supports.

Folding French doors may be added for better temperature and humidity control. A floor sloped to an inconspicuous drain makes misting and watering of plants easier.

TULIPS AND DAFFODILS

Fill the heart with the magic of tulips
Whose petals, sexy satin-textured,

And that of voluptuous butter-yellow daffodils,
Heads hanging demurely,

Causing the most casual admirer to
Surrender with love.

DEPENDENCE ON DESIGN

The quality of kindness in your voice
is like the benediction of a priest:

it guides me when decision calls for choice,
it blesses me like grace before a feast.

The love your eyes communicate so well,
more eloquent than any spoken vow

brings peace, when my vindictive thoughts rebel against injustices that laws allow.

I need the staying power of your sense
when heart and reason quarrel in my thought.

Your wisdom knows the rhyme of recompense,
a gift you give, unbeggared and unbought.

Whatever imprint my life leaves on earth
is but a stencil of your patterned worth.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Give Teens Free Hand In Room

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Would you agree that the most crucial years in a youngster's life are between ages 14 and 19? They're not the important formative years, but they are the years of awareness.

Suddenly a 14-year-old girl feels perfectly confident about telling her mother that a bedroom decorating job is "tacky." Or she'll advise her youngish grandfather that trousers without cuffs are "square."

She, and her male contemporary, are turned-on and tuned-in to just about everything serious and frivolous.

IT'S AN IMPORTANT time for privacy at home, too. Yet not every family can provide an area of isolation. The best most families can afford is a shared space with another sister or a nine by 12 foot bedroom for a lone daughter.

It could be the time to capture her fancy by encouraging a personal decorating project. And if there is a brother in the family, perhaps he might help with some woodworking projects for his sister's room.

The bedroom shown today is bright, cheerful space, shared by two teen-age girls.

THE ROOM WAS small, so they decided to push their twin beds together to be more like the king-size bed in their parents' room. Instead of an ordinary headboard, they found a pair of new ideas by Bassett Furniture. These are storage headboards and they come 42 inches wide by 14 inches deep by 30 inches high. And the top lifts up to reveal a storage bin. They come in great colors — real red, oyster white and ultramarine blue — that inspire a fun red-white-and-blue color scheme.

Keyed to the headboard is a line of storage components made by the same company. These combine storage hutches that sit atop drawer units, that also sit atop other drawer units. The frames can be ordered in one color, the drawer fronts in another.

The two young designers went for the white frames with brilliant blue drawers.

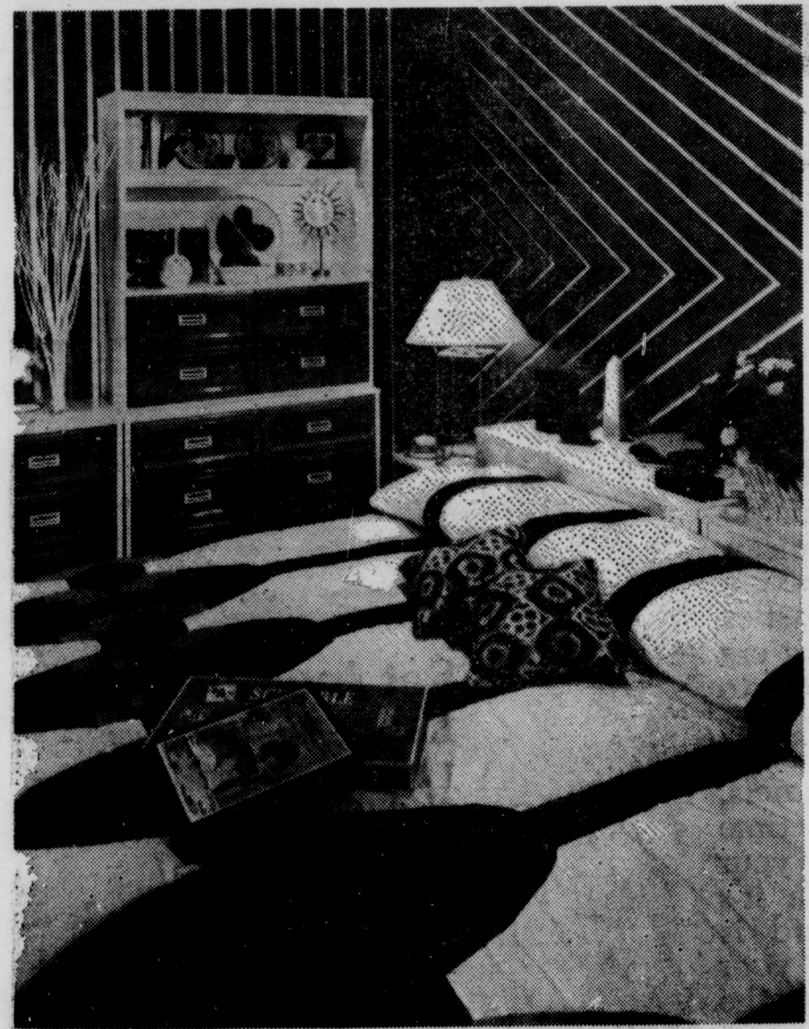
THEIR BROTHER helped design the wall treatment.

They wanted to conceal the bad plaster, so decided to copy a magazine idea using slats of wood both vertically and in herringbone pattern. They painted the slats bright blue before nailing them to the wall, then added white tape between the slats for a really slick look.

They could have painted the wall white before they added the slats, but their parents let them go all the way with their own ideas.

The result is a charmer.

The girls can flake out on the big bed during the day or when friends visit and they want to be alone to gossip or change hair styles. And each girl takes on room-keeping chores for a week at a time, adding fresh flowers or interesting dried leaves when the mood strikes them. And there are drawers aplenty for two sets of whatever it is young girls accumulate!



FROM THE mid-teens to the late-teens — that's the time when the offspring know all the answers, including matters of interior decoration. So why not give them a free hand in decorating their own room. They might turn out something surprisingly good, as did two young sisters with this room featuring Bassett's Fantazz line in a merry blending of red, white and blue finishes.

Don't Let The Drain Get Clogged

Plumbers get more calls to unplug drains and clogged water closets than for any other service. Yet most such stoppages can be avoided with just a little care.

For example, if you pour a kettle of boiling water down the kitchen sink every day, this will help to keep the drain clear. Large food particles, coffee grounds and grease should never be washed down the drain.

In the bathroom, stoppages in the water closet are the most frequent problem. The water closet never should be used to dispose of trash. And if the lid is kept closed, the chances of anything's falling in accidently are lessened.

A booklet that contains dozens of tips on plumbing maintenance is available for 25 cents and a six-cent stamp. Write to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60601.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Give Teens Free Hand In Room

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Would you agree that the most crucial years in a youngster's life are between ages 14 and 19? They're not the important formative years, but they are the years of awareness.

Suddenly a 14-year-old girl feels perfectly confident about telling her mother that a bedroom decorating job is "tacky." Or she'll advise her youngish grandfather that trousers without cuffs are "square."

She, and her male contemporary, are turned-on and tuned-in to just about everything serious and frivolous.

IT'S AN IMPORTANT time for privacy at home, too. Yet not every family can provide an area of isolation. The best most families can afford is a shared space with another sister or a nine by 12 foot bedroom for a lone daughter.

It could be the time to capture her fancy by encouraging a personal decorating project. And if there is a brother in the family, perhaps he might help with some woodworking projects for his sister's room.

The bedroom shown today is bright, cheerful space, shared by two teen-age girls.

THE ROOM WAS small, so they decided to push their twin beds together to be more like the king-size bed in their parents' room. Instead of an ordinary headboard, they found a pair of new ideas by Bassett Furniture. These are storage headboards and they come 42 inches wide by 14 inches deep by 30 inches high. And the top lifts up to reveal a storage bin. They come in great colors — real red, oyster white and ultramarine blue — that inspire a fun red-white-and-blue color scheme.

Keyed to the headboard is a line of storage components made by the same company. These combine storage hutches that sit atop drawer units, that also sit atop other drawer units. The frames can be ordered in one color, the drawer fronts in another.

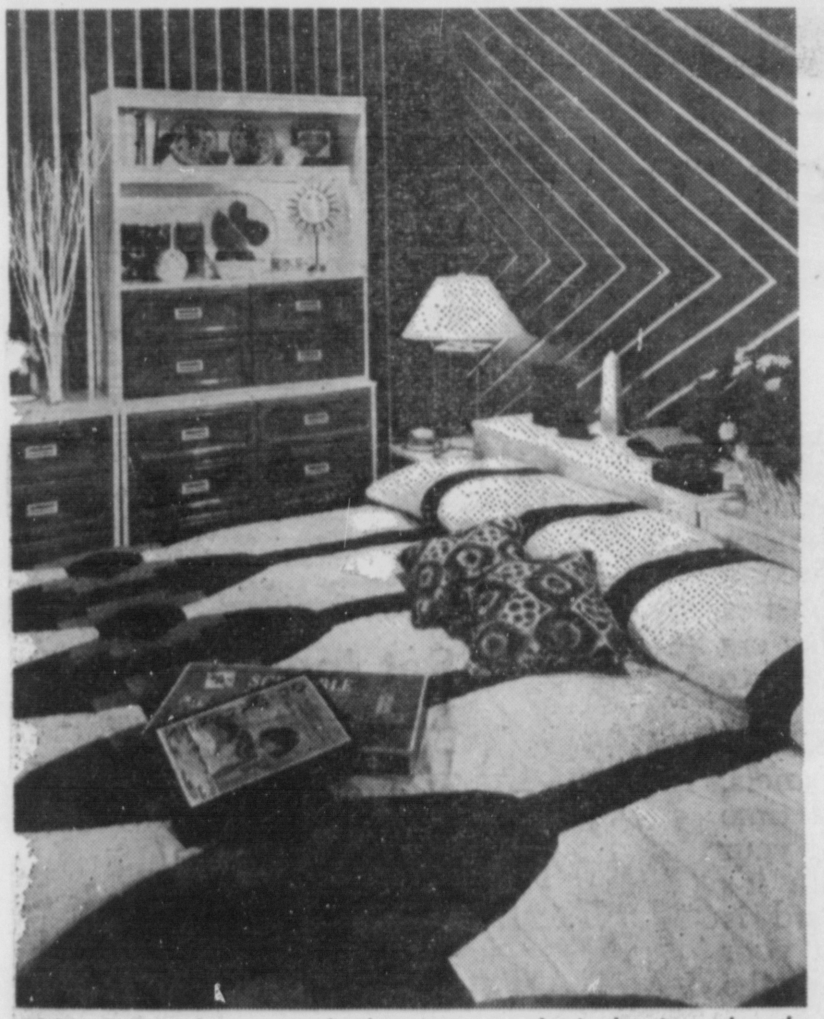
The two young designers went for the white frames with brilliant blue drawers.

THEIR BROTHER helped design the wall treatment.

They wanted to conceal the bad plaster, so decided to copy a magazine idea using slats of wood both vertically and in herringbone pattern. They painted the slats bright blue before nailing them to the wall, then added white tape between the slats for a really slick look. They could have painted the wall white before they added the slats, but their parents let them go all the way with their own ideas.

The result is a charmer.

The girls can flake out on the big bed during the day or when friends visit and they want to be alone to gossip or change hair styles. And each girl takes on room-keeping chores for a week at a time, adding fresh flowers or interesting dried leaves when the mood strikes them. And there are drawers aplenty for two sets of whatever it is young girls accumulate!



FROM THE mid-teens to the late-teens — that's the time when the offspring know all the answers, including matters of interior decoration. So why not give them a free hand in decorating their own room. They might turn out something surprisingly good, as did two young sisters with this room featuring Bassett's Fantazz line in a merry blending of red, white and blue finishes.

Don't Let The Drain Get Clogged

Plumbers get more calls to unplug drains and clogged water closets than for any other service. Yet most such stoppages can be avoided with just a little care.

For example, if you pour a kettle of boiling water down the kitchen sink every day, this will help to keep the drain clear. Large food particles, coffee grounds and grease should never be washed down the drain.

In the bathroom, stoppages in the water closet are the most frequent problem. The water closet never should be used to dispose of trash. And if the lid is kept closed, the chances of anything's falling in accidently are lessened.

A booklet that contains dozens of tips on plumbing maintenance is available for 25 cents and a six-cent stamp. Write to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60601.

Getting The Best Results With Varnish

The Handyman's Pages

By ANDY LANG

Anyone who has recently finished or refinished furniture with varnish has used a finishing material with a basic difference between it and the varnish used by his grandfather.

Modern varnishes contain synthetic resins as opposed to the natural resins used many years ago. While there is some difference of opinion among old-timers as to the superiority of one over the other, manufacturers say that the modern product can be applied easier and produces a better finish, a claim with which I am inclined to agree.

IF IT IS MORE durable, as they also say, it must have an amazing longevity and stability, since furniture pieces I varnished more than 30 years ago are still in prime condition.

Because there are different kinds of synthetic resins with different kinds of characteristics, the label on the can you purchase should be read carefully, not only to determine whether it will produce the result you wish to achieve but to guide you in its usage to obtain maximum effectiveness.

Dust is the big enemy of varnish.

NOT ONLY SHOULD the object being finished be cleaned thoroughly just before the varnishing, but the application should be done in a room or area that is as dust-free as possible. It also is important that the clothes of the user be free of lint and dust. And no one should go in and out of the room while the varnish is drying.

No matter how careful you think you have been, every so often while you are working, you will notice a piece of dust settle in the wet varnish. The tip of a very fine small brush or a toothpick can be used to lift up the speck of dust the moment you notice it. The tiny indentation in the surface will be quickly closed up by the surrounding varnish.

Do not shake or stir the varnish, otherwise air bubbles that form will be transferred to the work.

THE VARNISH should be applied by brush in a free, flowing motion — first with the grain, then immediately across the grain. Then, using the same brush without dipping it in the varnish again, return to the with-the-grain strokes. On this third movement with what will now be a nearly dry brush, use light strokes with only the tips of the bristles. Known as tipping, this procedure smooths out irregularities.

Turn the piece of furniture as many times as possible so that you are working on a horizontal surface. This isn't always possible, so when it isn't, work extra carefully to avoid dripping.

(Varnishing, lacquering, shellacking and other methods of finishing wood are detailed in Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 30 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, Post Office Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743.)

HERE an L-shaped divider of one-by-four-inch western wood boards on a frame of two-by-fours sets off an entry area for greeting guests and for the hanging of coats.

HIDDEN ENTRANCES TO YOUR HOME?

A home anywhere in Marin County might have several hidden entrances and some very unwanted intruders. Termites!

Mud tubes like those shown above are built by subterranean termites to sneak into Marin's nicest homes. Termites invite themselves into both new and old homes. And contrary to popular belief, they love dining at homes built on concrete-slab floors (especially ones with radiant heat). In fact, 60% of all Marin homes have termites present right now.

Once inside, the termites eat their unsuspecting hosts out of house and home. Literally.

Termites eat wood. And since these extremely social insects live in giant nests with up to 250,000 relatives, having the family up to dinner can be a very expensive proposition.

The termite workers shuttle up and down constantly, carrying bits of wood back to the nest. But they are masters at keeping their activity hidden. They work inside of walls and floors, then span open spaces with mud tubes. So a considerable portion of your house can be out to lunch before you know it!

Every homeowner in Marin should check regularly for termite mud tubes around his foundation, post footings, garage, fences, and particularly in winter, the hot water heater and furnace areas. If tubes are found, call Hinkley & Gordon immediately.

Hinkley & Gordon is a state-licensed structural pest control company. For two generations, we've been providing Marin's most expert and thorough pest control services.

The cost of a Hinkley & Gordon inspection is just $35 for the average Marin home. And it certainly beats allowing a sneak attack on your home investment.

ALL THE RAGE with kids of all ages in room decor are traffic signs. And when combined with a bed fashioned in the likeness of a racing car, you have a setting that will delight the active small boy. Dad can build the whole kit and kaboodle himself — perhaps with a bit of help from Junior — with the guidance of some Steve Ellingson patterns. Order from Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, as follows: No. 520, all five traffic signs, $1; No. 502, the racing car bed, $2; No. 435, the trestle desk, $1. Make out your check to Steve Ellingson. And include your zip code number to speed delivery. The signs are colorful, authentic duplicates of the real thing. They can be easily sawed out from quarter-inch plywood or hardboard. And even if you don't own a saw, a lumberyard or cabinet shop will no doubt do the job for you. The complete instructions on paints and color schemes are also included — for instance the STOP sign comes out a fire engine red and white, the YIELD sign the prescribed yellow and black. Nor are the bed and desk beyond the capabilities of the average home handyman. Again, it is just a matter of following clear, complete directions.

A Garden View Through Your Picture Window—

Bringing the beauty of blooming plants indoors for ll seasons also can solve the problem of a picture window without a view, simply by adding a lean-to conservatory.

Choosing an area with a large window or a door for this addition also reduces the amount of framing that has to be removed.

A prefabricated lean-to greenhouse can be added by the handyman, or a simple frame of four-by-four and two-by-four-inch western wood will hold double-pane wood windows. In mild climates, such as ours in Marin, single pane glass will do.

Platforms of two-by-four inch western wood, slightly spaced for ventilation, allow variety in arrangements, while other plants may be hung from the four-by-four-inch window supports.

Folding French doors may be added for better temperature and humidity control. A floor sloped to an inconspicuous drain makes misting and watering of plants easier.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Give Teens Free Hand In Room

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Would you agree that the most crucial years in a youngster's life are between ages 14 and 19? They're not the important formative years, but they are the years of awareness.

Suddenly a 14-year-old girl feels perfectly confident about telling her mother that a bedroom decorating job is "tacky." Or she'll advise her youngish grandfather that trousers without cuffs are "square."

She, and her male contemporary, are turned-on and tuned-in to just about everything serious and frivolous.

IT'S AN IMPORTANT time for privacy at home, too. Yet not every family can provide an area of isolation. The best most families can afford is a shared space with another sister or a nine by 12 foot bedroom for a lone daughter.

It could be the time to capture her fancy by encouraging a personal decorating project. And if there is a brother in the family, perhaps he might help with some woodworking projects for his sister's room.

The bedroom shown today is bright, cheerful space, shared by two teen-age girls.

THE ROOM WAS small, so they decided to push their twin beds together to be more like the king-size bed in their parents' room. Instead of an ordinary headboard, they found a pair of new ideas by Bassett Furniture. These are storage headboards and they come 42 inches wide by 14 inches deep by 30 inches high. And the top lifts up to reveal a storage bin. They come in great colors — real red, oyster white and ultramarine blue — that inspire a fun red-white-and-blue color scheme.

Keyed to the headboard is a line of storage components made by the same company. These combine storage hutches that sit atop drawer units, that also sit atop other drawer units. The frames can be ordered in one color, the drawer fronts in another.

The two young designers went for the white frames with brilliant blue drawers.

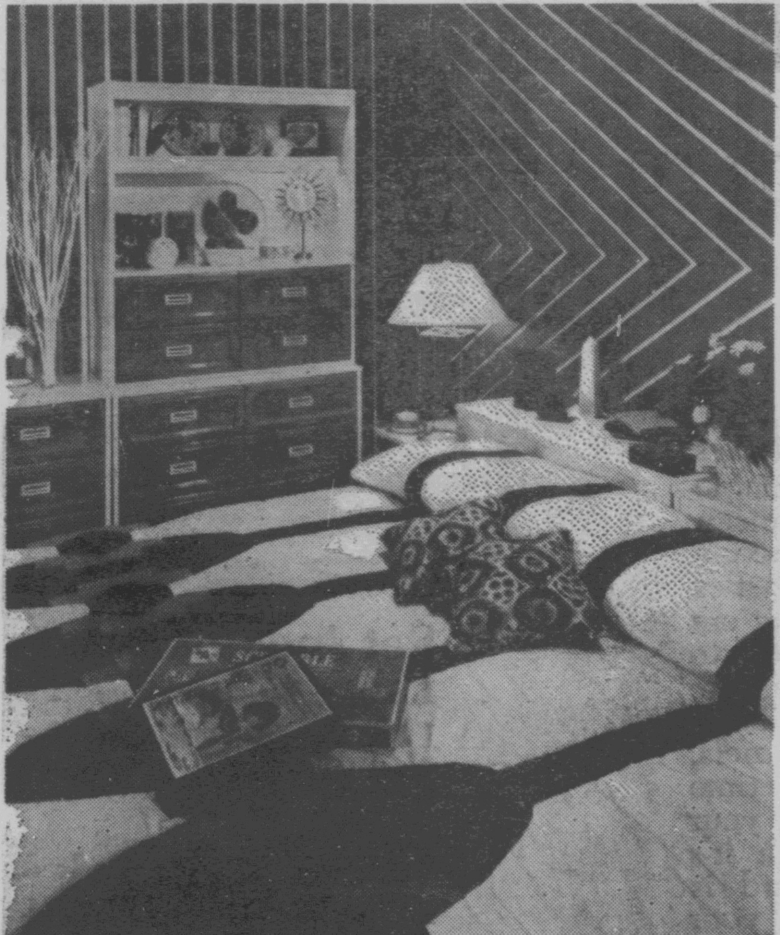
THEIR BROTHER helped design the wall treatment.

They wanted to conceal the bad plaster, so decided to copy a magazine idea using slats of wood both vertically and in herringbone pattern. They painted the slats bright blue before nailing them to the wall, then added white tape between the slats for a really slick look.

They could have painted the wall white before they added the slats, but their parents let them go all the way with their own ideas.

The result is a charmer.

The girls can flake out on the big bed during the day or when friends visit and they want to be alone to gossip or change hair styles. And each girl takes on room-keeping chores for a week at a time, adding fresh flowers or interesting dried leaves when the mood strikes them. And there are drawers aplenty for two sets of whatever it is young girls accumulate!



FROM THE mid-teens to the late-teens — that's the time when the offspring know all the answers, including matters of interior decoration. So why not give them a free hand in decorating their own room. They might turn out something surprisingly good, as did two young sisters with this room featuring Bassett's Fantazz line in a merry blending of red, white and blue finishes.

Don't Let The Drain Get Clogged

Plumbers get more calls to unplug drains and clogged water closets than for any other service. Yet most such stoppages can be avoided with just a little care.

For example, if you pour a kettle of boiling water down the kitchen sink every day, this will help to keep the drain clear. Large food particles, coffee grounds and grease should never be washed down the drain.

In the bathroom, stoppages in the water closet are the most frequent problem. The water closet never should be used to dispose of trash. And if the lid is kept closed, the chances of anything's falling in accidently are lessened.

A booklet that contains dozens of tips on plumbing maintenance is available for 25 cents and a six-cent stamp. Write to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60601.

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

"The Wonderful World of Disney" is set for yet another season on NBC. This network has fielded a weekly Disney program since September, 1961. The late Walt Disney first went into television in 1954, and the ABC network carried his shows for six years.

Julie Harris went right from the closing of her Broadway engagement in "The Last of Mrs. Lincoln" to filming of the pilot production of a projected video series, "Thicker than Water," designated for ABC airing. The star has done many television dramas but never a series. This one is adapted to American tastes from the successful British series of a same name. It deals with a brother and sister of conflicting ways of life who jointly inherit a factory.

Americans in leading roles in the taped video version of the "Applause" stage musical made in England, besides star Lauren Bacall, are Penny Fuller, Larry Hagman and Robert Mandan. Miss Fuller and Mandan repeat the roles they created in the original New York stage version. NBC presents the television show on March 15.

ABC will present two Shakespearean productions in the 1973-74 season. Laurence Olivier and his wife, Joan Plowright, will appear in "The Merchant of Venice," playing Shylock and Portia, and the other attraction will be the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of "Anthony and Cleopatra."

Rod Serling's television drama, "A Storm in Summer," an award-winning production in 1970, has been expanded by the author into a stage work that recently had its first presentation in San Diego.

LAUREN BACALL re-creates her Tony Award-winning role in the Broadway musical hit, "Applause," for television Thursday at 9 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10. Above, she throws herself into the spirited discotheque production number of "But Alive."

DICK VAN DYKE has the role of a silent film comedian, with Michele as his leading lady, in the motion picture, "The Comic," to be aired Tuesday at 8 p.m. on Channel 2.

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

"The Wonderful World of Disney" is set for yet another season on NBC. This network has fielded a weekly Disney program since September, 1961. The late Walt Disney first went into television in 1954, and the ABC network carried his shows for six years.

Julie Harris went right from the closing of her Broadway engagement in "The Last of Mrs. Lincoln" to filming of the pilot production of a projected video series, "Thicker than Water," designated for ABC airing. The star has done many television dramas but never a series. This one is adapted to American tastes from the successful British series of a same name. It deals with a brother and sister of conflicting ways of life who jointly inherit a factory.

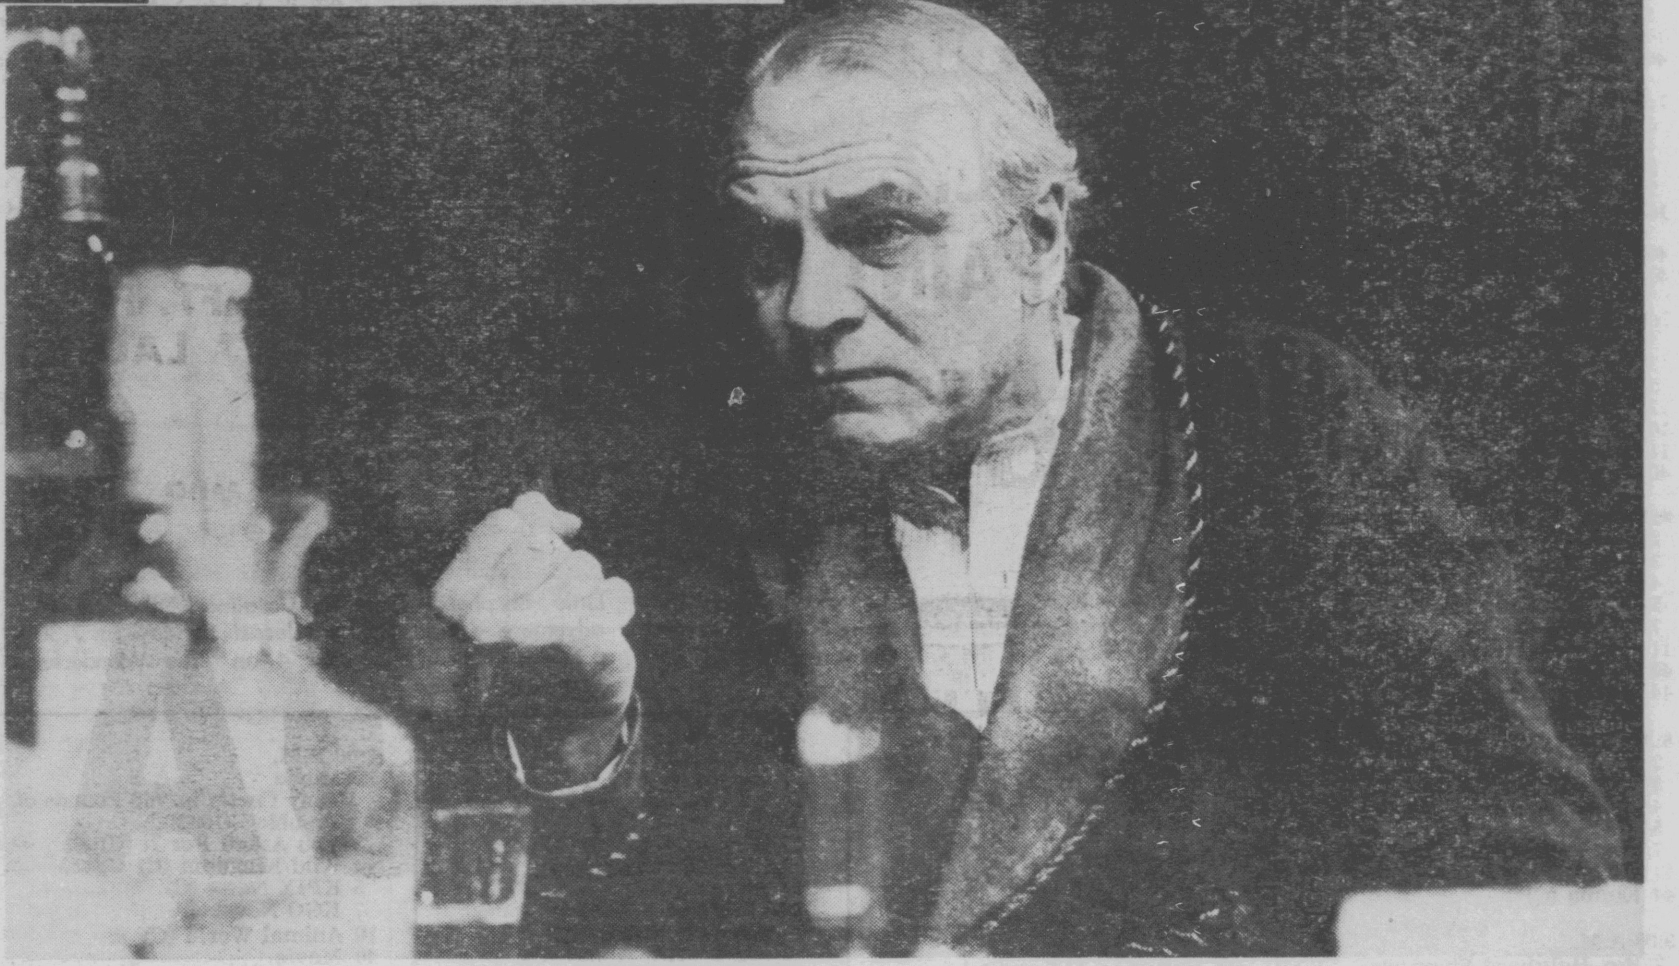
Americans in leading roles in the taped video version of the "Applause" stage musical made in England, besides star Lauren Bacall, are Penny Fuller, Larry Hagman and Robert Mandan. Miss Fuller and Mandan repeat the roles they created in the original New York stage version. NBC presents the television show on March 15.

ABC will present two Shakespearean productions in the 1973-74 season. Laurence Olivier and his wife, Joan Plowright, will appear in "The Merchant of Venice," playing Shylock and Portia, and the other attraction will be the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of "Anthony and Cleopatra."

Rod Serling's television drama, "A Storm in Summer," an award-winning production in 1970, has been expanded by the author into a stage work that recently had its first presentation in San Diego.

Marin MAGAZINE

Weekly TV Log



SIR LAURENCE OLIVIER sometimes called the greatest living actor of the English-speaking theater, makes a rare television appearance in the role of James Tyrone in Eugene O'Neill's autobiographical classic, "Long Day's Journey Into Night," tonight at 8 o'clock on Channels 7 and 11. Also in the cast for the two-hour British National Theater production, much praised on the London stage are Denis Quilley as Jamie, Constance Cummings as his mother and Ronald Pickup as Edmund.

SHARI LEWIS and Hush Puppy are the stars of a mixed cast of live actors and puppets that will entertain the children next Saturday on NBC-TV (Channels 3 and 4) in "A Picture Of US," as the concluding presentation of the season for the daytime "NBC Children's Theater."

'Electric Company' Audience Increases

"The Electric Company," the Children's Television Workshop's experimental series to help teach basic reading skills, is being seen by nearly six million children in the U.S., an audience that is 50 per cent above that for 1971-72, the program's first season.

Now, one-third of all U.S. grade schools are using the daily program.

The Flying Dutchman On Records Again—From The Bayreuth Festival

By WILLIAM LANDREY

The legend of the Flying Dutchman sailed from the mists of man's imagination into the music of Richard Wagner.

Wagner, in his 20s and still married to his first wife, Minna, used and transformed the story of the captain and ship doomed to sail on forever into his first viable opera.

It was still an Italianate opera, but it was his first use of folk myth that he was never to abandon in his later great musical dramas.

It was also the beginning of his obsession for unconsummated love, in his work, and sometimes in life. The heroine, whose name was changed from Minna to Senta, redeems the doomed Dutchman with her death — death and transfiguration, another Wagnerian theme.

But the Dutchman is not a beginner's opera but a good, middle work with fine tunes, choruses and arias. It is just that Wagner went on from there to another thing.

Tha latest Dutchman on records is the recording of the 1971 Bayreuth Festival production by Karl Bohm recently issued by Deutsche Grammophon (2720 052 - three records).

Thomas Stewart as "Der Hollander" and Gwyneth Jones as Senta bring sensitive, well sung performances to the production. Karl Ridderbush is good as Senta's father, and Hermin Esser as Erik, although his voice occasionally sounds strained. In all, an excellent performance.

THE REVIVAL OF the harpsichord continues apace in public appreciation, and one of the better practitioners is Igor Kipnis.

Several months ago, Kipnis had an album of French, Italian and Spanish harpsichord music issued by Columbia. Now comes two more records by Angel.

The French Harpsichord (S-36054) comprises music of the French baroque composers Rameau and Dandrieu. The German Harpsichord (S-36055) is Bach.

Not the least interesting part of Kipnis' fine performances are the instruments he uses, either reproduction of instruments of the periods and nations concerned or patterned after them.

SHARI LEWIS and Hush Puppy are the stars of a mixed cast of live actors and puppets that will entertain the children next Saturday on NBC-TV (Channels 3 and 4) in "A Picture Of US," as the concluding presentation of the season for the daytime "NBC Children's Theater."

'Electric Company' Audience Increases

"The Electric Company," the Children's Television Workshop's experimental series to help teach basic reading skills, is being seen by nearly six million children in the U.S., an audience that is 50 per cent above that for 1971-72, the program's first season.

Now, one-third of all U.S. grade schools are using the daily program.

The Flying Dutchman On Records Again—From The Bayreuth Festival

By WILLIAM LANDREY

The legend of the Flying Dutchman sailed from the mists of man's imagination into the music of Richard Wagner.

Wagner, in his 20s and still married to his first wife, Minna, used and transformed the story of the captain and ship doomed to sail on forever into his first viable opera.

It was still an Italianate opera, but it was his first use of folk myth that he was never to abandon in his later great musical dramas.

It was also the beginning of his obsession for unconsummated love, in his work, and sometimes in life. The heroine, whose name was changed from Minna to Senta, redeems the doomed Dutchman with her death — death and transfiguration, another Wagnerian theme.

But the Dutchman is not a beginner's opera but a good, middle work with fine tunes, choruses and arias. It is just that Wagner went on from there to another thing.

Tha latest Dutchman on records is the recording of the 1971 Bayreuth Festival production by Karl Bohm recently issued by Deutsche Grammophon (2720 052 - three records).

Thomas Stewart as "Der Hollander" and Gwyneth Jones as Senta bring sensitive, well sung performances to the production. Karl Ridderbush is good as Senta's father, and Hermin Esser as Erik, although his voice occasionally sounds strained. In all, an excellent performance.

THE REVIVAL OF the harpsichord continues apace in public appreciation, and one of the better practitioners is Igor Kipnis.

Several months ago, Kipnis had an album of French, Italian and Spanish harpsichord music issued by Columbia. Now comes two more records by Angel.

The French Harpsichord (S-36054) comprises music of the French baroque composers Rameau and Dandrieu. The German Harpsichord (S-36055) is Bach.

Not the least interesting part of Kipnis' fine performances are the instruments he uses, either reproduction of instruments of the periods and nations concerned or patterned after them.

LAUREN BACALL re-creates her Tony Award-winning role in the Broadway musical hit, "Applause," for television Thursday at 9 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10. Above, she throws herself into the spirited discotheque production number of "But Alive."

DICK VAN DYKE has the role of a silent film comedian, with Michele as his leading lady, in the motion picture, "The Comic," to be aired Tuesday at 8 p.m. on Channel 2.

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

"The Wonderful World of Disney" is set for yet another season on NBC. This network has fielded a weekly Disney program since September, 1961. The late Walt Disney first went into television in 1954, and the ABC network carried his shows for six years.

Julie Harris went right from the closing of her Broadway engagement in "The Last of Mrs. Lincoln" to filming of the pilot production of a projected video series, "Thicker than Water," designated for ABC airing. The star has done many television dramas but never a series. This one is adapted to American tastes from the successful British series of a same name. It deals with a brother and sister of conflicting ways of life who jointly inherit a factory.

Americans in leading roles in the taped video version of the "Applause" stage musical made in England, besides star Lauren Bacall, are Penny Fuller, Larry Hagman and Robert Mandan. Miss Fuller and Mandan repeat the roles they created in the original New York stage version. NBC presents the television show on March 15.

ABC will present two Shakespearean productions in the 1973-74 season. Laurence Olivier and his wife, Joan Plowright, will appear in "The Merchant of Venice," playing Shylock and Portia, and the other attraction will be the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of "Anthony and Cleopatra."

Rod Serling's television drama, "A Storm in Summer," an award-winning production in 1970, has been expanded by the author into a stage work that recently had its first presentation in San Diego.

'Electric Company' Audience Increases

"The Electric Company," the Children's Television Workshop's experimental series to help teach basic reading skills, is being seen by nearly six million children in the U.S., an audience that is 50 per cent above that for 1971-72, the program's first season.

Now, one-third of all U.S. grade schools are using the daily program.

SHARI LEWIS and Hush Puppy are the stars of a mixed cast of live actors and puppets that will entertain the children next Saturday on NBC-TV (Channels 3 and 4) in "A Picture Of US," as the concluding presentation of the season for the daytime "NBC Children's Theater."

The Flying Dutchman On Records Again—From The Bayreuth Festival

By WILLIAM LANDREY

The legend of the Flying Dutchman sailed from the mists of man's imagination into the music of Richard Wagner.

Wagner, in his 20s and still married to his first wife, Minna, used and transformed the story of the captain and ship doomed to sail on forever into his first viable opera.

It was still an Italianate opera, but it was his first use of folk myth that he was never to abandon in his later great musical dramas.

It was also the beginning of his obsession for unconsummated love, in his work, and sometimes in life. The heroine, whose name was changed from Minna to Senta, redeems the doomed Dutchman with her death — death and transfiguration, another Wagnerian theme.

But the Dutchman is not a beginner's opera but a good, middle work with fine tunes, choruses and arias. It is just that Wagner went on from there to another thing.

Tha latest Dutchman on records is the recording of the 1971 Bayreuth Festival production by Karl Bohm recently issued by Deutsche Grammophon (2720 052 - three records).

Thomas Stewart as "Der Hollander" and Gwyneth Jones as Senta bring sensitive, well sung performances to the production. Karl Ridderbush is good as Senta's father, and Hermin Esser as Erik, although his voice occasionally sounds strained. In all, an excellent performance.

THE REVIVAL OF the harpsichord continues apace in public appreciation, and one of the better practitioners is Igor Kipnis.

Several months ago, Kipnis had an album of French, Italian and Spanish harpsichord music issued by Columbia. Now comes two more records by Angel.

The French Harpsichord (S-36054) comprises music of the French baroque composers Rameau and Dandrieu. The German Harpsichord (S-36055) is Bach.

Not the least interesting part of Kipnis' fine performances are the instruments he uses, either reproduction of instruments of the periods and nations concerned or patterned after them.
